The plant trade is just beginning and promises to be extra good. The war seems to have raised the patriotic feeling and we anticipate a big trade for Memorial Day. Wherever a brave delender of his country lies under the sod, loving hands will decorate, unless he lies in an unknown grave.

One of the large grocery stores has been selling flowers at unheard of prices. They are supplied by a local grower. This sale, however, has hardly caused a ripple of excitement in florist circles.

I have not learned of any one who contemplates building this summer. While some small additions may be made, the present high price of glass will probably cause the postponement of any extensive building.

While the trade here needs more good growers, and growers of specialties, if the houses now erected were to produce their full capacity we would not be so depend-ent on Chicago and Milwaukee for supplies. It seems hard to get the growers started right, as each one will persist in growing "a little of everything and not much of anything."

J. Austin Shaw, smiling, smooth and serene, dropped in on us a few days ago. His samples were O. K. and his words fell like manna on the Israelites. May his shadow never grow less. At the same time Mr. Il. J. Goemans, of Ghent, Belgium, Haarleni, Holland, and New York City, called and discoursed learnedly about azaleas, bulbs, and the like. Next came C. C. Pollworth, of the Cream City, followed by C. S. Ford, Jr., of New York, and D. L. Sloan, a California seedsman.

Wm. Scott, formerly propagator for May & Co., has gone to the Klondike. Christ Hansen has discontinued his city store. Felix.

New Haven, Conn.

The event of the week in local floral circles was the funeral of W. T. Townsend, Yale 1901, son of Judge W. K. Townsend, of the United States District Court, which took place Thursday afternoon. Mr. Townsend was killed on Monday by a fall from his bicycle. The easket was made of willow, lined throughout with Daybreak carnations. The sides out with Daybreak carnations. The sides were completely covered with Brides maid roses. Over the top was a frame cover of Bridesmaids presented by his classmates. All the roses were either pink or red. The decorations at the home of the young man were most elaborate, consisting of palms, ferns, festoons of asparagus with Daybreak carnations. Bridesmaid and Mateor roses. carnations, Bridesmaid and Meteor roses and many large bouquets of American Beauty and white lilac. Nearly all the florists of New Haven were heavily taxed for roses, etc., and many were obtained from New York. All the offerings were in clusters or large vases, designs being conspicuous by their absence. The grave was lined with hemlock boughs, and the mound was covered with roses.

W. F. Jost, the well known violet grower of East Haven, is recovering from a severe attack of peritonitis.

NEWPORT, KY .- Graf Bros. state that prices have taken a 10'; advance, and that both supply and demand are good. although business is not as brisk as it was last spring.

MEMORIAL DAY will be here in two weeks, and there will be a boom to supplies appropriate for the demands of the day.

Cycas Wreaths, Metal Designs in endless variety, Moss Wreaths, Doves, Inscriptions, Flower Holders for Cemeteries, Immortelles, Cape Flowers, Bas= kets and Sheaves.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co.,

50-52-54-56 N. Fourth St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

AND STEFFENS BROS.

Stiff, wiry stems. Are all the rage.

Box of 5000, $5.00. Less quantity at $1.25 per 1000. ....ADDRESS....

HARLAN P. KELSEY, 1150 Tremont Bldg., - BOSTON, MASS.

Galax Leaves, Cut Palm Leaves, bouquet green, Moss (sphaguum and green), Laurel Roping, Xmas Trees; everything in the green line always in stock at

H. E. HARTFORD'S, 18 Chapman Place.

Have You Seen Our Agent? A Complete

Catalogue for Florists. Send for One.

ELLIS & POLLWORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Exclusive Importers and Manufacturers of....

Florists' Supplies

PHILADELPHIA, PA. 25 N. 4th Street, -

Surplus Stock

Can be disposed of by advertising. Try it .....

This Size "Ad." Costs Only $1.00.

AMERICAN FLORISTICO., CHICAGO.

Boston Florist Letter Co.

This wooden box nicely staloed and var-nished, 18x30x12 made in two sections, one for each size letter, given away with first order of 500 letters.

Block Letters, 1 % or 2-inch size, per 100, $2.00, Script Letters, $4. Fastener with each letter or word. Used by leading thorista everywhere and for sale by all wholesale florists and supply dealers.

N. F. McCARTHY, Treas. and Manager, 84 Hawley St., BOSTON, MASS.

FIRST QUALITY

NEW CROP arriving daily, $150 per 1000. Disc unt to wholesale jobbers. Prince's Pine, 6c per ib Headquarters for Galax Leaves. Laurel festooning, 4 to 8c per yd; Laurel and Prince's Pine Wresths for Decoration Day, made to order. I the green Moss in hits, $100; in sacks, 55c. Our goods are always the best to be obtained for the money. Prompt attention all orders. Sead in your orders now for Ferns for Decoration Day and you will be sure to have them

Crowl Fern Co.

27 Beacon Street, - BOSTON, MASS.

John Conley & Son,

Magnfacturers of

TIN FOIL

2 AND 4 DOMINICK STREET,

_New York.

BRILLIANT GREEN AND BRONZE

GALAX LEAVES.

For Decorating and all Florists' Designs. CHAS. H. RICKSECKER, Linville, Mitchell Co., N. C.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

JEROME B. RICE, Pres.: E. B. CLARK, 1st Vice Pres.: S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., See y and Treas.

Mr. S. Y. Haines was married May 11 at Minneapolis to Miss Charlotte M. R. Boardman.

A. Unger, of the Louis Boehmer concern of Vokohama, sailed from Vancouver, B. C., by S. S. Empress of China, May 9.

SPARTA, ILL.-The new firm of Allen & Orr is departing from the usual method of retailing plants and seeds and is advertising its stock extensively in local papers. It pays.

N. SLUS and son, J. Sluis, of the well known firm of Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland, are making a two months' trip in this country, visiting the different seed growers as far as the Pacific coast.

CHICAGO.—Changes have taken place in the "West Market." Peter Hollenon the "West Market." Peter Hollen-bach is now at 191 West Randolph street; W. W. Barnard & Co., at 167 the same street, and Geo. B. Tiarks handle Landreth's seeds at 179. Visitors: F. H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York; D. L. Sloan, Palo Alto, Cal.

Toleno, O.-The Henry Phillips Seed and Implement Company this week concluded its seed contract with the government. During the past two months they have sent out 780 tons, or nearly 17,-000,000 pieces of franked mail matter. The company received about $90,000 upon this contract and and has employed seventy-five girls and twenty-five men in preparing the packages.

St. Louis.

TRADE IS IMPROVING AND RAIN HAS AT LAST CLASED TO FALL, — VIOLETS PROMISE ABUNDANCE NEXT WINTER. - A THOU-SAND DOLLAR PRIZE LIST,

Trade has shown quite an improvement over last week. The quantity of stock received has not been so great; it has been selling cleaner and at a higher price than for some time. Good roses have been quoted as high as 5 and 6 centseach and on Sunday carnations were not to be had in town. Ferns have also been scarce and prices have been raised in proportion. White flowers from outdoors are coming in quite plentifully, as are Cape jessemine buds from the south. However, they meet with a slow sale. Market tradecan be reported as fair, although people still seem to be holding oft on their planting. The weather at last seems inclined to give persons a change to plant out stock, as it has stopped raining. We are at present seven inches over the normal precipita tion, counting from January 1, 1898

Carnations and violets are nearly all planted out, and from the number of growers who are planting violets with the expectation of cutting from them the coming season, it will be a wonder if they can make them pay. It seems as if every gardener has heard of the profit there was in them the present season andlongs to duplicate the achievement during next winter With moderate success there should be plenty of violets in this market next season principally single ones, how-

The list of special prizes for the flower show still continues to grow, it having passed the thousand dollar mark recently and is still growing.

Fred Foster, late of the Krebs Floral Co., and still later of the Elite Floral Co., has opened a wholesale store at 113 North 11th street. R. F. T. North 11th street.

Cincinnati.

ABUNDANT FLOWER CROPS IN THE OHIO CITY.-DEPARTMENT STORE METHODS.-MR. PARTRIDGE EMBARKS IN BUSINESS.

Business has been very quiet and stock of all kinds is abundant. Roses are so plentiful as to be selling at summer prices and the same may be said of carnations. It was so unseasonably cold and wet last week that the growers had to fire up again at a lively rate, and the four days' rain mixed with snow had a very bad effect on transient and market trade.

Our weekly markets have been in a deplorable condition this spring, but it has been a long time since prices were as low as they were last week. Fakirs are swarming all over town, selling plants at ridiculously low prices. One of the department stores, "The Fair," located one block east of the Sixth Street Market, opened a flower department recently. They had the following advertisement in one of our local papers last week: Geraniums, 5 cents; carnations, 15 cents per dozen; roses, 25 to 50 cents; tuberoses and gladiolus, 7 cents per dozen; seeds, 1 cent per paper. Attracted by this ad. I visited the shop and found the flower department connected with the grocery on the fifth floor. The flower salesman was busy selling Dianthus pendulus, drooping carnations, while a young lady at the adjoining counter was wrapping up Limburger cheese and imported Holland herring. Harry Edwards, of Newport, Ky., is manager of this department, although several Cincinnati boys were offered the position.

W. K. Partridge, formerly with J. M. McCullough's Sons, has purchased the greenhouses of Francis Pentland, at Lockland, U. A. M. Eiliot, of Pittsburg, has accepted the position made vacant by Mr. Partridge's departure and now has charge of the seed department of this well known firm, which finds trade to be fully equal to former years. Charles Mc-Cullough reports an increase of 25% in wholesale trade. H. Schwarz.

Traverse City, Mich.-H. Tobler has assumed charge of the greenhouses and grounds of the State Insane Hospital here. Mr. Tobler came from Chicago, where he was superintendent for Reinberg Bros.

Kinsman Queen ...Nuskmelon

Should be tested by every seedsman this season—trial pkts. free.—To Market Cardners, \( \) th order \( \) th order \( \) the cash with order seed postpaid

this is the earliest, best in quality and the most productive Muskmelon ever introduced. IRY IC! SPECIAL CIRCLIARS FREE

FRANK BANNING, STEDSMAN AND ITORISI-

SEEDS LAWN GRASS $12,00 per 100 lbs.

Finest Quality Ever Offered (Retails of 30c. lb.) J. CHAS. McCULLOUGH, SEEDSMAN, RECILEANER AND JOBBER GRABS BEEDS North-half Second & Walnut Sts., Cincinnati, O.

hend for Hustrated Catalogues.

RAFFIA BEST QUALITY, LONG MADAGASCAR Notwithstanding the higher market on this item I am still offering at the old figure so long as present stock lasts.

In bale lots (about 225 lbs.) at 8c 100 lbs. or over at ... 9c 50 lbs. or over at ... 10c 25 lbs. or over at ... 12c lbs. or lbs. at 15c per lb., f. o. b. Phila.; net terms and subject unsold on receipt of order.

This exceptional opportunity lor buying a supply of fine quality at a low rate should not be neglected. All commissions, large or small, will receive the same careful attention. In bale lots (about 225 lbs.) at 8e ceive the same careful attention.

Grafting Wax

Trowbridge's Celebrated Grafting
Wax, the genuine article, t lb. bars at 19c; ½ lb. bars at 29c; ½ lb. bars
at 24c per pound. Rebates: 10 lb.
lots, 5 per cent; 25 lb. lots, 10 per cent; 50 lb. lots, 15 per cent; 100 lb.
lots, 20 per cent. Address all orders and correspondence to Juniper and Walnut Streets. Philadelphia, Pa. Walnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

G. C. Watson,

THE ALBERT DICKINSON CO.

GRASS SEEDS

Parks, Tennis Courts, Lawns, &c. In fancy 1 and 2 pound packages and bulk.
SPECIAL PRICES TO THE TRADE

CHICAGO, ILL.

Clifton Springs, N. Y.

BURPEE'S SEEDS PHILADELPHIA.

Wholesule Price List for Florists and Market Gardeners.

CLUCAS & BODDINGTON CO.

Importers and Exporters of

Seeds, Bulbs & Plants,

NEW YORK CITY. Sand for quotations on all Florists' Bulb Stock.

BEST OF ALL' TOMATO
"ENGLISH" MELONS
(FOR FORCING)

FLOWER SEEDS FOR FLORISTS
Cataloguus on application.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Merchants and Growers, 114 Chambers St., NEW YORK, N. Y.

Bedding Plants.

This class of trade is just now very important with a large number of growers, so that hints on the subject will be found useful to many.

The principal work now with geraniums is to have them hardened off as much as possible, so that when planted out they will not suffer from exposure. They should be given all the ventilation possible during the day and at night the venti-lators should be arranged according to the state of the weather, but the time has passed this season for the complete closing of the ventilators either night or day. Give your plants ample room, as it will pay you to get nice short, stocky plants which cannot fail to give satisfaction to your customers. A geranium with a bunch of leaves at the top of six or seven inches of bare stem is a poor thing to send out for bedding or any other purpose, and this is what crowding results

Cannas are called for more largely each year, for they make a grand display. When making up a bed in which to plant cannas, remember that a good rich soil is required for the best results. If they can be so arranged, beds of separate colors and varieties will make a much better showing than will the several colors planted together in one bed. It may be a little too early to plant cannas outside but they can be well hardened off by plenty of ventilation.

Alternantheras in the hotbeds should be coming along well now and should be encouraged as much as possible. They delight in plenty of sun but must not be kept too wet to bring the colors out. The same may be said about coleus.

Ageratum, sweet alyssum, lobelia and verbenas should now be ready for sale and should not be allowed to become dried out.

If you are to fill any vases, a little taste and judgment will go a long way toward giving satisfaction. If the vases are for cemetery purposes you will be expected to make them as pretty as possible for Memorial Day, so have your geraniums well flowered. The semi-doubles are far well flowered. The semi-doubles are far the best for vases, as they bloom more freely and grow much better than most of the very double varieties. Use numerous vincs in your vases. Put in some good vincas, for making a show at the start, with nasturtiums, maurandias and convolvulus planted among them to develop and maintain the effect. Also use some well flowered plants of lobelia, sweet alvssum ageratum and ivy geranisweet alvssum, ageratum and ivy geraniums which, though they will not stand the heat will be attractive till the other plants have become well established. As a center plant for an extra good job you will find the phormium or New Zealand flax the best, while several other tall growers. such as cannas, dracænas and palms can be used to good effect.

Asters, stocks, marigolds, zinnias and centaurea, to be used either as cut flowers or for bedding plants can be planted out now. Almost every establishment has a few nooks and corners that can be used to good advantage as ground for stock plants and will at the same time help make the place look pretty and neat. C. W. Johnson.

NEW LONDON, CONN.-Mrs. C. M. N. Sherman has sold the Pequot Greenhouses to the Appledorn Bros., three of them, and all experienced florists.

READING, PA-H. M. Shoemaker has purchased the greenhouses of G. W. Beers at Fifth and Spring streets. Mr. Shoemaker will also continue his flower stand at 532 Penn street.

Madison, Ga.-On May 13 the Ladies' Garden Club gave a very successful flower show and dinner, the proceeds of which will be applied to a fund for the purchase of a monument for the town's confederate dead.

TORRESDALE, PA.—The ground upon which Peyton DeWitt's establishment has so long stood has been sold and Mr. DeWitt has been forced to select a new location where a large modern range of houses will at once be erected.

FORCING

WE have closed contracts with some of the best and most reliable producers for our stock of Roman Hyacinths, Dutch Hyacinths, Tulips, Von Sion Narcissus, Paper White Narcissus, Valley, Harrisii, Longiflorum, Azaleas, and all leading import forcing stock. Give us a list of your wants so that we may be able to quote you on same.

ODN'T FORGET THAT WE ARE STRICTLY IN IT ON SUPPLIES OF ALL KINDS, SEEDS, BULBS AND CUT FLOWERS......

VAUGHAN, McKELLAR & WINTERSON, 45-47-49 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO.

Armstrong's

Everblooming

Tuberose & &

A NEW departure in Tuberose growth.
Flower bearing buds continue to form around the old flower stock indefinitely.
Flowers greatly superior to those of all other single Tuberoses. Awarded Certificate of Merit by the S. A. F. at Providence last August, and the Shaw Gold Medal at St. Louis in November.

For Prices and Particulars
...Address...

LUTHER ARMSTRONG,
3720 Olive St., ST. LOUIS MO.

Dutch Bulbs

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, CROCUS, ETC. RUDOLPH VAN TIL & CO., Hillegom, Holland.

American Representative

L. C. BOBBINK, Rutherford, N. J. ASK FOR CATALOGUE.

BULBS FOR FLORISTS... FOR SEEDSMEN.

VAN ZANTEN BROTHERS, HILLEGOM. HOLLAND.

HAERENS BROS. From SOMERGEM near Ghent, Belgium

SPECIAL Growers and Exporters of Aza-SPECIAL Growers and Exporters of Azaleas, Palms. Arawarins and other decorative plants, take pleasure to inform you that their Mr. Aco. Haerens is now on his annual visit through the United States. The stock he offers is immense, of best quality and at most reasonable prices. Their New Azaleas will be the favorites of the future. Write for price list and special offer.

AUGUST HAERENS CARE OF .... 66 Beaver St., New York City.

It is good business policy to mention the

....American Florist

when you write to an advertiser.

NEW AMERICAN CANNAS Finest in the World Our Novellies for 1898

OUR CANNAS IN FRANCE.

To Messrs A Blanc & Co.
Your new cannas of last year gave me much satisfaction. Please send me a complete set of your noveltles for ISB as soon as ready. Also 12 Glant Crimson, etc.
Signed CH. MOLIN.
Lyon. France, Jan. 3, 188.

ASPARAGUS SPRENGERI

Fine plants in 6-inch pots, ready for 8-inch, $5 per 12.

AMARYLLIS ....

Veltch's Hybrids. $4 per 12; Equestra, $4 per 100; Furmusissima, $3 per 100.

CALLAS
Spotted Leaf, $1; Black, $5; Yellow, $30; ail per 100. Golden, $2 each.

DAHLIAS

11 prizes out of 22 at the last Dahlia exhibition. First prize Dahlia, GILT EDGE, $15 per 100. Send for special list.

A. BLANC & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

Orange, N. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held in Decker's hall, Monday night, May 2, President Malcolm MacRorie in the chair. James W. Withers was to have read a paper on "Horticultural Societies, their Purpose and Management," but was unable to attend, as he was confined to bed. An interesting discussion on carnation growing took place. Robert Mc-Gowan, Albin Sanger and William Bennett were elected active members, and James Carmichael an associate member. Dr. Kitchen reported that there would be about $50 of a surplus from the spring show.

Peter Duff, Sec'y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.-Daniel C. Cobb, of the Rochester Fertilizer works, at Genesee Junction, has been missing since May 1.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—Grove P. Rawson, the widely known florist, addressed the Horticultural Society on May 7, chosing as his topic, "A Garden Full of Experience." Rev. E. M. Mills, D. D., conducted a question box after the lecture.

Asparagus Sprengerii

stuff, per 100, $5.00 .....

Ficus Elastica, true, large lenf variety, 6-incb oots, 20 inches high to 50e each.

Crimson Rambler Roses, extra fine, bushy plants, in 4-inch pots, will soon bloom, per dozen, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.

Cycas Revoluta, dormant stems, size from 3 to 10 lb.

(a) 15c per lb.

Clothide Soupert, the great pot rose, our stock is
A No. 1, 2-in, ao §3,00, 2½-in, (a §4,00; 3-in, ao §0,00, 3)-in, ao §9,00 per 100.

Oahlias, 2½-in, pot plants, in named varieties, per 110, $5,00.

Pelargoniums Mme. Thibaut, Mrs. Robt. Sandiford, Edward Perkins and Dorothy, strong 3-inch stock, per doz., $1.50; per 100, $12.00.

For Cannas, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, send in vour list, we have all kinds.

H. P. Roses, dormant, 2-year extra fine stock to $12.00 per 100.

Clematic Amedousis Vacada, Halls bearing the control of th

§12 (9) per 100.
Clemalis, Ampelopsis Vettehi, Hollyhocks, Paconies, Hydrangeas P. G. etc., we have in large quantities; write us for prices.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

CHICACO: Creenhouses: Western Springs, III. 84-86 Randolph St.

Good Stock! Low Prices!

CANNAS Strong plants of Alphonse Bon-date Foot Marquant, Am. Effort Bisson See Stewart I lambovant $100 per 100, $25.00 per 1000

COLEUS Crimson Verschaffeltin failden per für 31-00 per 100.0.

Geraniums Double Gen Grant and S. A. Sunt 1905 (reflection of part 1905 of part 1906 of strange of definition of strange of definition of strange of definition of strange of definition of strange of

JOHN SCOTT,

KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Just Arrived

IN FINE CONDITION

Cattleya Trianæ and C. Labiata, also Odontoglossum Crispum and Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

LAGER & HURRELL, Summit, N. J.

Latania Borbonica

4-Inch, very fine, with 2 character leaves, $12-50 per 100° $120-00 per 1000. 3-Inch, very time, with 1 character lenf, $10.40 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Lemon Verbenas

Rooted Cuttings

Lemon Verbena... 81 per 100: 88 per 1000 Salvla Splendens, dwarf, $1 per 100, $8 per 1000. Moonflowers, in Jadoo extra, $1.50 per 100 Coleus Golden Hedder. Nelle Grant, Autumn Glow, 75c per 100: $6 00 per 100, Alternantheras, yellow, from soil, 35c per 101; $3.00 per 1000.

Smilax Seedlings

Fine, from Jadoo, 35c per 100; $3 per 1000

MOONFLOWERS

256-inch pots, strong ......$4,00 per 100

Critchell's

Cash with order, please. Cincinnati, O.

J. L. SCHILLER, NEW YORK CITY. 404 East 34th Street,

77255555555555555555555555555 ROBT. CRAIG & SON Roses, Palms

and Novelties in Decorative Plants.

Market and 45m J.... Market and 49th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Rose Hill Nurseries

LARGEST Growers of Palms, Orchids, Stove and Greenhouse plants, Ferns. Aragearias, Pandanus

SIEBRECHT & SON, New Rochelle, N. Y. New York Office, 409 Fifth Ave.

Crotons...

_IN VARIETY

Rothschild. Hawkeri, Interruptum, Evansianum, Rubra Lineata, Andreanum, Auren Maculatum and others, suitable for bedding. Fine plants in 3-tuch pots, $2.00 per doz. New and rare varieties, 50 cents each.

Aurea Maculatum, extra fine plants in 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; $15 per 100; 3-inch pot plants, $2 per doz.; $12 per 100; thumb pots, $1 per doz.; $6 per 100.

Edwin Lonsdale,

Money Order Office, Station H, Phila.

Florist. CHESTNUT HILL. PHILA., PA.

FOR HERE WE ARE 4 Weeks

| FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED.                  | Per 100 |
|--------------------------------------------|---------|
|                                            | rer 100 |
| FUCHSIAS in assorted varieties, double,    | $3 00° |
| 2 in                                       | 2.50    |
|                                            | 2.50    |
| HIBISCUS in assortment, single and double, |         |
| 216-1n                                     | 3 00    |
| 3-In                                       | 5.00v   |
| JESSAMINE Granditiora, 21g-in              | 3.00    |
| Grand Duke, 4 lp.,                         | 8.00    |
| " Mald of Orienns, 3 in                    | 5.00    |
| " Mald of Orleans, 3 in                    | 8.00    |
| Arablan, 4-in                              | S 00    |
| Rhynchospermum Jasminoides, 2-lp.          | 3 00    |
| Rhynchospermum Jasminoides, 2-ln.          | 8,00    |
| SMILAX, good strong plants. 2-ln           | 2.00    |
| 2000 MOON VINES, strong plants, 2-in       | 3 50    |

NANZ & NEUNER,

STRONG STOCK TO POT ON NOW. JOHN H. LEY,

COOD HOPE, - WASHINGTON, D. C. Offers clean well rooted plants as below:

Asparagus Sprengerii St.00 per 100 Cash with order. Seedlings American Rose Co., Washington, D. C.

CAN YOU USE ANY

THE F. R. WILLIAMS CO.

WHOLESALE PLORISTS
AND SHIPPERS OF CUT FLOWERS.
60 Huron Street, - CLEVELAND, O.

HORONIA

I will have a very nice rioccol these in perfect condition for autumn dulivery
Borolin leterophylin.... from 20 cents to $1.00 usch.
Borolin cluster ... from 20 cents to $1.00 usch.
AZALEAS (frown especially for American tradeat very reasonable prices.
Palms, Proceeds, Aroucarine, Acaclas, Knimin Lntifulia, Rhododendrons, Etc.
Swoot Bays, Standards and Pyramids. Description and prices on application.

ARTHUR DE MEYER, Nurseeryman,
Mont St. Amand Chant, Belgium.

Please mention the American Florist when writing to advertisers.

SPECIAL OFFER DREER'S

We offer the following leading varieties, established plants, in 3-inch pots:

|                                      | п.  | 100.   | ft.                                    | 100-  |
|--------------------------------------|-----|--------|----------------------------------------|-------|
| Alphonse Bouvier, crimson            | 5   | $4.00 | Florence Vaughan, spotted yellow 4     | 85.00 |
| Amie P. G. Pegeaux, pomegranate      | 313 | 6_00   | Geof. St. Hilaire (bronze), scarlet 41 |       |
| Beaute Poitevine, rich crimson       | 3   | 10 00  | 1 C. Vaughan (bronze), vermilion 4     |       |
| Baron de Sandrans, light yellow.     | 316 | 4 00   | Mme. Crozy, scarlet, gilt edge 3       | 4 00  |
| Chas. Henderson, crimson             | 3   | 4.00   | Mme. Pichon, yellow striped 3          | 4.00  |
| Comite Bouchaud, yellow spotted.     | 4   | 4.00   | Madagascar, spotted ochre 31           |       |
| Columbia, rich erimson               | 3   | 10.00  | Pres Chandon, deep orange 3:           | 4.00  |
| Deuil St. Grevy (bronze), orange red | 5   | 4_00   | Papa, fine cherry red 3                | 4 00  |
| Egandale (bronze) cherry red         | 4   | 4.00   | Queen Charlotte, scarlet, gilt         | 1 007 |
| Explorateur Crampbel, orange         | 4   | 4.00   | edge 3                                 | 5.00  |
| Furst Bismarck, intense crimson.     |     | 6.00   | Souv. d'Antoine Crozy, gilt edge 3     | 6.00  |
|                                      | _   |        | Total a Millionic Oldey, Entringen.    | 0.00  |

We call special attention to the following "sels" of new varieties. They are all of great merit and should be tried by everyone interested in Cannas:

Select Set of Six New Cannas for 1898.

Goliath, the fluest crimson extant.
J. D. Eisele, vermilion scarlet.
Furst Von Hohenlohe, the best yellow.

One each of the above six for $3.00.

Set of Eight Best Italian or Orchid Flowered Cannas.

This set is the "cream" of over 30 varieties introduced last year at $3.00 to $5.00 each. America, orange saimon, feathered and veined scarlet, bronze foliage, 35c. each. Allemania, light and dark salmon, golden markings, flowers immense size; 36c. each. Africa, orange salmon, deepening to scarlet, rich bronze foliage; 30c. each. Asia, bright yellow with red spots in throat; 30c. each. Aphrodite, salmon, edged and feathered light yellow; 30c. each. La France, similar to America, but with darker foliage; 30c. each. Pandora, salmon, marbled with scarlet, bronze fedlage; 30c. each. Surviva yellow, with red dashes, very large flower; 50c. each. One each of the eight varieties, $2.00.

Set of Six Best of Crozy's Introduction - Depute Ravarin, rich garnet. Mme. Leon Leclerc, scarlet, tipped and edged gold. Jos. Combet, velvety cardinal. R. Pearson, golden, dotted red. Mme Favrichon, carmine, with orange sheen. Sec Chabanne, rich salmon, distant shade. 35c. each, or the set of six varieties for $2.00. Full descriptions of the above found on pages 26 to 29 of our current Wholesale Catalogue.

HENRY A. DREER.

714 Ghestnut St., PHILADELPHIA

Spotted Leaf Calla Per 100....$2.50 Begonias, Gloxinias, Etc. at Close Figures.

AZALEAS FOR FALL DELIVERY

1F YOU buy 25 or more plants we have same packed especially for you in Europe which insures delivery in best condition.:.

10 to 12-incb, per 100. $40.00.

12 to 14 " 45.00.

14 to 16 " 55.00. SPECIAL PRICES QUOTED for quantities upward of 100. We meet competition, quality considered.

ORDER NOW TO OBTAIN PERFECT PLANTS AND BEST KINDS

SURPLUS BARGAINS

A limited surplns of the following bulbs. We make prices low to close out. Quality guaranteed.....

Tuberoses...

| Description Provided to Control                 | 161 1000       |
|-------------------------------------------------|----------------|
| Dwarf Excelsior Pearl, strictly first size$.85 | $ 7.50 |
| Second size                                     | 3.50           |
| Tall Double, first size                         | 6,5010 00  |

Speciosum Lilies...

|             |         |   | Per 100 | Per 1000 |
|-------------|---------|---|---------|----------|
| Album 7     | -9 incl | 1 | 84.50   | 840.00   |
| 9-          | 11 ''   |   | 5.50    | 50.00    |
| "1I-        |         |   | 7,50    | 70.00    |
| Rnbrum 6    | -8 ''   |   | 2,25    | 20.00    |
|             | 9 "     |   | 3,50    | 30.00    |
| Melpomene 7 | 9 "     |   | 3.50    | 30.00    |

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

CHICAGO: 84-86 RANDOLPH ST.

NEW YORK: 14 BARCLAY ST.

HEADQUARTERS FOR "FANCY" BULB STOCK AT REASONABLE PRICES

The American Florist Company's Directory

NEW EDITION. PRICE $2.00.

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY, 324 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

Second Year Treatment of Grafted Roses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Will you kindly advise me as to the treatment of a bench of grafted rose plants which have done duty the past season? Can they be profitably lifted, potted, pruned and planted on ordinary benches for another season's work? B. X. L.

There is no reason why grafted rose plants cannot be lifted and potted, and replanted afterwards in the benches, as well as those on their own roots, though I can see no good reason for going to the trouble of potting at all. Unless very large pots are used, say seven or eight-inch, it will be necessary to remove every particle of soil from the roots, and in all probability cut away much of the root as well, and such treatment for a growing plant in the hottest weather could not be recommended. Again, if pots larger than 5-inch are employed, it will be impossible to set them out properly on a shallow bench. If the soil they are now growing in is of fair quality, and the plants are in good health, why disturb the roots at all? Would it not be better to give them a short, partial rest, then prune, topdress and start again? I think this is the better plan if it can be carried out. The difficult part of the programme is the holding of the plants in a semi-dormant state for any length of time when all the natural conditions are in favor of rapid growth, without going to the extreme of dryness, in which case the wood will shrivel, the roots will be destroyed, the whole plant receive a severe shock, and instead of storing up energy during the resting period as we intended it should, it will be robbed of practically all the vitality that it previously possessed. I believe that when a rose has been growing continuously for twelve to fifteen months it is entitled to and will be benefited by a period of rest, but when that rest has to be given by withholding water during the hot months of July and August it is better to rest too little rather than too much. We have usually allowed about six weeks from commencing to dry off to the time of pruning. Whether it is best to prune hard back, that is, to within 12 or 15 inches of the ground, opinions differ, and each grower must determine for himself. If the bench contains not more than four inches of soil, it will be advisable to add about two inches of good, rich material; if they are not deep enough to allow it, nail strips on top of the side boards; grafted plants are great feeders. It "H. N. I." wishes to transfer his plants to another house rather than continue them in the same benches, I would advise him to rest as recommended above, then prune, lift with considerable soil attached, and replant at once on the other benches. They should be watered rather sparingly until growth commences and root action is well established, but after that can be treated the same as young plants ROBT, SIMPSON. young plants.

19 Syrie, Con. - The large display of the Park Horal Company attracted much at tention at the Pure Food Show last week.

BRIGHTON, PA-The Pittsburg Clay Manufacturing Company's plant was destroyed by hie May 3. Loss 815. 000. The concern employed forty men in making flower pots

SANTA ROSA CAL This is Sonoma county's barrier year in Horieulture and horticulture and the horticultural society. will take advantage of the conditions to give a "I rint and Flower Show

Roses! Roses!

In A-t stock of all the leading varieties. Now ready at reason able prices.

CARNATIONS

Only a few left of Lily Dean, the best of all the fancy vari-

JOHN N. MAY,

Chrysanthemums

All the new ones of this year's introductions and all the best of former years in splendid condition for immediate shipment.

All the really good dislinct varieties in extra strong stock from 4-inch pots. Write for special prices on large orders to Summit, New Jersey.

M. BEAUTIES FINE PLANTS from 3-inch pots, $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000. 2

WYNCOTE, PA.

Mrs. Robt. Garrett

NEW PINK FORCING ROSE

Winner of 6 certificates, medal and silver cup. $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100. A fine stock of young chrysanthennums and carnations. Send for trade list describing above in detail.

H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.

ROSES..

2-in, per 100 3-in, per 100 $5.00

Am. Beauties . . Perle . . . . . . . $2.75 Bridesmaid ... 2.75 4.50

MAPLEWOOD CUT FLOWER and PLANT CO. PLEASANT HILL, MO.

Memorial Rose

(Rosa Wichuriana)

Strong field-grown plants, $50, $75 and $100 per 1000

SAM'L C. MOON, MORRISVILLE, Bucks Co., PA.

ROSES..

PERLES.....
METEORS.
BRIDESMAID

Pots 100 Pots 100 2½ $2.50 3 $3.50

tenaranteed first-class. Stock grown in low

THE E. HIPPARD CO., Youngstown, Ohio.

From I in peds in variety $9.00 per 100 CARNATIONS, $2.50 per 100 from 21-onely pots, Scott, Portin, Metowan; dso all young roses and general stock

THE NATIONAL PLANT CO.

Do You Need Young Rose Stock

for identing of tof 3 in pots. A dollar more on the hundred is nothing if you get better stock. Send she or $1.00 in stamps for samples

GEO. A. KUHL,

Montton tide paper

.... PEKIN, ILL.

OWN ROOTS & DORMANT & & FIELD GROWN

to 4 feet, cut back to 2 rec.
Yellow Rambler (Aglain)
Hybrid Perpetuals,
Mosses, Hardy Climbers
and Madam Plantier and well shaped. No. 1, 2 to 4 feet, cut back to 2 feet

These plants are very strong and well shaped. Prices on application. Address

W. F. HEIKES, Manager,

1308-1310 Unity Bldg., -CHICAGO, ILLS.

P. ROSES

FROM 2 I-2 INCH POTS.

Strong, thrifty, well established plants thereral price $4.00 per 100. Extra find lot of Crimson Ramblers.

Jackson & Perkins Co. NEWARK, NEW YORK.

From 5-linch Pots at 9c.

From 5-linch Pots at 9c.

Fine clean plants. Price reduced to close out, only a few hundred each. ...

Genl. Jsequeminor. La France. Coquette des Blanches. Coquette des Blanches. Coquette des Blanches. Coquette des Clematis—Henryil and Miss Bateman, the leading large white aurits; fine I and 2-year field-grown plants [6c. Clematis Virginia, sweet scented, small white flower, 2-year, pric, 5c.

W. H. SALTER POSTROCASTA

W. H. SALTER, Rochester, N. Y.

Do You Plant Beauties?

Am. Beauties, 3 inch at $5.00 per 100. Not cullings, but clean, strong, well grown stock and guaranteed free from all disease.....

A. DONAGHUE,

108 S. 161h Street, OMAHA, NEB.

ROSES Strong healthy plants from 2, 215 and 3- inch pots at $3, $4 and $6 and Maids, Gonter, Pink and White La France, Siebrecht and Worgan Am. Beauty, strong 3-inch, $8 per 100. Coleus and Verbenas, $2.50 per 100; $20 per 1000. IRSH JUNIPERS for fransplanting, well rooted, 5 to 1 inches. Sample and prices on application.

JOSI PH MEINL, Jacksonville, III.

AMERICAN BEAUTY

Time young plants, healthy and strong 2 %-inch puts, $8,00 per 100, *70.00 per 1000.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Wyndoloor, Chestnut Hill, Itli order. PHILADELPHIA, PA 'ash with order. PHILADELPTIA Money Order Office, Station II, Phila

Cleveland.

WEATHER EFFECTS STOCKS AND CAUSES A RISE IN PRICES .- CARNATIONS ARE ALL ABOVE A DOLLAR A HUNDRED, -FAVOR-ITES

For some time previous to a week ago we suffered from cold, damp and altogether disagreeable weather which was very unfavorable for the production of roses and carnations, which are our mainstay for cut flowers now that bulbous stock is practically exhausted. As a result the latter end of last week developed a decided scarcity in both these staples, and every one was hustling for stock. which in many cases failed to materialize in spite of every effort to coax it out. Business has been steady, nearly every one reporting a fair sale for all good stock.

Sweet peas have been offered in small quantities for the last month and are now coming in more plentifully. They are of good quality, the price ranging from 50 cents to 75 cents per 100. The prevailing variety is Blanche Ferry, while next in evidence are Emily Henderson and Carnations are selling at from $1.25 to $1.50 per 100 for good stock, although the sudden scarcity of last week forced the prices for a short time, and for only a few sales, to $2 per 100. Bride, Brides-maid, Meteor and other good roses are wholesaling at $3 to $4 per 100. They are still excellent in size, color and to liage, although the cold weather has, in a few cases, developed mildew. We are now, however, enjoying typical May weather, and the planting of bedding stock can begin at almost any time; in some cases, indeed, has already begun.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS!

All the very best commercial varieties, viz:

Marquis de Montmort, Lady Fitzwigram, Bergmann, Merry Monarch, Glory of Pactife, Robinson, Henderson, M. M. Johnson, Golden Trophy, D. Spaulding, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. Perrin, Ivory White, Ivory Pink, M. Bonnaffon, Mayflower, Modesto, Jerome Jones, white, yellow and pink, Maud Dean, H. W. Rieman, Lottie Berry, Maud Adams, Emil Bottner, Grecian Bottner, Stock onevcelled and very large quantity of it ready, Let us book order for now or future delivery. 212 inch, $3.00 per 100. Cuttings, rooted, $2.00 per 100.

POEHLMANN BROS.

MORTON GROVE, Cook Co., ILL.

Strong started plants @ 2c each, or will exchange same amount for Madame Crozy.

W. W. COLES, Kokomo, Ind.

FOR SALE

About 600 Hydrangeas in 7-in. pots, strong thrifty healthy stock, in bloom. Apply at once to

Chas. Frueh.

III6 Hoyt St., : SAGINAW, E. S., MICH.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST'S COLOR CHART

is now accepted as the standard in preparing color descriptions, by many foreign bouses as well as in America.

PRICE IS CENTS POSTPAID. AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 322 Dearborn St., Chicago

ORDER AT ONCE AND SECURE STOCK

CHRYSANTHEMUMS Rose Owen, J. H. Woodford, Dorothy Devens, G. F. Atkinson, Golden Trophy, T. B. Morse, Pres. McK'nley, Western King, The Herriott, Son, Golden Trophy, T. B. Miss Helen Wright, Belle of Castlewood, Chito, C. W. Ward, Mrs. S. T. Murdock, 75 cts. per dozen's $5.00 per 100. Glory of Pacific, Mand Dean, Mrs. R. Crawford, W. P. Kaynor, Modesto, Lenawee, Pride of Castlewood, Bonnafon, Ivory, North Ellins, 50 cts. per dozen's $3.00 per 100. Frank Hardy, T. H. Spaulding, Mrs. D. P. Bassett, The Yellow Fellow, Madeline Fratt, Mrs. C. H. Petice, Merry Christmas, 35 cts. each: $3.00 per dozen Snow Queen. Pennsylvatia, 50 cts. each; $5.00 per dozen. Snow Queen. Pennsylvatia, 50 cts. each; $5.00 per dozen. W. H. Chadwick, $1.00 each; $6.00 per dozen.

CARNATIONS New York, Empress and Evelina, $2.00 per dozen: $10.00 per 100: $75.00 per 1000. C. A Dana, Mayor Pingree, $5.00 per 100. Stom King, fine from soil. $2.00 per dozen: $10.00 per 100: $75.00 per 100: $15.00 per 100: $15.00 per 100. Eldorado, A. Billard, Count de Bouchard, $4.00 per 100.

For full description send for our IB98 wholesale list.

THE GOTTAGE GARDENS, Queens, N. Y.

Mrs. S. T. Murdock, Mme. F. Bergman,

McDONALD & STEELE, Crawfordsville, Ind.

20c each, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100.

Ghrysanthemum PRESID

Yellow Sport of JEROME JONES.

It received the bigbest points and a Certificate of Merit at the Cleveland Chrysantbemum Show. It is in Yellow what Jerome Jones is amongst the White. The very best for late blooming. 2½-in. pot plants, strong, $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100. Stock ready April 15th.

E. J. PADDOCK, 295 Erie St., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

NATHAN SMITH & SON

Wholesale Florists

Specialties & & & AC

ADRIAN, MICH.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS CARNATIONS ***

AND VIOLETS

· · · CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED · ·

IN BEST VARIETIES.

ROSES, from 3-inch pots. CARNATIONS, for fall delivery CHRYSANTHEMUMS. ANTHEM SMILAX. VIOLETS.

Prices low. Send for list. WOOD BROTHERS, FISHKILL, N.Y.

West Islip Greenhouses MARIE LOUISE VIOLETS

Rooted Runners, $4 per 1000. Cash with order.

E. B. SUTTON, Jr. P.O. Address.... BABYLON, N Y.

New CARNATIONS.

WHITE CLOUD—White.
GOLD NUGGET—Yellow.
NEW YORK (Ward)—Bright cerise pink.
MRS. JAMES DEAN (Ward)—Clear silvery pink.
JOHN YOUNG (Ward)—White.
BON TON (Ward)—Scarlet.
Prices for above varieties: $2.00 per doz., $10.00
per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

We will also have Cerise Queen (Breitmeyer),
Argyle (Stollery), Jack Frost (Swayne), Empress (Swayne), Evelina (Witterstaetter), Firefly (Hancock), Psyche (Hill), Panited Lady (Hill), and Mrs. S. A. Northway (Simmons).

All good 1897 novelties and other standard varieties at reasonable prices.

New Chrysanthemums.

MRS. C. H. PEIRCE—Yellow.

35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100.

SNOW QUEEN—White.

50c each. $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

MERRY CHRISTMAS—Late White.

35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100.

Send for Descriptive Price List. Ready January, 1898.

F. DORNER & SONS CO.

LAFAYETTE, IND. MAJOR Var.

Per 100 From 4-inch pots......$7.00 From 2-inch pots......$3.00

Sonnenschmidt & Junge

456 E. Washington St. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Milwaukee.

FRANK DULGER'S FIXE ESTABLISHMENT.-FREYTAG'S SUCCESSES. -- ARCHIE MIDDLE-MASS AND OTHERS.—CHANGES AND DE-VELOPMENTS. -- NOTES.

At Frank P. Dilger's establishment one is impressed by the progressive atmosphere, which is always equally beneficial to the plants and pleasing to the cus-tomer. Hearn something on every visit. Here are a lot of echinocactus, both pink and searlet, pot plants handsomely in bloom. A few teet further is a batch of Farfugium grande, beautifully colored. Just beyond is a bed of gentiana, with their tall spikes of curious bloom. Then there is a corner of magnificent begonias and a bunch of iris. Such a house delights a florist. It is such a relief from the regulation show of carnations, roses and violets. I never saw better bulb stock than his. Mr. Dilger has his bulbs planted in flats, covered with eight inches of soil, and over this a heavy coating of straw. They grow long and may be kept until required. One batch is being held for Memorial Day, which is late even for garden bulbs. As bulb stock has been scarce for a few days, Mr. Dilger wasdigging out a few flats when I called. They were a beautiful assortment of pink and light blue hyacinths with foliage quite light, flowers larger than Romans but smaller than the perfect Dutch. Frank says they are ready for market in three days after they come out of the straw, and these were bulbs that bloomed a year ago.

Chas. Zephnick's place might be called Pansy Hill. Frame after frame are seen outside, and when you look into the houses whole benches of pansies salute vou.

Jacob Freytag & Sons are devoting their establishment to meeting the demands of local trade, and they do it well. They grew 5,000 fuchsias almost to per-They grew $1000 mensions annose to perfection. Their smilax is in beautiful condition and they have had a grand display of calceolarias. Their palm and fern house shows the result of much care. The ferns are mostly in pans. I was delighted to see a Glorie de Dijon in bloom. It is an old timer among roses. They have a fine bench of cannas and their carnations are blooming nicely.

Archie Middlemass has not been idle. His many houses are full of excellent bedding stock, geraniums and coleus in particular, with a variety of pansies and seedling verbenas. For present cutting amaryllis and adiantums are beautiful.

Geo. Volk's houses are situated in a fertile valley, low and level, and a largefield of tulips reminds one of Holland. His pink sweet peas, Daybreaks, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii, are far above the average in quality, while a strikingly attractive bench is of dark heliotrope. Mr. Volk is recovering his health and will, no doubt, be able to be about in a week or two.

Geo. Ringrose's vellow daisies take the cake. M. f. Riebs, a well-known amateur. has a lot of seedling pæonies which will bloom this season. Charles Mann is arranging to supply the demand for a pink double-flowering crab.

There has been some manieuvering in the flower trade of late. The flower department at Lox's, on Milwaukee street will hereafter be conducted in Fox's name. The clerk help has been considerably changed. D.R. Jones, the druggist, who has conducted a flower department for years, has leased the department to Wilham Edletsen, of Third street, who will conduct this place as an East Side branch. Mr. Luos, who has been selling flowers on Grand avenue, is reported to have sold out for $240. Many flower stands are being started at various places on the being started at various places on the East Side. Meadero's drug store, at Van Buren and Biddle streets, has a flower department and W. G. Schuch is doing well on upper Ogden avenue. He has named his place "The Palm House." Mr. Shaw, of New York, spent some time in Milwaukee on his annual trip, as did F. R. Pierson's agent.

We learn that there is a Florists' Club here for a fact, that the officers conducting it are Frank Dilger, president; N. Zweifle, secretary; A. Billings, treasurer.

Holton & Hunkle Co., will add a bulb department to their business next season.

Chicago flowers are coming to Milwaukee more than they have of late.

C. B. W.

....YOU WANT THIS ....

FOR DECORATION DAY

Vase for the Cemetery

THE CLARA CEMETERY VASE (Patent applied for by Mrs. C. W. Pike,)

A Receptacle for Flowers. Long Needed for the Cemetery.

A Receptacle for Flowers. Long Needed for the Cemetery.

The CLARA VASE for use at the Cemetery is a handsome as well as one of the most useful articles ever placed on the market. It is absolutely a new thing and takes the place of all the nid the caos, lottles and various old truck that are usually found in the cemetery for holding flowers, and prove such a disgrace where everything else is beautiful and ornamental. It is composed of solid glass and stands about twelve inches high. The lower end is sharp-polited so it can be embedded about the inches in the ground and stand firm. It will hold sufficient water to keep the flowers fresh and sweet, and will accommodate flowers with long as well as short stens. The VASE is bell-shaped and the top has a diameter of about five inches. The VASE is collapsed and the top has a diameter of about five inches. The VASE is collapsed and the top has a diameter of about five inches. The VASE is collapsed and the top has a diameter of about five inches. The VASE is collapsed and the top has a diameter of about five inches. The VASE is collapsed in the collapse of the collapse in the collapse of th

BASSETT & WASHBURN, Wholesale Cut Flowers and Florists' Supplies.

88 Wabash Ave., CHICACO, ILL.

Herr's Smilax

Sample plants seat for 10 cents, 75 cts. per 100, or $5.00 per 1000.

CARNATION EXPERIENCES **

A few hundred left, send your address and get one free......

ALBERT M. HERR

Lancaster, Pa.

*∄*nvanaaanaanaanaanaanaana

CARNATIONS

STRONG, HEALTHY ROOTED CUTTINGS Ready Feb. 1st and Later

Including Morello, Flora Hill, Daybreak, Including Morello, Flora Hill, Daybreak, Wm. Scott, Lizzle McGowan, Ivory, Silver Spray, Emily Pierson, Goldfinch, Eldorado, and others. Seed me a list of what you want and get prices before you buy. We also have a fine lot of Carnation and Violet blooms for sale. Write for prices.

CHAS. CHADWICK,

Lock Box II.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

FLORA HII

The best of all whites. Reduced price. .*.*.*

H. F. LITTLEFIELD, Worcester, Mass.

FLORA HILL cannot there is nothing in sight to at all equal it. It seeks for itself whorever known. It is all equal it. It speaks for it is fragrant. It is the lorgest bloom. It puts all others in the shade, within past or present to equal it. We have four thousand plants exclusively for propagating from the stock ever offered. So the past of per 180, $1000 per 180, can trade list is based. If you have not received one send for it.

E. G. HILL & CO., Richmond, Ind.

NEW WHITE PERPETUAL

BLOOMING CARNATION

Anna H. Shaw

The Best "All Round" White Carnatios for Cut Flowers. Recommendations: Wooderful bloomer, Unusual Vigor, Rapid Grower, Forms Strong Blooming Plants in a Very Short Time. Perfectly Healthy, Handsome Foliage, Large Beautifully Formed Flowers on Long Steme. Exquisitely Fragrant, Never Bursts, Blooms Longer and Gives More Flowers than Any Cither Variety Ever Offered If you want a RELIABLE Carnation that can always be depended upon, give Anna H. Shaw a trial. Rooted Cuttings, $1 oer doz; $6 per 100. Strong Plants, $175 per doz; $10 per 101 Seed for Trade List and Catalogue of Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, Cacti. Etc.

Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd.

Ventura (by-the-Sea), Cal.

VERY FINE

JUBILEE

CARNATIONS

From soil, $1.00 per 100. Well rooted cuttings, $2.00 per 100. Good stock rendy now, cash with order. Also 48 other lending varieties

GEO. HANCOCK & SON, CRAND HAVEN, MICH.

Bread and Butter

Carnations Scott and Rose Queen for Pink; Emily Pierson for Red; Meteor, Crimson; McGowan and Kohlnoor for White. No experiment and disappointment growing these carnations. Strong rooted cuttings $1.00 per 100, $8,00 per thousand. Cash with order.

SOUTH SIDE FLORAL CO., Springfield, III.

MUST HAVE ROOM

Ceraniome 10,000 S. A. Nutt. 2-Inch. $15.00 per 1000; $2.00 per 100. Rooted Cuttings from soil. $10.00 per 1000; $1.50 per 101. Mane Bruant, 2-Inch. $5.00 per 100. Frances Perkins bear Pink. 2-In. $1.00 per 100. Dracaona Indivien Strong 3-In. $8100 per 100. Coleus, rooted cuttings, 6 kinds, 30c. per 100; Ktondike, strong 2-In., $5.00 per 100. Begonin Vernon, 2-Inch. $2.00 per 100. Carnation 1.dzzie McGowan, soil or pots, $10.00 per 1000. Casab placee.

CARL HAGENBURGER. West Mentor, Ohio.

Everybody is more pleased if you say saw your ad, in the American Florist" when writing.

Two thoroughbred male ANGORA KITTENS, 8 weeks old, maltese and gray and maltese and white, $7.50 each. A good adv. for well-kept greenhouse.

Williams & Crittenden,

Waterloo, lowa. žeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeë

KLONDIKE

Cold Fields at Your Door.

Cold Fields at Your Door.

COLEUS—All kinds, all grades and all prices.
Verschaffeitil and Queen, 75c per 100; $6.00 per 1000;
2½-inch pots, $15.00 per 1000; $1.75 per 100. Coleus in varlety, 55c per 100; $1.50 per 1000; $2.60 per 1000; $1.50 per 1000. $1.50 per 100. Coleus in varlety, 55c per 100! $1.50 per 100. Akeratum dwarf blue. 60c per 100; $1.50 per 100. Akeratum dwarf blue. 60c per 100; $1.50 per 100. Anthemis Curonaria. Golden Marguerite, $1.50 per 100. Anthemis Curonaria. Golden Marguerite, $1.50 per 100. $12.00 per 1000. Salvia aplenders, $1.00 per 100. Vinca varlegata. $1.50 per 100; $1.20 per 1000; $2.00 per 1000; $1.50 per 100. Salvia aplenders, $1.00 per 100; $1.50 per 100. $1.00 per 100. Alternanthera Paronychioddes, Major and Aurea Nana. 60c per 100. Hellsuthus multiforus, Double Oolden. 24-cinch pot. $3 00 per 100; Ceraniums, standard sorts, our selection, $1.50 per 100; $12.00 per 100; $18.00 per 100.
J. E. FELTHOUSEN, Schenectady, N. Y.

To Clean Out.

| 2.000 Hellen Keller                         | $1.00   | per 100                                 |
|---------------------------------------------|----------|-----------------------------------------|
| 3.000 Aurea Nana                            |          |                                         |
| 1,000 Lycopodium Dent                       | 1.00     |                                         |
| 1.000 Geraniums, named, 214 in              | ., 2.00  | • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • |
| 2,000 " 3 in., mixed                        | 3.00     | * 5                                     |
| 2,000 " 3 in., mixed3,000 " named, 4 in | 5.00     | 1.1                                     |
| 1.000 Salvia Clara Bedman, 4 in             |          |                                         |
| 1,000 Petunias, Dreer's Strain, 3-in.       | 3.00     |                                         |
| 10,000 Asters, Perfection, white, pi        | nk, blu  | e and                                   |
| scarlet, 60c, per 100, $4.00 per           | 1000.    | Extra                                   |
| strong plants.                              |          |                                         |
| Also 2,000 Asters, Snowball.                |          |                                         |
| 1,000 Fuchsias, 3 in., mixed. @ $2.50      | per 100. |                                         |

The Morris Floral Co..

MORRIS, ILL.
Please mention American Floriat.

MAY OFFER.

| Alternanthera, 2-iu. pots, A. Nana, $1.75, | Per 100 |
|---------------------------------------------|---------|
| P. Major                                    | $2 00  |
| Begonias, 2½-in. pot, and Vernon            | 2.(8)   |
| Coleus, 2½ in. pot, and Centaurea Gym.      | 2 00    |
| Geraniums, 20 var., 2½-in. pots, $2.00;    |         |
| 3-in. pot                                   | 3 25    |
| Geraniums, 4-in, pots, and Double Pe-       |         |
| tunias                                      | 4.00    |
| Smilax, 2-in. pots, 1000, $9.00            | 1.00    |
| Primroses, ready in June, single            | 2.50    |
| CACH DI PACE                                |         |

JOS. H. CUNNINGHAM; - Delaware, Ohio.

BARGAINS IN PLANTS CASH

| French Cannas, Crozy, Queen Charlotte, per 100                                 |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Florence Vanghan, etc., fine plants $4.00                                     |
| Geraniums, Double Grant 21/2 Inch pots 2.00                                    |
| Salviss, Clara Bedman, 21-Inch pots 2.00                                       |
| Coleus, 5 varieties, fine, 25 Inch pots, 2.00                                  |
| Begonie Vernon, fine 232-Inch pots 2.00                                        |
| Mountain of Snow Ceranium, 2½ in. pots. 3.00 Order at once and get good stock, |

NICHOLAS AMOS, Crestline, Ohio.

HARDY PINKS

2½-in. pots; Souv. de Sale, $3.50 per 100; Her Majesty, Glen Valley, Laura Wilmer, Ger-trude, $3.00 per 100.

VIOLETS...

2½-in. pots: Admiral Avellon, Princess of Wales, $3.50 per 100; Luxonne, California. Campbell, Swanley White, $3.00 per 100.

THE CONARD & JONES CO., - West Grove, Pa.

THE CHOICEST VARIETIES 100,000 VERBENAS. IN CULTIVATION.

Fine pol plants, $2.50 per 100; $20 per 1000. Rooled Cuttings, 75c per 100; $6.00 per 1000; $50 per 10000 NO RUST OR MILDEW.

PACKED LIGHT, AND SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. SEND FOR CIRCULAR. We are the Largest Growers of Verbenas in the country.

Our plants cannot be surpassed.

J. L. DILLON, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Extraordinary Offer!!

GERANIUM

In bud and bloom. 2½-inch pots, $5.00 per 100. Express prepaid to any part of U. S. A.

HENRY EICHHOLZ. Florist. WAYNESBORO, PA.

CHEAP FOR CA 1000 CANNAS

3-inch pots at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 for the lot of 1000. Egandale, Chas. Henderson, Queen Char-

ANDERS RASMUSSEN, NEW ALBANY, IND.

Geraniums

Best mixed varieties for bedding, all in buds, strong, healthy plants; 3½ inch pots, $3 00 per 100; 2½-inch pots, $2.00 per 100.

Cannas 4-inch pots, fine plants; Madam Crozy, Charles Henderson and B. Brown, $5 00 per 100. Cash with orders.

CARL E. TAUBE, Proprietor, Paxton Creenhouses, - Harrisburg, Pa.

PRICES GREATLY REDUCED Cape Cod Pink Pond Lily

For price lists, Plants and Cut Flowers, address the original cultivators.....

CHIPMAN BROS. SANDWICH, & (CAPE COD), & MASS.

BENJ. CONNELL, Florist, WEST GROVE, PA.

10,000 Ampelopsis Veitchil, fine dormant pot plants, 1 and 2-year old; price 3 and 6c 10 000 pot-grown Cannas, cream of hedding sorts. 20 000 Violets; 20 000 Carnationa; Spirea Anthony Waterer and Blue Spirea; Strawherry-Raspberry and other new amall fruits. All must be sold. Ask for prices. Address

BENJ. CONNELL, Wast Crove, Pa.

Thos. A. McBeth. SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

STOCK...

A Rere Bargain In Bedding Plants. Ceraniums—Grant. White, Scarlet and fineat vars., 4-loch pots, extra strong, $5.00 per 100. The following at $3.00 per 100; 33e inch pots: Abutilous, 3 vara.; Artiflery Plants; Fuchsias, Storm King, etc.; Ceraniums, Graut, etc.; Heliotropes, 3 vara; Lantanas, 3 vars. All are extra strong, in bud, sire to please. Cash, or one hair cash and halance C. O. D.

Do not forget to say "saw your ad. in AMERICAN FLORIST" when corresponding with advertisers.

ROEMER'S ROEMER'S Superb Prize Pansies The finest strain of Pansies in the World. INTRODUCER AND GROWER OF ALL THE LEADING NOVELTIES. Highest Award Inter. Exhibition at Hamburg, 1897. Catalogue free on application. Fred. Roemer, Seed Grower, - QUEDEINBURG, GERMANY.

Highest Award Interburg, 1897. Catalogue free

Fred. Roemer,
Seed Grower, - QUEDEINBURG, GERMANY.

"Seed Grower, - QUEDEINBURG, GERMANY."

"Seed Grower, - QUEDEINBURG, GERMANY."

"Superb colors and exture."

"and texture."

In Trade Packets at $1.00 each. M. B. FAXON,

Lock Box 1528, BOSTON, MASS. Correspondence solicited.

THE JENNINGS STRAIN.

PANSIES
THE JENNINGS STRAIN.
THEY ARE GRAND.
Fine stocky plants in bud
and bloom, $10 and $15 per 100 by express; small plants,
75c by mail. Pausy seed, $1.00 per pkt. Aster seed, Semple's pink, $1.00 per oz. Cash with order.

E. B. JENNINGS.

Lock Box 254. SOUTHPORT, CONN.

Crower of the Finest Pansies.

PANSIES IN BLOOM

$2.50 per 100. $20.00 per 1000.

S. MUIR,

3530 MICHIGAN AVE., - CHICAGO.

PANSIES IN BUD AND BLOOM

Extra fine plants, $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000. Cash with the order.

Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Chestaut Hill. PHILAGELPHIA, PA. Money Order P. O., Station II, Philla.

Extra Fine Rooted Cuttings

BY MAIL. A FEW THOUSAND LEFT.
Colens, 8 varieties, 40c per 100; $5.00 per 1000. 1 (eithorop, $1.00 per 100. Salvia, 4 varieties, 75c per 10;
Daisles, yellow and white, $1.00 per 100. Agerstim, 75c per 100. 2000 Assorted Geraniums from 3-inch pots, $3.00 per 100. English Daisles, $2.00 per 100

MILLBROOK LEA CREENHOUSES, ... Mauli. WHITFORD, PA.

VEGETABLE PLANTS

Tomato, Cabbage, Leituce, Celery and Sweet Potato, 1b cts. per 100; $1 00 per 1000.

Pepper and Egg Plants, 25c per 100; $2 00 per 1000.
Cauliflower Snowball, 35c per 100; $2.50 per 1000.
All plants by mail, 10c per 100 extra Price list for large quantities. Cash with order.

R. VINCENT, Jr. & SON, White Marsh, Md.

5.000 SMILAX...

From flats, by mall, 50c per 100, 84,00 per 1000 From 2-inch pots, $2,25 per 100, $13,00 per 1000 Geraniums from 2-inch pots, $2,25 per 100; $20,00 per 1000. Cash with the order. Send for samples. Fred Boerner, CAPE MAY CITY, N.J.

Omaha

THE LANDSCAPE GARDENING AT THE TRANS-MISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION WHICH OPENS

The landscape features of the Trans-Mississippi exposition have progressed so far that beauty can now be discerned at almost any part of the spacious grounds. The Court of Honor is fast assuming a finished appearance, with broad walks and parking in front of various buildings connected with colonnades bordered by lawn and shrubbery. In the lawn we see numerous spots left for flower beds. In the center of the court is a broad lagoon in the west end of which, in front of the massive government building, a fine clectric fountain will be displayed.

Across the center of the lagoon, now nearing completion, a bridge of artistic design connects either side with an island which will be a spot of beauty. Here are spacious flower beds ready to receive the various plants which will greatly add to the beauty of the court.

At the east end of the lagoon is a great viaduct over Sherman avenue, connecting the Grand Court with the Bluff tract. where the principal agricultural, horticultural and state exhibits are to be made. In passing over this viaduct one is afforded the most pleasing landscape view of the exposition. In the foreground is the Grand Plaza, bordered by trees of symmetrical shape, while to the east the work of the landscape architect is dis-played in shrubbery and bordered walks. In the background, interwoven, if I may use the term, is the natural scenery, the Missouri River and the timber covered bluffs of Iowa.

Around the horticultural building are flower beds of every shape and style, and opposite to the main entrance to the building a large aquatic basin awaits There are to be two other outexhibits. door displays of aquatics, and the beds will be filled with exhibits from all parts of the Union.

More than ten thousand trees and shrubs have been planted in the past few months and are showing a very fine growth.

The landscape designs are the work of R. Ulrich, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a man of national reputation, who also had charge of the World's Fair grounds. Jos. Had-kinson, assistant to Mr. Ulrich, has executed the work with great care, and at present is one of the busiest men on the grounds. At one time this department had something like four hundred men on the pay roll. G. R. H.

Worcester, Mass.

The weather is becoming more spring hke and planting out will soon be at its height but as yet little has been done, as the last two weeks have been wet and cold. Flowers still continue to be fully up to the demand and thequality has not Commenced to deteriorate. Trade is holding up fairly well and prices remain firm for first class stock

Visitors in town: J. Blannov, Holland, and John Ringier, representing J Laughan, Chicago

Tro west O. The Oakwoods Cemetery Association has reclicited Co. W. L. Haynesses president and John Rathbun as superintendent.

Torribo, O. The floral decorations which George V Heint prepared for the Secon Barnes worlding surpassed any thing in that Jac Foretofore attempted m Toderloo

Kraft's Plant Tonic

For Plants, Palms and Flowers

A Wonderful Preparation for the Promotion of Plant Life, Des-truction of Insects and Scale.......

The Tonic makes the foliage of the plant soft and pliable and 84 & 86 RANOOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE.

14 BARCLAY STREET, NEW YORK.

EXTENSION THE MODEL EXTENSION SUPPORT

QUEENS N. V., Feb. 16, '97.

MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y., Dear Shr.—
I bave tested your latest model Carnation Support and am free to say that I consider it the best whre carnation support that I have ever seen.
It is quickly and easily appited, and I think will prove very durable, and you certainly deserve great credit for the invention.

Very truly yours,

('W. WARD.

FLATHUSH, BROOKLYN,
N. Y., Feb. 18, 97
MR THERON PARKER,
Dear SIT; - Your wire stake
is certainly a gem Without hesitating we indorse it
as an up to-date carnation
support. Yours truly,
DAILLEDOUZE BROS.

W. HOBOKEN, N. J., Feb. 18, 97.

MR. THERON PARKER, Brooklyn, N. V. Dear Shrett glees are much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in getting up earnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as any-body will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal curnation support, a think I have been looking for for a long time, Wishing you every success in the sale of them, I am Yours truly, E. ASMUS, it discount on early orders.

Write for price list and discount on early orders.

THERON PARKER, 22 Morton SI. BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Scollay

Sprinkler....

INDUSTENSABLE J. A. Scollay, Maker, H Myrtle Ave

Brooklyn. N. Y.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Gen'l Western Agents, 84 Randolph St., CHICACO.

SHADING Weather Proof Paper ready for use on sush or greenhouses, Unexpelled for Palm, Fern or Propagating houses. It will be spout bed cloth considerably

e in rolls about 16 pounds in PAPER of M1 $2.50 the roll

August Rölker & Sons. Snie Mnfrs. Agents. - 52 Dey Street, NEW YORK.

Florists! Seedsmen! Nurserymen!

DATE OF THE BOTTOM TO THE STATE OF THE BOTTOM TO THE BOTTOM THE BO GEO. L. HARDING, PROBLEM AND PROFESSIONS. BINCHAMION, N. Y.

Stems...

Strong and Clean

...Dust BEST QUALITY Bale (400 lbs.) $2 00 100 lbs. $50 Ton. 9,00 500 lbs. $500

T. W. Wood & Sons.

Seeds, Bulbs and Supplies for Florists and Gardeners, Send for Catalogue.

... RICHMOND, VA.

FOR SALE BY SEED STORES FOR FREE PAMPILET LOUISVILLE SPIRIT CURED TOBACCO CO

STEMS DUST EXTRAGT

IBOTTOM PRICES.

VAUGHAN'S_SEED STORE,

Chicago. New York.

Nashville. Tenn.

The cut flower trade has been unusually dull for the past week. The plant trade is rather active, and in a few more days all, or nearly all, the planting for the season will have been done, and the front yards of Nashville's many pretty residences will be gay with all sorts of blossoms. Plants are very cheap, twenty good varieties selling for $1. The market house, which is never without its quota of flower sellers, displays daily an immense stock of every kind of plant, and quite a good business is done there. The marketers are, for the most part, the many smaller growers from the outskirts of the eity. They also sell bunches of cut flowers at remarkably cheap prices, the stock, however, would hardly be shown in the floral stores. Still it finds purchasers, and the goodly housewife leaving the market with a generously laden basket, frequently finds room upon the top for a good-sized bouquet which costs but 5 or 10 cents.

Some of the wealthy amateur florists adjacent to the city are showing fine specimens of the Baroness Rothschild and Mrs. J. Laing varieties of roses, grown in gardens where the rich native soil has not been exhausted by long cultivation. The florists may handle these if they choose, as the growers are not averse to selling, but as a general thing the blooms are distributed to the friends of the growers, as many as 100 at a time.

Florists are filling outside beds for summer blooming, although the nights are still cool and frosty, so as to give the plants time to become established before the spring drouth comes on, followed by our long, hot, dry summer. Green-houses will soon be emptied of their stock and replanted for next season.

M. C. Dorris.

FIRST-CLASS GOODS and CORRECT PRICES

have forced us to the front and today we are the largest manufacturers of....

IRON RESERVOIR VASES

and Lawn Settees in America. . . . A 40-page catalogue for the asking.

McDonald Bros. 108-114 Liberty St.,

COLUMBUS, 0.

Mention American Florat

NEW & SECOND-HAND MATERIAL,

purchased from Sheriff Receiver, and Assignee, sales at less than one-half prices. Pipe and Fittings Hove, Florists' Wire, Hot Water Heaters, Greenhouse Bollers and Engines, Robe, Light Wrough Iron Pipe, Glass Sash and thousands of other articles, for as, e by CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO Largest Mail O'der Depot for New and Second-Hand Material in the World.

W. 35TH & IRON STS., CHICACO.

EVANS' IMPROVED CHALLENGE VENTILATING A*PPARATUS* QUAKER CITY MACHINE WORKS.

FOR SALE CHEAP.

GLASS for Greenhouses, Conservatories, Hother Sashes and Mats, Paints, Oils, etc. THE REED GLASS & PAINT CO., 456 W. Broadway, NEW YORK.

GREENHOUSE MATERIAL

Cal. Red Cedar and Louisiana Cypress. BEST GRADES. PERFECT WORKMANSHIP.

A. DIETSCH & CO. SHEFFIELD AVE. CHICAGO, ILL.

Standard Flower

OUR POTS ARE OF THE BEST QUALITY.

We ship all goods from Cincinnati, guaranteeing lowest freight rates and prompt delivery.

Write us before placing your orders elsewhere

HILLDI

OTTERY

COMPANS

713-719 WHARTONST

PHILADELPHIA PA

ANDARD

BRANCH WAREHOUSES:

Kearney and Westside Aves., Jersey City, N. J. Jackson Av. & Pearson St., Long Island City, N. Y.

FLOWER POTS

ALL KINDS.

List and SAMPLES FREE.

J. G. SWAHN'S SONS, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

STANDARD POTS

🔤 GEO. KELLER & SON.

Flower Pots.

Before buying write for prices.

361-363 Herndon Street, near Wrightwood Ave.,

CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO., Covington, Ky.

STANDARDS"

FULL SIZE AND WIDE BOTTOMS. BULB PANS AND AZALEA POTS.

DETROIT FLOWER POT M'F'Y. DETROIT, MICH., 490 HOWARD ST. HARRY BALSLEY, Rep.

یو مو Standard FLOWER

If your greenhouses are within 500 mites of the Capitol, write us; we can save you money.

W. H. ERNEST,

Station M. N. E.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Made by Good Railroad Facilities KELLER BROS.

Special Attention Given to Mail Orders, and Special Sizes Made to Order.

NORRISTOWN, PA.

Price Lists Furnished on Application.

STANDARD FLOWER POTS

Send for price list of Standard Flower Pots, Hanging Vases, Seed Pans and Cylinders for Cut Flowers Lawn Vases, 17x17-in., $1.00; 19x20-in., $1.50; Bases 12-in. high 50c. Address

HILFINGER BROS. POTTERY, FORT EDWARD, N. Y.

AUGUST ROLKER & SONS, AGTS., 52 DEY STREET. - NEW YORK CITY.

Pots

Standard Pots at the following low prices for cash with order .

Harrison Pottery, - Harrison, Ohio.

Successful Growers are Wanted

CHICACO, ILL.

A SPECIALTY

To know that they can dispose of all their surplus stock by advertising in the American Florist. TRY IT NOW! .....tising in the American Florist.

Smilax, Asparagus and Tuberoses

Replying to "Subscriber," who inquires whether young smilax and asparagus from seed require shading and as to the best way to start tuberoses, would say that shading is necessary for young asparagus or smilax plants. There is no better way to start tuberoses than in 31g or 4-inch pots plunged in a hothed. Otherwise, if short of room, they may be put in sand in boxes and placed under the benches in the greenhouse, where they will start rapidly.

GREENSBORO, ALA.-The rose show by the Presbyterian ladies, April 22, was a the Presbyterian ladies, April 22, was a great success. Prizes were awarded to Mesdames C. E. Waller, P. A. Tutwiler, J. M. P. Otts, A. L. Stollenwereh, L. M. Otts, and T. R. Ward.

ARE THE BEST

For Heating Greenhouses, Conservatories and Dwellings.

Our botlers consume all gases from the fuel, therefore making it the most desirable boiler for greenhouse heating on the mar-

Send to day for Catalogue and Price

GORTON SIDE FEED Boiler

bealer that will keep n stendy breat to a greenhouse all night without attention. No sitting up all night to keep a good fire harther information on application

36

GORTON & LIDGERWOOD CO. 96 Liberty Street, NEW YORK.

SEND FOR FLORISTS FREE UPON CATALOGUE

74 FRANKLIN ST BOSTON. MASS. NEW YORK CITY BI

For Greenhouses, Gardens and Lawns in liberal quantities, every hour of the year, whether the wind & blows or not & & & & &

Improved Rider Hot Air Pump Improved Ericsson Hot Air Pump

Can be run by any ignorant boy without danger. Explosion impossible. Prices greatly reduced. In use in every part of the world.

RIDER-ERICSSON ENGINE CO.

22 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK. 191-193 High St., BOSTON. 684 Craig St., MONTREAL, P. Q.

86 Lake St., CHICAGO. 29-31 N. 7th St., PHILADELPHIA. Send for catalogue "A 3."

heeler-Stenzel Co.

----1-23-23-23-23-23<sup>3</sup>

Make your contracts for next season now. We can deliver to any part of the country and Save You Money .....

Greenhouse Glass

72 Sudbury St., BOSTON, MASS.

STANDARD VENTILATING MACHINE.

NONE EQUAL IT Strength AND Durability

Send for Catalogue.

NOTHING Flimsy Complicated about it.

HIPPARD, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO,

LOUISIANA Cypress Green House Material.

RED CEDAR

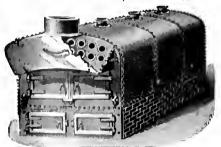

Write for Estimates.

Visit in neutron the

American Florist

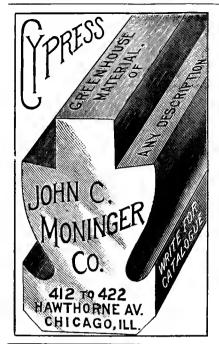

when writing advertisers

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.

Boliers made of the best of material, shell, firebox sheets and heads of steed, water space all around (front, sides and back). Write for information.

 $\times$

You can not get a GOOD THING TOF nothing. But the price of this apparatus is next to nothing. Send for price and description to

J. D. CARMODY, Evansville, Ind.

EN-HOUSE CONSTRU

___X____X____X____X____X

This has been a specialty with us for many years and to us is due the credit for many of the great improvements that have been made in the construction of wooden green-houses. To those that buy our we furnish, free of cost, complete detail drawings from which any intelligent workman can put up the material correctly. We have plenty of time to write letters ABOUT OUR BUSINESS, and we will be glad to hear from those contemplating building.

Clear Cypress Building Material

Write for Circulars or Estimates.

LOCKLAND LUMBER CO.

LOCKLAND, OHIC.

SALESROOMS:

133 Centre Street. - NEW YORK CITY. 510 Arch Street, - PHILADELPHIA.

COTTAGE BOILER

WESTERN BRASS MFG. CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS: HOLBROOK, MERRILL & STETSON SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

> EUROPEAN AGENT: AUG. EGGERS, BREMEN.

B. SMITH CO., Westfield, Mass.

On Your Coal Bills

If your Houses are Heated by a Furman Boiler.

Send for large Illustrated Catalogue, Florists' Edition. Let us make you an estimate FREE.

THE HERENDEEN MFG. CO.

20 Vine Street, GENEVA, N. Y. Philadelphia: 1019 Betz Building.

Boston: 54 Oliver St. New York:

BRANCH OFFICES: 39 Cortlandt St.

KENDA

Plans and estimates furnished for all kinds of Houses. "N.B." Will necept in pay-ment-Part Cash, Balance on Mortgage. A large stock of Greenhouse Equipment cou-stantly on hand.....

GREENHOUSE CONTRACTOR, STEAM AND HOT WATER ENGINEER 🥦 🚜 🚜

The Largest Builder

Of Gugumber Houses

GENERAL OFFICE AND LEOMINSTER, MASS.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | -                |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------|
| Index                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | tο Δ.        | dvertisers.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                  |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | LO A         | averusers.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                  |
| Allen J K                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1233         | Lord & Rownham Ca                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1255             |
| Aming E C                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1252         | Louisville Tupacuo (2)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 12.6             |
| American RoseCoAming E CAmos, Nicholas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1245         | Lucas J & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1250             |
| Armstrong Luther                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 1239         | Lynch W E                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 7.12             |
| Baller r A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1238         | Manning Jacob W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 14 - 51954 : |
| Bartlett Geo S                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1246         | Manz J & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 2.5              |
| Bassett & Washburn.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |              | Maplewood Cut Flo Cu                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1242             |
| Armstrong Luther Baller F A. Bannung Frank. Bartlett Geo S. Bassett & Washhurn. Barersdorfer H & Co. Binne A & Co.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 1244         | Long D B Lord & Britham Ce. Louisville Hubbook Ca Lincas J & Co. L | 1212             |
| Blanc A & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1259         | McCarthy N F & Co. 1                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1243             |
| Bopoink L. C                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 12.59        | Me 'arthy & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 12 5             |
| Boerner Fred                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1345         | McCullough J Chas,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 238              |
| Bronton Et Co. 1231                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 12501256 | McDanald McManue                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 1241             |
| Bnalong J A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1234         | McDonald & Steele.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 243              |
| Burpee W Atlee & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1358         | Middlemans Archie                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1236             |
| Cambridge Tile Mix                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 1214         | Millbrook Lea Green-                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1945             |
| Chadwick Chas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1244         | Miliang Frank                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1233             |
| Chicago Wrecking Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1247         | Moninger J C Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 249              |
| Chipman Bros                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1245         | Moon Samuel C 1236                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 242              |
| Cleary & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1250         | Morris Floral Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 1225             |
| Cole Geo E & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 125          | Mound City Flo Co., 1                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 231              |
| Coles W W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1343         | Mulr 8                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1245             |
| Conard & Jones Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1215         | Nanz & Nenner                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 240              |
| Conley John & Son                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1240         | Natifio Busin Trade                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1230             |
| Cottage Gardens                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1243         | N Y Cut Flower Ex.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 12.3             |
| Craig Robt & Son                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 1240         | N Y Cut Flower Co!                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 122              |
| Critchell's Son B P                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1240         | Parinock F I                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1260.1943.   |
| I noningham J H                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1215         | Parker Theron                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 246              |
| Detroit Fio'w Put Mig.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 247          | Peacock W P                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1236             |
| DeMeyer Arthur                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1240         | Pennock Sam'l S                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1233             |
| Dietach A & Co.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1235         | Postma J.K                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 12431231     |
| Differ d L.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1215         | Prince A G & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 12:22            |
| Donaghue A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1212         | Quaker City Mo'h Wki                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1247             |
| DornerFred & Sons Co.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 1243         | Randall A L                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1232             |
| Fighbultz Henry                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1245         | Raynor J L.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 233              |
| Elliott W H                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1234         | Reed Glass & Paint Col                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 247              |
| Elita & Pollworth 1234                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1217         | Regan Printing House                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 12.5             |
| Ernest W H                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1247         | Rice M & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1202             |
| Felthonsen J E                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1215         | Ricksecker C H                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 257              |
| Flo Mnt Fire Ins Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1255         | Rider, Ericsson Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 248              |
| Bassett & Washharn.  1232 Bayersdorfer II & CO. Blinne A & CO. Boroink L. C. Cambridge Tile Mr. Carmody J. D. Chadwick Ghas Chicasy W. C. Coles W. W. Conard & Boddington Coles W. W. Conard & Jones Co. Connell. Berj. Conley John & Son. Cottake Gardens Crair Robit & Son. Critchell's Son B. P. Crowl Fern Co. Conningham J. H. Detroit Flow Pot Mr. Dickinson Albert Co. Dietisch A. & Co. Dietis | 1243         | Reed Glass & Paint Co. Regan Printing House remoers Bros. Rice M & Co. Ricksecker C H. Rider. Ericsson Co Roemer Fred Rowers P'k Floral Co. Roemer Fred Rowers P'k Floral Co. Roemer Fred Rowers P'k Floral Co. Roemer Fred Romers Pirol Sollay Jno A. Scott Jno Shepherd Mrs T B. Sheridan W F. Selebrecht & Son. Skabenra Dio Co. Smith Paint B Co. Smith The H B Co. Smith W C Co. Son's chmidt & Junge. South Park Floral Co. Stearns Lumber Co. Stearns Lumber Co. Stearns Lumber Co. Stelens E. Struck J N & Bro                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1240             |
| Calgo Chas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1233         | Rolker A & Sons                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 246              |
| 0.1 117                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 125+         | Rupp Jno F                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1245             |
| Giblin & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1250         | Saiter W H                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1212             |
| Corton & Lingerwood                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1 345        | Scollay Ino A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1246             |
| Gutta Percha Rub Co .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 1246         | Scott Jno                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1240             |
| Gibbons H W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 129          | Shepherd Mrs T B                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 244              |
| Harouck Ley & Suns                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 1211         | Shehrecht & Son                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1510             |
| Harding Geo L                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1246         | Skabenra Din Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 246              |
| Harrison Pottery                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 1247         | Smith The H B Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 1249             |
| Hartford H E                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1204         | Smith Nation Succession                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 12451933     |
| Harding Geo L Harrison Pottery. Hartford H E Hart M A Heacock Job. Helkes W F Helni Jos Herer den Mis Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 1242         | Son'schmidt & Junge.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1213             |
| Helkes W F                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1242         | South Park Floral Co.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 244              |
| Helni Jos                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1242         | South Side Floral Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1244             |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1244         | St Louis Cut FlowerCol                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 234              |
| Hillinger Bros                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1247         | Steffens E                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1237             |
| Hill E G & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1244         | Struck J N & Bru                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 248              |
| Hughlage & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 12.0         | Sutherland Geo A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 1233             |
| Holton & Hunkel Co.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 124          | Sutton E B Jr                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1243             |
| Honeur H M Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1247         | Swahns sons J G                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 247              |
| Horan Edw C                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1235         | Transly & Schenck                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1240             |
| Hull Leon L                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1231         | Tokyo Nurserles                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 236              |
| Herr Albert M. Hillinger Bros. Hill E G & Co. Hillinger E                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 122          | Vance Botler W'ks                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1248             |
| Illinois Cut Flower Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1232         | Van Zanten Bros                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1239             |
| Hall Leon L. Hant E H. Hant E H. Hant E H. Jackson & Perkins Co Japanese Nursery. Jenning E B Jones Hirsm T Kasting W F Keller Broe Maler Cook Sons                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1295         | St Lonis Cut FlowerCoSteffens E.Struck J N & Bro                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 1246             |
| Jenninge E B                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1245         | Vanghan, McKellar &                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                  |
| Jones Hirsm T                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 12.95        | Vangnan, McKonar &WintersonVincent R & SonWabash R RWalker Fart Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 1239             |
| Kasting W FKeller BrosKeller Geo & Sons                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1247         | Wahash R R                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 123              |
| Keller Geo & Sons                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1247         | Walker Fert Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1238             |
| Kelsey Harlan PKendall Geo MKennicott Bros Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 125          | Walker Fert CoWatson G C 1235Weathered's Son TW                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 1235             |
| Kennicutt Brow Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1.2414       | Waher H & Son : W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1212             |
| 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 1 (2.71)     | Weeber & Don                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1238             |
| King J M                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 1232         | Welch Bros                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 12.53            |
| Kraft's Plant Tonle .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 1246         | Weathered's Son TW Weber H & Son Weeber & Don Welch Bros Wheeler-Stenzel Co Whillidin Pot Co. Williams The F R Co. Winter S B.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 12481347     |
| Kroeschell Bros Co.,Knehn C A.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 1248         | Williams & Crittenden.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1215             |
| Knehn (* AKnhl Geo ALager & Hurrell                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1242         | Williams The FR Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 1240             |
| Lager & Hnrrell                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1240         | Winter S B                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 12321940     |
| Lang Julius Ley John II Littledeld H F. Lickland Lam Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 1240         | Williams The FRCOWinter S BWitthold GeoWood Bros.Wood T WWors C W.Young Jno.Vonng Thes Jr                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 12431243     |
| LittleBeld H F                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1244         | Wood T W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 1246             |
| Lockland Lam Co .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1249         | Wors C W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 134              |
| Lonsdale Edwin,1240, 1242,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1215         | Young Them Ir                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | ) 수당12년      |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                  |

Boilers

OP HIGH

For GREENHOUSES.

See nur Catalogue.....

Steam and Hot Water. Giblin & Co., Utica, N. Y.

harmonious combinations of 72 colors on our sample card. Send for one. It will help you to select colors that will beautify as well as preserve. They are practical. JOHN LUCAS & CO., Philadelphia, New York and Chicago.

ALWAYS mention the AMERICAN FLO-MIST when writing to advertisers.

Hitchings

HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS

GREENHOUSE HEATING AND VENTILATING APPARATUS.

THE HIGHEST AWARDS RECEIVED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR FOR HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTURE, GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION AND HEATING APPARATUS.

Conservatories, Greenhouses, Palm Houses, etc., erected complete, with our patent Iron Frame Construction. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue.

> NEW YORK. 233 Mercer Street.

LORD & BURNHAM CO.

LARGEST BUILDERS OF GREENHOUSE STRUCTURES

And Manufacturers of Heating and Ventilating Apparatus.

Plans and estimates furnished on application for Heating and Ventilating Appartus erected complete or for material only. Highest awards at Worlds Fair.

يو

Send 4 cts. postage for catalogue of Patent Iron Greenhouse Construction.

Standard Hot Water Heater IN 4 SIZES.

Specially adapted for moderate ranges. We also make Sectional Heaters for large ranges. Highest economy. Reasonable prices.

Send 5 ets. postage to New York Office for latest calalogue of Heating and Ventilating Apparatus. Estimales furnished for Cypress Greenhouse Malerial.

GENERAL OFFICE AND WORKS: NEW YORK OFFICE . 160 FIFTH AVE., Cor 21st St. IRVINCTON-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.

Thos. W. Weathered's Son

ESTABLISHED 1859.

Horticultural Architect ....and Builder

Manufacturer of Greenhouse Heating and Ventilating Apparatus, Cypress Greenhouse Material of every description. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue. * .*.

141 Centre St., NEW YORK.

Mention American Florist

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BY HAVING ME

BUILD AND HEAT YOUR GREENHOUSES HENRY W. GIBBONS 134-136-138 LIBERTY STREET,

NEW YORK.

EXPERT ADVICE AND PLANS FURNISHED.

ESTIMATES FREE.

10 1 100 GoodelHH

THE AMERICAN FL

America is "the Prow of the Vessel; there may be more comfort Amidships, but we are the first to touch Unknown Seas."

Vol. XIII.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK, MAY 21, 1808.

No. 520.

The American Florist

Copyright 1898, by American Florist Company. Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter,

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY.

324 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Eastern Office: 67 Bromfield St., Boston.

Subscription, $1.00 a year. To Europe, $2.00. Subscriptions eccepted only from the trade.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

OFFICERS—WM. F. GUDE, Washington, D. C., president; A. DONAGHUE. Omaha, Neb., vice-president; W. J. STEWART, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass., secretary: H. B. BEATTY, Oll City, Pa., treasurer. The fourteenth annual meeting will be held at Omaha, Neb., Angust 16-19, 1888.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY. Annual Convention at Philadelphia, February, 1899. ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster Pa., Secretary.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA. Annual meeting at Omaha, Neb., August, 1898. ELMER D. SMITH, Adrian, Mich., secretary.

CONTENTS.

| Seed breeding                                                                                       | 1201   |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------|
| Experiments with chemical fertilizers (illus)                                                       | 1252   |
| Rose Duchess de Brabant growing in coal                                                             |        |
| nshes (illus.)                                                                                      | 1259   |
| Thomas Carthylas tillus                                                                             | 1254   |
| Thomas Cattledge (musi)                                                                             | 1254   |
| The outlook at Omaha                                                                                | 1.404  |
| Horticultural billiding at the Trans-Missis-                                                        |        |
| sippi Exposition (illus.)                                                                           | 1255   |
| Notes and comments                                                                                  | 1255   |
| Notes and comments                                                                                  | 125t   |
| Carnations                                                                                          | 1256   |
| Enchsia Gracienx (illus)                                                                            | 1257   |
| Helpful reminders                                                                                   | 1257   |
| Helpful reminders Dwarf phloxes                                                                     | 1958   |
| A drammon's translilla                                                                              | 1268   |
| A drummer s twaddie.                                                                                | 1258   |
| A drummer's twaddle.New York.Philadelphia                                                   |        |
| Philadelphia                                                                                        | 1259   |
| Boston                                                                                              | 1259   |
| Chicago                                                                                             | 1259   |
| Cincinnati                                                                                          | 1260   |
| Paris.                                                                                              | 1260   |
| The pruning book                                                                                    | 1261   |
| Lawn grass                                                                                          | 1261   |
| Boston Chicago Cincinnati Paris The pruning book Lawn grass Greenhouse building                     | 1261   |
| How to keep catalogues                                                                              | 1261   |
| How to keep catalogues                                                                              | 1-0111 |
| depositment                                                                                         | 1261   |
| department                                                                                          | 1261   |
| Springheid, Ins                                                                                     |        |
| Omana                                                                                               | 126    |
| Pittsburg.                                                                                          | 126:   |
| department. Springfield, Ills. Omaha Pittsburg. Worcester, Mass Butwalo                             | 126    |
| Buffalo                                                                                             | 126    |
| The nursery trade                                                                                   | 1269   |
| Utica, N. Y.,                                                                                       | 1268   |
| Kansas City.                                                                                        | 1269   |
| Los Angeles Cal.                                                                                    | 1269   |
| Woreester, Mass Buffalo The nursery trade Utien, N. V. Kansas City. Los Angeles, Cal The seed trade | 1270   |
| The seed trade                                                                                      | 1270   |
| Industry Many                                                                                       | 127    |
| American Property and other was a maldon.                                                           | 127    |
| Madian N I                                                                                          | 127    |
| Mauison, N.d.,                                                                                      | 127    |
| Duluth, Munn.American Beauty and other rose problemsMadison, N. J.Cleveland.            | 127    |
| Plant tabels.                                                                                       |        |
|                                                                                                     | 127    |
| Plant labels                                                                                        | 117    |

Morrison, Ill.—R. R. Davis has sold out his wholesale and retail floral establishment to M. E. Miller, of Polo, Ill,

Seed Breeding.

It is a fundamental law of nature, one upon which the stability of the animal and vegetable kingdoms rest, that every living organism is like the one which produced it. Men do not "gather grapes from thorns nor figs from thistles," but simple as the law is in its statement, it is far from simple in its development and results. Not only is the character of every animal and plant influenced by that of its immediate parents, but through them its accestors back for many generations exert an influence on it, and because of this, and the varying degrees of potency of these many influences, each individual animal or plant differs in some degree from every other. It is evident that the more nearly alike all these ancestors and hence their influences are, the more cer-tain we may be that their descendants will be like them. If you know that back for twenty generations each of the 2,097,-150 ancestors of an unborn colt were black we could be sure that the combination of all these influences would result in its being black, but if we only knew that the father and mother were black and knew nothing regarding the 2,097,148 other ancestors we would not be so certain. It is true that the influence of the immediate ancestors is usually greater than that of any one of the preceeding ones, but supposing the father and mother were black and the 2,097,148 other animals were all white the influence of the first two would have to be more than 1,046,574 times as strong as the average influence of each of the others in order to overbalance them, while if no two of the 2,097,150 were exactly alike in color it would be impossible for any one to tell what the combination of all these influences would produce.

Although these principles of heredity are not so easily traced in the vegetable as in the animal kingdom, they are at work there in the same way, and an illustration of their working in animals is equally an illustration of their working in plants, and whether we merely glance at such figures as we have given or look into the subject more fully, we shall feel assured in proportion as we give the subject careful study that the chief factors in determining the character of every animal and that of the plant every seed will produce are the influences exerted by its ancestors. A pedigree is a record of ancestry, and in so far as it is truthful and complete it enables us to predict with certainty the character of an unborn animal or the plant our pedigreed seed will produce. In the illustration given we are certain that the colt would be black, but we could not tell whether it would be big or little, fast or slow, gentle or vicious. All these qualities would depend upon the combination of other influences of which we know nothing. All the plants of a given variety are in a general way alike, but there is a wide difference in the degree to which different plants of the same variety show the distinctive merits of the sort. If our pedigree simply states that every ancestor was of a certain variety, we know that our plant will be of that variety, but we cannot know how well it will show the distinctive merits of the sort any more than in the illustration we could tell what sort of a black colt we would have.

Simple and plain as these principles of breeding are, so simple and plain that it seems childish to state them, they are often ignored by seed breeders who are content to simply know that no mixed or 'off' plant is allowed to exert its baleful influence; but if we are to produce the highest and best type of a sort we cannot be satisfied simply to know that every ancestor was of the sort, but must know that each one was the highest and best type of the sort in its generation. To this end a very clear and perfect conception of what the best plant of that sort should be, not only as to one characteristic, but as to all, is very essential. In this respect our seed breeders are far behind those who make different breeds of animals a study, and because of this failure on their part our varieties of vegetables and flowers are constantly changing and 'running out.' Let me illustrate by an actual experience: Some years ago I visited a cabbage grower who had raised his own seed for more than twenty years and was said to have established a variety of great merit. I went with him into one of the finest ten acre fields of cabbage I ever saw and asked him to select an ideal plant of his variety. He did so, and I carefully noted its every characteristic. We went to another part of the field and I asked him to select a second. He did so, and this plant differed materially from the first in length of stem, size, color and shape of outer leaf, shape and color of the head. In short, was as different from the first as are most varieties, though both were good marketcabbages. He selected for me five ideal cabbages such as he would save for seed to breed from, and no two were alike. In answer to questions he said he simply looked for a good market cabbage, paying no attention to other points. He was a splendid cabbage grower, so good that every one wanted to get hold of his variety; but it is strange that in the hands of other cultivators it seemed to "sport" badly, to lose its char-acter and to "run out." The first requisite, then, for the production of good, of pedigreed, seed is a clear conception of exactly what you want a plant of that variety to be, and the clearer this conception is as regards every part, even of those that are not a part of the market product, the better. WILL W. TRACY.

Experiments with Chemical Fertilizers on Greenhouse Plants. Paper read by Professor W. E. Britton before the New York Farists. Club. May 9, 1808.]

CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK.

CARNATIONS.

During the winter of 1896-97 a few carnation plants were grown by the aid of fertilizer chemicals, and the results were such that we were induced to plan and carry out the following season an experiment with carnation plants. Over 200 plants of three varieties, Daybreak, Alaska and Wm Scott were used. Benches were five and three-fourths inches deep and were divided into equal plots having an area of 14.53 square feet. plots were filled with compost and the remaining plots with coal ashes with 3% of peat moss. Six plants of each variety (making eighteen in all) were set in each plot about the second day of October. All dead leaves and lateral buds were saved from each plot separately, and later analyzed. The blooms were picked when well open, and in about the same manner as they would be gathered for market. except that the diameter of each flower, length of stem and any imperfection or characteristic was noted and all carefully recorded. Flowers of each variety from each plot were also weighed. Chemical analyses were made of the cut flowers, and from the fresh weight of the blooms it was possible to calculate the amount of plant food which had been removed from the soil in the flowers. Analyses of the plants were made at setting time, and at the close of the experiment the old plants were removed carefully from the soil, tops and roots, and these, with the trimmings, were also analyzed. From these analyses we were able to tell the exact amounts of plant food which the plants contained at the start, and how much the plants in their flowers, foliage and roots, had taken from the soil. Knowing the quantities of fertilizer chem icals which had been applied to the coal ashes, we were thus able to make some definite calculations as to what the carnation requires chemically for its development. By means of the plants growing in the compost soil we were able to make a rough comparison. Plants in coal ashes made a good growth, toliage looked well and they bloomed more freely than the plants in compost. With Daybreak and Alaska, the blooms were larger where grown in coal ashes, but with Win. Scott there was scarcely any difference. This variety (Scott) was attacked by a disease, which many of you doubtless know under various names such as "stem ror" and "dieback," so that the experiment was impaired as regards this variet. The disease was worse on plants in the coal ashes and pear than on those in compost, though both were attacked, and it is very probable that flowers produced by these diseased plants were below the normal in size and number. The largest yield came from a plot filled with coal ashes and peat fertilized with chemicals an average of 27 3 blooms per plant of 3, 5-4 blooms per 100 square feet of bench space being produced. The largest crop was gathered from the plot in which for i granes of introgen, twelve of phosphore acid and sixty of potash were mixed wir a r the ashes and peat. This is equivalent to a dressing of 3 lbs. 14 oz. nitrate of soda, 1 lb. 1 oz. dissolved bone black and 1 lb. 13 oz. muriate of potash for each 100 square feet of bench space.

The plants when set contained about as much plant food as was taken off in the crop of blooms which they produced. This season we have continued the experiment, but the plants have not done as well in either soil as last season. Cohesion of petals which is known as "sleepiness" among some growers, was peculiar the numbers of flowers taken from the two plots. The soil of coal ashes gave larger blooms, but they were rather lighter in color than those from the compost plot. Both were equal as regards fragrance and form.

During the winter both plots have shown good thrifty plants with perfect foliage and free from mildew.

WAGNER'S SOLUTION. Some four years ago potted plants were fertilized with soluble plant food, prepared after a formula recommended to the Wm. Scott variety, and did not seem to bear any very close relationship to the quantities of nitrogen applied. It is the opinion of certain growers that this trouble is caused by too much nitrogen. We are not yet prepared to say whether they are right or wrong.

CARNATIONS GROWN IN COAL ASHES AND PEAT MOSS.

ROSES.

In October, 1897, a small section of bench space in the forcing house was equally divided, and one half filled with compost, the other with coal ashes and peat moss. To the latter was added fertilizers as follows: 15 grams nitrogen, 6 grams phos, acid and 30 grams potash. This is equivalent to 2 lbs, 12 oz. nitrate of soda, 1 lb. 1 oz. dissolved bone black, 1 lb. 15 oz. muriate of potash for each 100 square feet of bench space.

The area of each division was 7.26 The area of each division was 6.20 square feet. We happened to have on hand a few roses of the Duchesse de Brabant yariety. There were two large plants which had been growing for two seasons, and one was planted in the center of each plot, the other plants were of a season's growth, and four of them were planted in each plot, putting one in each orner around the larger plant. At first the plants in the coal ashes dropped their leaves more than those in the compost, but soon put out new ones and began to bloom. They have blossomed contin-balls in both plots ever since, and at the present time there is no difference between by Prof. Paul Wagner, Director of the German Agricultural Experiment Station at Darmstadt.

Prof. Wagner has used many solutions for watering plants, and has succeeded in growing some excellent specimen plants, according to his own illustrations, which are made from photographs. He has published the results of his work in pamphlet form.*
The solution contains:

| • | 1110      | 20.71 | 111  | ()11  | (,,   |       | 411 | 11 | ٠. |     |       |      |         |
|---|-----------|-------|------|-------|-------|-------|-----|----|----|-----|-------|------|---------|
|   |           | osoli |      |       |       |       |     |    |    |     |       | . 30 | grains. |
|   | N11       | rati  | of.  | 501   | lα.,  |       |     |    |    |     |       | 1.1  |         |
|   | 711       | Ph 14 | onf. | pot   | a sle |       |     |    |    |     |       | 25   | **      |
|   | 211       | pho   | 10 c | र्व स | nine  | 011 i | 11  |    |    |     |       | 20   | **      |
|   | $M \circ$ | h r   | 1101 | 1114  | rs c  | ir t  | 951 | ,  | 41 | i11 | 0115. |      |         |

We have called this Wagner's solution. and have it prepared and kept in our greenhouses for use at any time. At first this solution was given to rooted cuttings of geraniums, begonias, heliotropes, carnations and a few miscellaneous plants, which had just been potted; but the leaves began to drop, and the solution was withheld entirely for three weeks, when the plants had recovered and were making a good growth. Two plants each of begonia and geranium and tour of heliotrope were potted in a compost made from good turl and one-third stable mannie. To these plants no solution was given. The same number of plants were potted in the same kind of soil and watered with the solution. A third lot of plants were potted in a soil of anthraeite coal ashes and peat moss, prepared in a manner which I have already described, and watered with the solution. Solution was given the plants whenever they needed watering. It proved to be too much for them, and though they made an excellent growth for over three months there came a time when the growth could no longer continue. Plants grown in the compost and watered with the solution were the largest of all, while the smallest plants were those grown in the compost with no liquid fertilizer. Heliotrope plants grew as well in the coal ashes as in the compost, where both received the solution. Carnations were best in the compost where no solution was added. Geraniums and begonias grew best in compost with solution, and were better in the compost alone than in the coal ashes with solution.

*The Australiang Kunstlicher Dungmittel im Ohst und Germa chan in der Rlumen und Gar-ten Kultur. Third edition Paul Purey Berlin, 1862

Beginning September 18, this treatment was continued until about the first of January, when some of the highly fed geraniums began to wilt. It was soon found that the plants would not recover even though the soil was saturated with moisture.

The plants had been overfed, and an abundance of foliage and flowers had been produced, but the root system was exceedingly small. High fertilization does not tend to produce roots. The leaf surface increased while the root system did not until there came a time when the roots were unable to take up moisture as fast as it transpires, or is given off from the leaves. Then the plant wilts, and as long as the same conditions prevail it will not recover. We removed the plants, carefully washed the soil from their roots, trimmed their tops severely and potted them in ordinary soil, and they recovered. We have since used the same solution with excellent results, but we apply it less frequently. One application a week for slow growing and woody plants, and twice a week for the more rapid growing herbaceous plants seems to be sufficient.

The past winter similar experiences have been met in our tomato experiments. Through five successive crops, where the fertilizer chemicals were increased with each crop, the maximum limit had not been reached—that is, no injury to the plants had resulted. The injury to the plants had resulted. The maximum limit as regards profit may have been reached, but that can be determined only by a continued increase of fertilizers until there is no increase, or, perhaps, an actual decrease in the crop itself. So a still larger amount was added for the sixth crop. In certain plots of the houses the plants began to wilt after three and one-half months' growth. The plants where the wilting first occurred were situated a little less favorably as regards light and air than some of the others; a plant growing where there is plenty of sunlight ean use more food, and consequently will bear high fertilizing better than a plant which has less light.

The effect of exeessive fertilization is to destroy the root hairs, which are so necessary to the plant. These root hairs deeay, but are quickly replaced by new ones, which in turn decay also. This is explained by Sachs in his work on the physiology of plants (page 256). The physiology of plants (page 256). The amount of readily available nutritive matter in the soil exerts a considerable influence upon the size of the root system. If the soil contains an abundance of plant food that is only slowly available, or if only a small portion of it is available, the root system will be developed in much the same manner as in a poor soil.

In a soil containing an excess of nutritive matter which is at once available, the plant can obtain all the food it needs, or can use, without sending out long roots to gather it in. There is already plenty at its feet. Why should it tax its energy to obtain more? In this respect we may liken the plant to a man, who is very unlikely to work for his dinner if plenty be placed before him so that he can obtain it without the working. If

Between the grower and his plant-the producer and the consumer—there is often a middleman. This middleman of the greenhouse belongs to one of the lowest forms of plant life, and is called a microbe or bacterium. It has long been known that the nitrogen of certain organic substances cannot be used by the plant until the substances undergo a change or de-composition. The plant is benefited by this process because certain microbes transform the nitrogen of the proteids into nitrates—a form in which it can be used by the plants. This fact alone in-the practice be overdone in either case the foundation of the individual-either plant or man-is undermined, and its strength impaired.

ROSE DUCHESS DE BRABANT GROWING IN COAL ASHES AND PEAT MOSS.

The great problem is: How much can we safely feed the plants? The commercial grower is also interested to know how he can obtain the best crop with the smallest outlay.

The quantity of fertilizer which we can use with safety depends of course on two important factors—the kind of plant we are growing and the form of plant food we are using. Some plants are much more sensitive than others to the effects of fertilizers, or, in fact, any cultural conditions. You who are growers of plants know this. The readiness and extent of the availability of the nitrogen, phosphoric acid or potash in any fertilizer fixes for us to a certain extent the quantities that can be used.

But after we have learned the exact requirements of the plant-how much nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash it uses when grown in its most perfect form—one would think it might be an casy matter to apply the formula and harvest good results. It is not so easy. troduces a complication into the art of growing plants. This organism is called nitrifying bacteria or ferment. There is another organism which is known as the denitrifying microbe, which, instead of rendering the nitrogen available from divers inert forms, dissipates the nitrogen from nitrates so that the plant cannot get it. It escapes into the air as free nitrogen. It has been shown by several German experimenters, especially Wagner, that when fresh horse manure was used with nitrates the fertilizing effect was so depressed that the yield produced by the manure and nitrates together was somewhat less than that produced by the nitrates alone. Where the quantities used of stable manure and nitrates are known to be not excessive the only explanation of the fact is that the nitrogen was set free by the microbe life of the soil. That these microbes may occur in fresh manure has been demonstrated, and some of our own experiments show that a considerable loss of nitrogen has actually occurred from the reduction of nitrates where no extract of fresh manure was added to the soil. Extract of horse dung caused a greater loss than extract of fresh cow dung. Potting soil from the compost heap caused a reduction in the same manner, and to about half the extent of the fresh horse manure, while the surface soil from the garden had little or no effect in destroying nitrates.

In our experiments with fertilizers for tomatoes, in every case where fertilizer chemicals have been added to a rich compost, the yield has been diminished instead of increased, and with our present knowledge of the subject we should expect that such an effect might be produced from either of two canses: (1) If the compost was enriched to such an extent that available nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash are present in excessive quantities, or very near the maximum limit that can be safely employed, the addition of more plant food would injure the plant by destroying the proper balance between its foliage and its root system, and wilting would be the result. But this has never happened in the compost soil in our experiments. Moreover the plant food in compost is not all readily available, but gradually becomes so, and is taken up by the plant as it is needed.

(2) The other cause—the denitrifying bacteria might produce such a result by setting free the nitrogen from the soil. Where nitrates are added it is food for these bacteria as well as for the plants and might enable them to increase with greater rapidity than they could do in compost alone. Hence more nitrogen would be set free and finally more lost from the soil than has been applied in chemical form.

At one time we attempted to grow head lettuce in some soil gathered from a sandy plain and placed in our forcing house benches. It was lacking in humus, or organic matter, and we supplied it by adding peat moss. It was supposed to be deficient in plant food and fertilizer chemicals were applied in quantities sufficient to produce a crop. But the plants refused to grow and after a tew weeks the leaves were of a reddish brown color, which is characteristic of starved plants. Their small size was another prominent characteristic. We knew what we had added to that soil, but we were not able to recover it in the plants.

So far as I know there is no other way of explaining this experience, except by means of the denitrifying bacteria which had set tree the nitrogen so that it escaped before the plants could get it.

This, gentlemen, is the reason why I have so little to say regarding the use of chemicals in connection with an ordinary compost soil in the greenhouse. We sometimes obtain excellent results from such applications

Vgain we see no benefit. If those denitritying organisms are present, it would seem best to apply our fertilizer chemicals for the nitrogen at least-often and in small quantities. It may be that we can destroy these interobes by sterr fizing the soal so that we can use nitrate without danger of loss. But in sterilizing the soil, we also destroy those in robes that help us the mirifying germs It we wish to keep these bacteria that render available, the introgen of organic substances, I am afraid we must run, the risk of having the germs that dissipate nitrogen. We may perhaps use a poor soil that has been sterilized and fertilize it entirely with chemicals, but that ic mains to be demonstrated

If we can find any way of employing chemicals with sure and beneficial results there is no doubt that in most cases it will be cheaper to obtain plant food in this form than in the form of stable manure, which is already growing scarce in the vicinity of some of our large cities.

Obituary.

THOMAS CARTLEDGE.

Thomas Cartledge died on May 17 at his home at Holmesburg, Philadelphia, in the house in which he was born on July 8, 1834. His demise was the result of heart failure and general debility. He leaves a wife, a married daughter and a son, A. B. Cartledge, who some time ago succeeded to his father's interest in the widely known firm of Pennock Brothers.

Thomas Cartledge served an apprenticeship with William Hall at Andalusia In 1851 he engaged with Benjamin Gulles at Fifteenth and Pine streets and received his first experience in city life.

THOMAS CARTLEDGE

Resigning this position in 1854 he lived with his father on the form at Holmesburg. When the civil war broke out he enlisted and served until his company was mustered out. In 1862 be became foreman for Pennock Bros., who had a nursery and small fruit farm in Delaware County and sold their products at the Twelfth Street Market in Philadelphia. In 1863 the call for volunteers found Mr. Cartledge again ready to take up arms in defense of his country, and he served as one of the "three months men". In this one of the "three months men". In this year he married Miss Emma Neil, of Burlington, N. J. Returning to Pennock's with expiration of his second term of culistment a small greenhouse was built, in April 1861, and from this time dates his life as a retail florist. He succeeded to an interest in the firm on the retirement of J. L. Pennock in 1870, and under his guidance the business grew rapidly. Larger quarters being required in 1875 the property 1511 Chestnut street was purchased and one of the finest establishments in the country was erected, in which a very large business has since been conducted. It is still growing and ranks among the first floral stores of the

A) Cartledge has always been active matters looking to the elevation of the armess. In 1870 he was elected a memory of the Pennsylvania Hortienthural courty and was always an ennest of the and contributor to its exhibitions. For three years he held the office of treasurer and his resignation, on account of other pressing duties, was accepted with regret. He was a member of the Society of American Florists from the beginning. Since the organization of the Florists' Club he was its treasurer until last fall, when, on account of his failing health, he was obliged to resign. His opinions and valued counsel were of great benefit, and his "Go slow boys," when an unusual draft on the treasury was talked about saved the club many a dollar. As a business man he was very energetic. He believed in doing everything well, and nothing in plants or flowers was too good to carry in stock. His disposition was most kindly and many a brother in the business was afforded flowers from his stock which it would have been impossible for him to get elsewhere. Mr. Cartledge had a kind word for everybody and none came to him in distress that he did not do all he could to help them in their trouble. He was a prominent Mason and a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

The Outlook at Omaha.

Omaha is waking up. Hard times and depreciation in values have brought discouragement and hesitancy during the past three years, but all signs point to immediate prosperity now. It took determination and grit to plan and earry out the scheme for the great Trans-Mississippi Exposition which is soon to be opened to the world under the most favorable auspices, and any one who has the privilege of viewing those magnificent buildings with their stately architecture and artistic surroundings cannot fail to be deeply impressed with the enterprize that has made them possible. The buildings are well nigh completed, and already large consignments of exhibits are being received preparatory to their arrangement in their respective departments. While not so extensive as the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893, the buildings and grounds are a eity in themselves and are as big as any one will want to see, and all the attractive features of the great Chicago specta-cle, including Moorish palaces, harems and Midway Plaisance for the frivolously inclined, will be fully reproduced. Under Mr. Ulrich's energetic management trees and large plantations of shrubs and hardy flowers have been set out, and the view from the bluff on which the exposition is located over the Missouri valley and across the fertile lowa prairie is most impressive. The only foundation for un-easiness lies in the vagaries of the Missouri river, which, without previous warning occasionally takes a notion to change its course and cut off a few thousand acres, more or less, from lowa and annex them to Missouri, and vice versa. What a catastrophe it would be if the river should annex the great exposition to the prohibition state some dark night on or about June 1, or, still worse, just as the S. A. F. special trans-continental train is pulling in to the Union station on the morning of August 16.

There is an army of men at work in and about the exposition buildings, but there is plenty of activity elsewhere. A new railroad station and a new postoffice are already accomplished facts, and there is plenty of construction going on preparatory to the accommodation and comfort of the crowds of visitors expected. Altogether the city is attractive and homelike. The exposition buildings are about two miles from the Union station.

HORTICULTURAL BUILDING, TRANS-MISSISSIPPI EXPOSITION, OMAHA.

The intervening territory includes the County Court House, a stately building, which is set on a hill and consequently cannot be hid, the Lininger Art Gallery, a grand private collection of rare and valuable works of art, generously opened to the public by its owner, Mr. Geo. W. Lin-inger; the First Congregational church, where the S. A. F. convention of 1898 is to be held, and the stores of a number of Omaha's prosperous florists. Among the latter is the establishment of the kindly retired in favor of Mr. A. Donaghue, Jr. Not far away is the headquarters of Hess & Swoboda, where Mr. Jacob Hess presides and finds a market for the plants and flowers sent in by Mr. Swoboda from the greenhouses out of town. Mr. Hess is a gentleman of never failing resource and is sure to come out on top every time, even if he were not the treasurer of the Nebraska and Jowa Florists' Club. To a lady customer who had deserted him for another he is said to have sent a bunch of flowers accompanied by a sheet of music entitled "Old Love Lingers Still." The eustomer came back! 'Then there are Lewis Henderson, smiling and courteous, B. Haas, whom everybody likes, Aug. Peterson, who runs two establishments, the Nebraska Seed Company in charge of Mr. R. Engelmann and L. A. Stewart, opposite the postoffice, where a vase of handsome Safrano roses recalls the old times. All are enthusiastic and hopeful regarding the approaching visit of their tellow craftsmen and are prepared, with the invaluable assistance of "Cactus Davey," Secretary Erfling and other distinguished gentlemen, to do all in their power to make the convention a memorable one.

A visit to the greenhouses "out of town" is much like a visit to similar establishments elsewhere. On the way, one is impressed with the fertility of the soil, which is black and rich as a compost heap, to an unknown depth, as attested by the big dandelions two feet in diameter that lie thick by the road side. A lilac and almond bordered path leads up to Mr. Donaghue's greenhouses, where may be seen American Beauties and Bridesmaids in wonderful luxuriance, fine houses of roses for summer blooming, and asters, sweet peas, carnations, gladioli, etc., in profusion. Just beyond is Mr. Swoboda's headquarters, where Perle and Niphetos seem to revel and where the inevitable preparations are being made to tear down an old house and put up a new one. Mr. Swoboda is a philosopher. His comment after a hail storm had riddled his houses as contained in an official report to his partner was, "It hailed," and then he smiled quietly.

Across the river is Council Bluffs. This city is said to be twenty-five years older than Omaha. Its presiding genius is J. F. Wilcox. Mr. Wilcox is the busiest man and has the biggest range of glass west of Chicago. Five establishments he runs, including acres of rose houses, acres of vegetable forcing houses and vast tracts of vineyard and fruit farms, besides a fine flower store in the city proper. Five houses, each 34x120, was the extent of his building last year, and an addition of equal area is contemplated this season. Roses, carnations, violets and promiscuous plants are the crops and they are richly fed by liquid manure supplied from tanks constructed on the top of the hill in the rear of the houses. Mr. Wilcox began business a few years ago with a little cottage and 100 sash; at the present rate of progress he will own half the state before he turns grey. His former partner, L. A. Casper, is now an alderman. McPherson & Frey, formerly Me-Pherson & Reed, report spring business good in plants.

The great attraction of Council Bluffs is Fairmount Park, which has wonderful natural advantages as a place of public recreation. The view from the high oak covered bluffs is grand and well worth a long trip to see. The visitors, next summer, will find it an attraction second only to the Trans-Mississippi Exposition.

Preparations for the convention go on rapidly and the local fraternity are fully equipped to give a good account of themnot regret the trip to the hospitable city of the great west. Very low railroad rates are likely to be granted within a short time, and both President Gude and Secretary Stewart assured the writer, on their recent visit, that the indications all their recent visit, that the model point to a large gathering in August.

E. T.

Notes and Comments.

Now for a navy blue chrysanthemum, and let its name be Admiral Dewey.

Whether "E. L." is a stockholder in the American Florist Company or not makes no difference. The promoters of the opposition must have thought he was stockholder, for stock was offered to "E. L." in the rival paper, and he has had occasion to be thankful many times since for having refused. We are all entitled to indulge in a preference, and my preference is for the AMERICAN FLORIST, for the good and sufficient reason that I believe it to be the better trade paper, not only as an advertising medium but in every other

One of our leading department stores has been advertising "Cuban Lilies" for sale, and they are described as "big bulbs which are said to increase in size and vigor each year. Each throws up one or two spikes with eight to a dozen large blooms—white with stripes of crimson violet. Sweet scented." What are they?  $\Lambda$  day or two after the above appeared in the advertising columns of one of our daily newspapers an item in the reading columns of one of them was as follows: "What ouce was dubbed a Chinese lily is now selling well under its title of Cuban lilv." It cannot be possible from the It cannot be possible from the advertised description of the Cuban lily that it is what is commonly known as the Chinese sacred lily. That, of course, is a narcissus. I do not know of any of the narcissi having "flowers white with stripes of crimson violet." I have not had an opportunity of seeing the bulbs, but have been advised that the Cuban lily may be a crimum.

I am having some fun with fuchsias these days. I have been picking up varieties wherever I could so as to secure as complete a collection as possible. According to their manner of growth and habit, there is serious mixture among them. There is one variety under three different names, Fancy, Purple Prince and General Roberts. I received it some years ago under the latter name from E. G. Hill & Co., and I believe this to be the correct name. Elm City I mentioned as not being true to name a few weeks ago. One lot received under the name of Arabella-good old Arabella-is proving to be Rosain's Patrie. Octavie Feuillet and Paul Deralade appear to be alike, and Celine Montaland and Buffon are apparently identical. One good old sort I feel sure is true to name, and that is Avalanche (Henderson's). There were two distinct varieties under this name sent out the same year, sometime in the sixties, if my memory serves me correctly. Henderson's Avalanche had yellow foliage and double purple corolla. It was referred to occasionally as double Wave of Life. The latter variety also had foliage with a decided yellow east, but as above indicated the corolla was single. other Avalanche was raised and dissemi-nated by a Mr Smith—George, I believe. This one had a double white corolla; the varieties producing that color of double flower were not by any means so plentiful at that time as they are to-day. What has become of all the varieties of fuchsias with single white corollas? Not one have I noticed described in any catalogue that has come under my notice for some years. Personally, 1 prefer the single flowering Personally, 1 prefet the sorges varieties among fuchsias, especially in the sorges with white corollas. The plants make a more graceful appearance, and 1 believe bloom more freely.

The ranks of the florists are becoming more or less depleted by some of the patriots joining the United States army. Two of Peter Vanderveur's sons suddenly decided to chlist a few evenings ago, and after successfully undergoing the necessary preliminaries started for Mt. Gretna on Tuesday, May 10. Peter Vanderveur is well known about New York, having been largely interested some years ago in the growing and disposal of hardy plants, roses, clematis, etc., grown in Boskoop, Holland, and offered for sale at the auction rooms of the old firm of Young & Elliott. He is now the propagator at the Andorra Nurseries, which are located in the extreme northwest corner of Philadelphia, at the head of the beautiful and romantic Wissahickon drive, Fairmount Park. His sons, William and John, were, until they decided to go to the front, employed in the greenhouses of Edwin Lons dale. John, who is under 20 years of age, has worked therein over a year. William is about 22, and has been engaged for four years or more. He took a great interest in everything he had under his care, and was especially fond of orchids. His mind will often revert, in the intervals when not banging away at the Spaniards, to the more peaceful occupation of raising seedling expripediums, and he will turn an anxions thought occasionally towards the little baby orchids he left behind, and be solicitous as to their welfare during his absence. He took an interest also in crossing the different varieties of crotons, and quite a fatch of seedlings in the various stages of development is the resuit. When the Spannards are thoroughly well satisfied-and I trust it will be quite soon-it is to be hoped he will return safe and sound and take up the more congenial occupation of horticulture, and with the steady application which he has shown during the past few years he should continue a useful citizen and a credit to the profession.

The Carnation Fairy Ring Fungus.

Second only to the carnation rust is the damage done by the fungus that causes circular spots upon the leaves of the car-The disease often shows itself upon the younger leaves and almost anywhere from base to tip, the round spots varying from a mere speck to one whose diameter is as wide as the leaf. writer has seen plants with every leaf almost entirely occupied with the spots, and then, of course, growth ceases and the crop of fungus spores is enormous.

FAIRY RING FUNGUS OF CARNATIONS.

At first the spot is of a pale color, covered with a gray mold, changing to a brown as time goes on. The fungus is one well known to science and bears the long name of Heterosporium cehinulatum Berk. It gains entrance by the spores germinating upon the surface of the leaf and sending their absorbing thread into the growing tissue below. After vegetating for a while, the fungus develops filaments that extend out through the sto-mates and bear the spores. It is this exterior growth of threads, and the spores they produce, that gives the moldy appearance to the afflicted spots.

From the manner in which the spores are moduced it is seen that anything that will earry the spores will assist in the spread of the trouble. When dry, the dust like spares may be carried by the wind and when wet they flow along with the water that may be driven upon or between the leaves of the plant by the hose show watering the house,

As a precaution it may be suggested that all leaves showing the fairy rings le pid ed off and burned, and if certain prints are budly infested these may be reand bodily from the bed. In watering, avoid as much as possible the wetting of the foliage, and should the grower wish to use a fungicide the sulphide of potassium may be used, one ounce to ten gallons of water. This fungicide is cheap, about fifteen cents a pound, readily soluble and harmless to the plants. It can be dissolved, a pound in a half gallon of water, and a fraction of this placed in the spraying pump with the required amount of water to make the weak solution. The potash is a food element, and when it reaches the soil may be taken up by the plant as such. The same mixture has proved an excellent remedy for the leaf spot; and is also a standard remedy in the open for such troublesome diseases as the mildew of the gooseberry.

Byron D. Halsteb.

Carnations.

If they have not been made before, now is the time to make your plans for next season unless your stock has done remarkably well the season just past, then it is better to let well enough alone, excepting to experiment in a small way and endeavor to produce better stock, more of it, and at a reduced outlay. Cost is unite an item now in the growing of carnations, for even if some growers do get $8 and $10 per 100 for their stock, the bulk of them will not get that, although their stock may be just as good and they will have to try and turn out first-class stock at a lower rate of production or expect to lose money by growing carnations.

The question of solid beds or benches demands serious consideration in connection with the cost of growing carnations. With me and my soil 1 can get far better results from all varieties planted in solid beds over the same varieties grown on benches. There are no doubt many growers who could get the same results but in making the change do not do so over the whole of your place at once or you may rue your bargain; it is far better to try one house the first year or even part of a house, but be sure that it is a good house or the experiment will not be a true one. The advantages of solid beds over benches are many, the greatest being in the fact that you are not rotting out a lot of expensive lumber all the time; another is that the time consumed in watering is not nearly so much, and with these two items of outlay taken off you have already considerably reduced your expense account. It is a recognized fact that watering carnations is a thing that must be done with great care not to wet the foliage, and with solid beds you need not water oftener than twice a month; then it can be done on a good bright day and the evil effects of watering over the plants reduced to a minimum. Last but not least is the fact that your stock will be far healthier growing in solid beds.

A house of Flora Hill grown the past winter will perhaps be the best argument I can make in favor of solid beds. The house was 22x150, a three-quarter span with the long side to the south. Under the south gutter was a path two feet wide, then a solid bed four feet wide, an eighteen inch path and another solid bed the same width, then a two foot path and a bench on the north side. The house was planted about August 20, the whole house at the same time with plants that did not vary in size a half inch over the whole house. It started without any seeming check and the first flowers were gathered about October 1, the heat being put on the same date. The temperature wine kept to about 60° at night and 70° to 80° during the day. The bench and the solid beds were given about the same treatment excepting that the bench required at least five times as many waterings as did the solid beds.

many waterings as did the solid beds.

The points in favor of the solid beds was first of all a decided difference in the health of the plants, those on the solid beds growing much stronger and healthier than those on the bench. Another very decided difference was in the size of the flowers, those on the solid beds being at least one-third larger than those on the bench. The difference that counted most was that the solid beds turned out fully twice the same number of flowers per square foot over those on the bench. There were of course some objections to the solid beds, and the greatest of these was that the stems growing such large flowers were not quite strong enough to hold them erect and they had to be tied up very carefully to get them straight. Another objection was that about ten per cent. of the flowers on the solid beds per cent, of the flowers on the solid beds bursted their calyx while those on the benches did not burst at all, and about the middle of January the house was allowed to get too cold with the result that about fifty per cent, of the flowers came bursted for something like six weeks. This could have been avoided by proper regulation of the temperature. The flowers on the bench were not affected to any extent and this is one thing in its favor.

Taking the smaller per centage of flowers cut from the bench, the extra amount of time consumed in watering and the wear and tear on the bench, the difference in the cost of the flowers to me was considerably in favor of the solid bed system. Some growers claim that the plants do not bloom as early in solid beds nor as well and that they get the bulk of the well and that they get the Durk of the flowers only in the spring when they are cheap. With me it is just the opposite. I get the bulk of my flowers at Christmas and Easter by a little manipulation in the growing, and cut more between those dates, beginning October I, from the solid little that the solid from header. I when I was a from the solid control of the solid section of the solid section of the solid section. beds than 1 can from benches. Unless 1 make a special effort to have them run later, they are about over and ready to pull out after Decoration Day, thus getting my crop into the regular season as good as any bench grower possibly can. These differences, however, may not be so great in other soils and may even be reversed in some; but after you have learned to handle your stock so as to get the best results from the solid beds, you will be astonished at the advantages they offer. ALBERT M. HERR.

Fuchsia Gracieux.

The fuchsia heading this note has been referred to in your columns quite recently. It is the most showy little fuchsia I ever remember to have seen, and it is an early bloomer. It can readily be brought into bloom, so as to attract attention, in a greenhouse by the middle of April. To have large plants, which might on occasion be desirable, it would be well to root a few strong shapely cuttings in the fall and bring them along slowly in a temperature of about 55° at night, and never allow them to become pot-bound or crowded; they should make very showy plants either for sale or exhibition purposes.

Mr. Ansel T. Simmons gives a little history in connection with the re-naming of this variety, which is mighty interesting reading (See American Florist, Vol. XIII., No. 512, p. 967). This is a question for the nomenclature committee to act upon.

Helpful Reminders.

Bamboos are now starting nicely. Do not allow them to become starved before August. Keep them well fed and watered for there is nothing prettier than a well-grown bamboo, yet you are very apt to become discouraged the first season of your experience with them.

Note the curling of the leaves as you go through your houses. It is a sign of warning for you, and is usually followed by red spider, and hard times generally set in. This point does not apply to any one class of plants, but to almost everything least of two evils. Fuchsias should be in their prime, but they will be attacked by spider almost as quickly as mildew takes hold of roses. Coleus attracts mealy bugs if kept too hot and dry and much good stock is ruined at this time of year.

It is not yet safe, in most localities, to set out asters, but if you have sown the best seed, it pays to transplant them into pots or flats. If you have the room, a bench of them inside is good. Choice asters are desirable.

Dahlias that were set out apart and potted have grown considerably and it

FUCHSIA GRACIEUX.

but eacti, and varies according to the style of houses, stock which is carried and amount of care bestowed. Just now, when heat is on the increase, is when danger of neglect is at hand. The tendency to curl is a provision of nature to prevent rapid evaporation and indicates a shortage of moisture. After this continues for any length of time, the plant becomes weakened and insects attack it. The insect is almost always charged with the destruction of the plant, but it is bad management which creates the situation favorable to the insect, red spider and mealy bug in particular. Where you cannot keep your stock moist enough at the root, shade it. While many arguments against shade are well founded, it is the pays to give them a shift now. Give them plenty of room and they will make strong plants and be as far along at planting time as cannas, which is unusual but sensible. There is a prejudice against dablias because they are so late in flowering but if grown properly they will be much earlier.

Cannas are now starting strong bud stalks. Don't allow them to wilt or become starved. If you cannot shift them, sprinkle earth and manure between the pots. They will root through and you should break the pots when setting out. This is for particular work. You cannot afford to have plants checked just as marketing season is at hand.

Your cobæa vines must be staked now or they will be in a tangle. A second batch of nasturtium seed should go in now. Try and have a tew of each variety of perennials in pots now to accomodate late orders. It does not do to shift them later in the season, besides there is nothing like pot grown stock to thrive when planted out.

C. B. W.

The Dwarf Phloxes.

Just now and for a while to come, these beautiful free flowering species and varieties are deservedly admired by all who are fortunate enough to get a chance to examine a collection of them planted together, but we rarely see them in sufficient numbers and variety to give us a clear idea of the effects that might be produced with this simple material in the spring months. As a rule we only find two or three varieties of P. setacea or P. subulata in ordinary collections. These are rightly considered indispensable in the border, for they are the earliest of all, being about a week ahead of the improved varieties in this section, but perhaps not everywhere.

The color and shape of the flowers represented in the later introductions are far superior to the typical white or pinkish sorts. P. subulata, The Bride, only a few days later than the original variety, is white with a distinct dark purplish eye and retains the same free spreading growth and the blooming qualities of the parent. P. subulata Nelsonii is a great improvement on the old white, very distinct in growth, the foliage, except when in a young state, being stiff, almost spiny as in P. aristata, and the plant much shorter and very compact. The pure white flowers are rounder, the petals touching or even overlapping each other.

The same growth and dense habit is noticed in the superb P, subulata Vivid, which surpasses all others in brightness of color; both last named varieties are remarkably free bloomers and produce a wealth of flowers, covering the entire growth for several weeks. Being only a few inches high and carpeting the ground completely, they are well adapted for groundwork under the taller flowering plants that bloom later, especially when the latter are of such kinds as are slow and late in starting into growth, as the hocconia, inula, hibiscus, cassia, dietamus, gillenia, etc.

P. pilosa grows somewhat stronger and higher than the foregoing, still it is a trailing species recommendable in every way. P. amorna deserves special mention, for it is in bloom in May and June and frequently gives us quite a display of its deep pink blossoms in the full, especially on young stock in well enriched soil where the roots and tops can roam at will and are not bemined in by neighboring gross feeding plants.

This fall blooming habit has shown itself regularly with its for the last ten years or more. Some scasons the plants were quite attractive late in the year, the flowers being evenly spread over the patch, but not to be compared with the bright effects of the masses of spring bloom, at other times the conditions for a fall crop of flowers were less favorable and the bads appeared more sparingly. It is not so dwarf and low as P subulata and its varieties, but grows dense and compact at all times. When young or recently planted, eight mehes is its extreme height for the first season, but after that it may grow twelve to fifteen inches high according to soil and conditions. As a per plant ter spring sales at proved very satisfactory being neat clean, compart and very floriferous. P subulata Vivid and P, subulata Nelsonii can also be recommended for this purpose.

P. ovata, with deep reddish purple flowers, the stems not over twelve inches high generally, the foliage oblong and rather thick, is a pretty species and should find a place among our spring flowers. I', reptans is another low creeping kind very desirable in every respect. In spring it sends up slender little stems crowned by a cluster of very near deep purplish red flowers, which continue to come out in succession until the dry summer heat spoils them for the season. P. divaricata is the tallest among those mentioned here, attaining a height of from ten to fifteen inches. It does not begin to bloom until the second week in May with us, but it is a most elegant species for the garden, no other phlox possessing its charming and unique shade of lavender blue. The flowers are large in size and produced in many-flowered clusters, many of which often spring from the same main stem. There are several lighter and darker shades of blue represented, one being almost white with only a faint tinge of lilae; all are surprisingly beautiful and last for a long time in perfection.

The flowering season of any or all of these phloxes may be prolonged considerably when we select the most suitable situation for them. On the south side of a building, wall or fence, or on sloping ground with a southern aspect and fully exposed to the action of the sun, we cannot reasonably expect the individual flower to be long lived, while it is really astonishing how much their lasting qualities are improved in an eastern or northern exposure or under the slight shade of tall shrubs or trees.

[1] J. B. Keller.

A Drummer's Twaddle.

Past Niagara, over the borders into the Dominion, whirling along the edges of the Hamilton hills, past the rich flats extending away to Ontario's waters, we came to beautiful Toronto, on the bay, with its funny looking "bobbies," with their helmets strapped below their chins, with their leathern stocks and creet and pompous bearing; with its street car conductors who collect their fares with a pitcher-shaped receptacle, into which the passenger drops his nickel, the collector passing through obsequiously as if taking up a church collection and when through, depositing his box at the end of the ear with a solemnity most impressive and regardless of thieves who, in any other place but Canada, would almost surely break through and steal.

Remembering the success of the S. A. F. convention held there some years ago, when we were so finely entertained, we doff our hat to Toronto and its florists, and gladly record another pleasant visit.

Canadian florists must be prosperous judging from the appearance of their greenhouses, their busy movements, and the presence of many customers througing their beautiful stores on King street. We found John II. Dunlop building two new greenhouses, 20x 100 feet each, as an addition to his already large plant, this me reased room being required for more roses and carnations. Tidy & Sons' tidy place showed evidence of good patronage, and this conteous hum kindly gave us good welcome. Win, Jay & Son were crowded with orders for spring stock, and atisfied with business prospects. Granger Bros., with their triple line as florists, muss rymen and seedsmen, were well occupied. Jolly Tom McKerrighan, J. John was that "a good laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market," has started a new plant on the Davenport road to better supply his down town store. Veteran Geo. Plumh, at his pleasant location at Davisville, vies enterprisingly with the younger florists, and has lost no zest for his lifetime business.

Running out to Brampton, we found H. Dale putting up two houses, 20x600 feet. These, added to his former 125,000 square feet of glass, makes his the largest establishment in Canada. Dale was busy handling 10,000 young, low-grafted Bridesmaid and other roses, which he intends for foreing the coming winter. Mr. Dale told us that this was his second season of handling roses in That it induces better and this way. longer growth of stem and freerer blooming, and as affording further evidence of what he thought of this method, stated that his first experiment was with 500 plants; his present stock so treated is 10,000, and that he will prepare 20,000 next season. He loses only five per cent. of plants so treated, and says that since he has acquired "the know how" looked in future for a nominal loss of one per cent. of plants so grafted.

R. Jennings was also adding a new 18x100 feet house to his former good plant. At Hamilton, friendly Thos. V. Kilvington reported excellent business all winter, and a good prospect for spring trade. E. G. Brown, at his neat and well-kept establishment, confirmed the other good reports of generally successful business, and was well stocked with staple spring stock, waiting balmier conditions only to move for outdoor planting. Webster Bros. were in the midst of active operations digging and delivering nursery stock, and at the same time making plantations of hardy stock in their grounds on Wentworth street. On our return trip to the States, we met with Mr. B. O. Bartlett, who has recently retired from the drummer's ranks to engage in the florist business at Jamestown, N. Y., having recently purchased the A. L. Thrall greenhouses there.

Mr. Bartlett formerly represented the Winchester Arms Co., and is one of the most expert shots in the world, one of his exhibition feats consisting of throwing six balls into the air at the same time and hitting each one before it falls to the ground. We welcome him to the eraft, and hope he will make as successful a hit in it as he did in his former business.

EDDY.

New York.

WHOLESALERS REPORT RUSINESS DULL,— OUT DOOR FLOWERS COMING IN FREELY, —RETAILERS—FIND—DEMAND—FAIR,— STEAMER—FRADE—BEGINNING,—SALE OF POLYKRANAS' FEFUCTS,—DEATH OF JOHN HART

Rainy weather has prevailed throughout almost the entire week, retarding the spring plant trade badly and having a dispiriting effect on the cut flower business at the greenhouse end and the store end, too. Wholesalets find the demand very light, orders being infrequent and for small amounts. Out door flowers such as likes, late tulips and parrot tulips, Poet's narcissus, bly of the valley, etc., are coming in heavily and almost crowd the legitimate greenhouse product out of sight. Lilaes come in by the barrel, the the price being 82 to $3 per barrel. This applies to the purple kind only, white being none too plenty and its adaptability for use in association with choice flowers giving it a special value enjoyed by but lew outdoor products.

Violets are about at an end. For nice corsage work sweet peas or moss roses take their place effectively and are worn very generally. Moss roses from some growers are extra good. Others grow the poorer varieties; why, it is hard to say, for they cost about as much at the outset and take as much room and care as do the more desirable sorts. Of Jacq. roses but few are seen and the outdoor cut will soon be in view. Meteor, Bride and Bridesmaid are on deck in unweildy quantity and deteriorating quality. American Beauty is in the same condition, but to a less degree. Carnations are also in overstock for the very light demand. Smilax and ferns are moving slowly at low figures.

The retailers give varying reports as to present conditions. Some admit that business is unexpectedly dull with them, while others profess entire satisfaction. Steamer work has begun in earnest this week and is not apparently much reduced in volume as compared with the corresponding date in previous years although the impression has been given in some quarters that steamer work would not amount to anything on account of the war. There are no large decorations this season; the Mackey wedding which took place on Tuesday, the 17th inst., was heralded as something extraordinary, but it proved to be a very modest affair in all its appointments and the quantity of flowers used was not sufficient to make even a ripple on the surface of the market.

The contents of the Polykranas store which was seized by the sheriff for the benefit of McDonald & McManus were sold at auction last Wednesday, bringing in the aggregate about $175 with which to satisfy an account of about $133.

John Hart, eldest son of James Hart, and well known among the wholesale and retail trade, died on Wednesday, May 11, of pneumonia, aged 28 years. The funeral was attended by a number of his late associates. He left a wife and twochildren.

Mr. C. S. Loder, of the Florists' Board of Trade, has been asked to serve as a director in the Merchants' Association. Visiting New York: J. W. E. Ebbinge, manager of the Horticultural Co., Boskoop, Holland.

Philadelphia.

FLAG DAY AT DREER'S NURSERIES-, MUSIC, SPEECHES, LUNCH AND PATRIOTISM.—
BUSINESS CONDITIONS.—THE MONTHLY EXHIBITION.

Last Saturday was a galaday at Dreer's nursery in Riverton, New Jersey. All the employes of the city store, at 714 Chestnut street, were present, with a few invited guests, and took part in the proceedings. The special event was the raising and unturling to the breezes of a flag 12x25 feet. This beautiful specimen of Old Glory was purchased by the employes, the pole sixty feet in height being provided by Mr. Dreer. Miss Bertha Eisele, daughter of Mr. Jacob Eisele, pulled the cord which released the captive banner at the mast head, releasing hundreds of small flags which came fluttering down as the folds of the large flag caught the breeze.

Win, F. Dreer made a short patriotic address and was followed by Nicholas Brookner. Rev. Fred Owen also spokein words befitting the occasion. The band of music present played time honored selections and the very air seemed full of patriotism. A fine lunch was provided, to which all did justice. Darkness coming on put an end to the festivities which, no doubt, did much to arouse fresh enthusiasm and love of country in the hearts of those present.

Business is very light, it being a long time between customers in the stores these days. The bad weather may have something to do with it, as it has rained one day and poured the next for a week Todây (the 17th) is beautitul, past. Foday (the 17th) is beautiful, and perhaps there are more like it to follow; in that event things may become a little better. Prices are about the same as last week except that bargain lots seem to be more plentiful.

The monthly meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society on May 17, was of unusual interest on account of orchids exhibited. Conspicious among these were a specimen of Lællia purpurata var Mandiana from the collection of C. G. Roebling, of Trenton, N. J., which was awarded a silver medal, and a plant of Lællia purpurata var. Orangense from the collection of Wm. Albert Manda, of South Orange, N. J., a magnificent specimen with nine spikes and 34 flowers in a state of excellent cultivation which was also awarded a silver medal for rarity and a certificate of merit for excellence of cultivation. There were some good plants of calceolarias on exhibition which showed careful culture and were favorably commented upon by the judges, as were also the cauliflowers, tomatoes, lettuce and other vegetables shown in competition for the Michell and Dreer premiums. The meeting was fairly well attended although the amateur element was conspicious by its absence. Mr. Thilow, Mr. Michell and others made suggestions as to how the amateur might be interested in the monthly meetings and some fruits are expected in the near future from this interesting discussion.

Boston.

A GLUT IN THE MARKET CAUSES PRICES TO FALL, CARNATIONS COING DOWN WITH A THUD.—CERTIFICATE FOR FARQUHAR'S NEW NARCISSUS .- WANTED: A HORTI-CULTURAL BUILDING.

The cut flower market has been characterized this week by a glut in which unusually heavy production and very light sales have combined to reduce prices in almost all lines, the heaviest fall, however, being in the carnation market, where prices have gone down fully one-half. Roses are very nearly as bad, and bulbous stock is disposed of with difficulty, being unsalable except at very low prices, and much of this class of merchandise remains in the hands of the wholesalers.

Violets are about at an end with the exception of the hardy dark variety known as the Cape violet, which comes in large quantities for a couple of weeks at this season of the year. Lilies are the single item which shows improvement, $8 per 100 being the price for good stock. There is a prospect for a considerable advance as Memorial Day approaches, as the records of previous years seem apt to be eclipsed by the general observance of the day in which present belligerent conditions will result this year. Everything indicates a bountiful supply of carnations for memorial decorations.

At the exhibition by the Florists' Club, given last Saturday, R. & J. Farquhar & Co. displayed blooms of the new narcissus Victoria, for which a certificate of merit was awarded. Robert Laurie exhibited his ever-blooming chrysanthemum Independence, which was much admired, and the usual bright display of seasonable flowers was made by James Comley and several others.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has caused to be circulated a petition to the mayor and city council representing that it is highly desirable that a building appropriate for horticultural and floral displays be erected on the public garden, or other accessible site belonging to the municipality, in which large exhibitions may be held with great benefit to the public. All local floriculturists, be they amateur or commercial, will unite in urging favorable action on the petition.

The number and brilliance of the tulins in the public gardens exceeds that of any previous spring, and the display attracts great attention and universal admira-

Visiting Boston: S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia.

Chicago.

TRADE CONTINUES VERY DULL.-THE MAR-KET OVERSTOCKED.—AMERICAN BEAU-TIES WERE NEVER SOPLENTIFUL AS NOW. -NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The condition of trade remains about the same as last week, extreme dullness prevailing in all branches of the florist business. The cold weather we have experienced for the past three weeks has retarded the sale of bedding plants, and very little has been done in this line. Retail trade in cut flowers has settled down to the usual summer inactivity. There are very few weddings or social events where floral decorations are used, and the shipping trade is very quiet, though many flowers are being shipped out of the city in job lots, often at prices which bring very small returns to the grower. There is a glut of carnations but most of the stock is of inferior quality and extra good carnations are not plentiful.

Roses are considerably reduced in quantity but greatly exceed the demand. Extra long stemmed American Beauties were never so plentiful as they have been this spring. First class flowers on stems from fifteen to twenty inches long are in good demand and bring about the same price as the same grade of flowers on stems from thirty to forty inches long. Extra fine Parrot tulips are in the market, but find slow sale at from $2 to $4 per 100. Paonies are now quite plentiful and help materially to depress the prices of roses and carnations.

There will be a large stock of flowers in the market Memorial Day week.

Prices will be about as follows: Beauties from $1 to $3 per dozen; common roses, from $4 to $6; carnations, from $1 for common to $4 for fancy; paronies will be in good supply at from $3 to $6 per 100. There will be narcissus Poeticus, tulips and many other cut flowers in abundance

J. Mangle has a window at his store at State and Washington streets beautifully decorated with Cape jasmine flowers, which attract much attention.

J. A. Budlong, the latest addition to the ranks of Chicago's wholesale florists, has his place at 37 Randolph street fitted up in first-class shape and reports business good. He is well pleased with the change.

J. Austin Shaw, salesman for Siebrecht & Son, exhibited a fine sample collection of small palms and ferns this week at Vaughan McKellar & Winterson's,

There are two new florists' stores in town, John Michel having opened at 871 Lincoln avenue and the Standard Floral Company at 2961 Wentworth avenue.

Emil Buettner, of Park Ridge, suffered a loss of about 750 feet of glass by hail Wednesday night. He was insured.

E.H. Hunt, who has been ill for several weeks has so far recovered as to be again attending to business.

A. L. Randall returned Monday from a two weeks' sojourn at West Baden, Ind. Visitors in town: Geo. B. Moulder, of Smith's Grove, Ky., enroune to Omaha: E. Miller, of Polo, Ills., was in the city Thursday and reported business quiet; Fred Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, returned home Friday after spending most of the week among the Chicago growers.

Cincinnati.

TRADE CONDITIONS.—THE FLORIST SOCI-LITY'S BEST MONTHLY EXHIBIT.—THE CLUB MEETING.—BANQUET NIGHT IS CHOSEN.

Business shows very little improvement, the only changed condition seeming to be a slight shortening of supply in all lines of cut flowers. Outdoor bulbous stock is nearly exhausted; carnations are coming in faster, but good ones are getting rather scarce. Roses of No. 1 grade sell readily while poorer stock moves very slowly. Plant trade is now at its height and all of the dealers will be kept busy until Memorial Day.

The monthly show of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, held on May 14, was noted for the excellence, if not for the extent, of the exhibits. The City Greenhouses occupied the north side of the hall with a fine display. In their collection were several fine plants of calcolarias in all their rich and varied colors. Some well grown specimen ferns with a group of orchids made an excellent display, notable in which were Cattleya Sanderiana, C. caudatum, Odontoglossum citrosmum and Cypripedium Lawrenceanum. The firm had 100 entries and received sixty-two points.

A. Sunderbruch's Sons exhibited a bench thirty feet long filled with choice plants interspersed with vases of roses and earnations, and also showed some splendid decorative plants, such as Pandanus Veitchii, large specimen plants of Kentias, arecas. Draciena fragrans and araucarias. The Sunderbruch collection received sixtyone points and attracted great attention Of course the orchids were much admired by the fair sex. Theo. Bock, our judge, said during the evening: "Never before has the competition been so sharp as to-day. This was the best exhibition we've ever had," In the evening the regular elub-meeting was held, with a small attendance II Wellman, was elected a mem-ber Pres Witterstactter was authorized to secure suitable medals for prizes. May 25 was selected as the date for the annual banquet. Pres. Witterstaetter caused a vote to be taken thanking outside contributors for their generosity during the past year, also thanking Judge Bock for his valuable services — 11. Schwarz

Paris.

VIOLET PESTS AND DISTASES AND HOW THEY ARE TREATED IN TRANCL.—SOME INTERESTING EXHIBITS AT LATE MELT 1868 OF THE HORICULTURAL SOCIETY

In my last letter I have given the leading points in violet culture as practiced in the south of France and shown that their cultivation is profitable enough when conducted in the right way. From what I have said your readers must not infer that it is fall gold that glitters, and that the cultivation of the violet has on our side, none of the drawbacks it suffers in your courier. Among the great est troubles our violet growers have to contend with is the fungus called Phyllosticta viola and the insect pest which we call "tetranygues," (probably Tetranychus telarius, or red spider).

The phyllosticta appears upon the foliage in a small white spot surrounded by a black line which widens rapidly and dries up in the center. It often happens that the affected tissues are destroyed entirely and give rise to round holes of different sizes which seem to have been made with a punch. These holes in getting larger join and destroy the substance of the leaf wholly or in part. The small black points which are often noticed on the dried parts or on the edges of the circular holes are the reproductive spores of the fungus. There is a second form of the mischief, not quite so frequent as the above, in which the tissues become yellow and dry, but do not disappear. Under the influence of special meteorological circumstances the Phyllosticta violae spreads very rapidly and destroys the leaves wholesale in a fortnight. To keep the plants free from the disease, Mr. Belle, professor of agriculture, recommends to try the copper solutions which in his opinion ought to be the more effective as they are used as a preventive.

The tetranychus which attacks the violets is the same which infests nearly all our cultivated plants. By their numerous stings these insects kill the foliage but do not destroy the plants, which after some time produce new leaves for which the same fate is reserved. The plants are of course much weakened through the collapse of the leaves and as the flowers cannot develop in consequence, the crop is nil. It is in spring and in the fall that the pests are most active and their depredations greatest. During winter life in plants is suspended and new leaves cannot easily replace those that have been destroyed; the result is that the flowering, which with the violet takes place at the start of vegetation, cannot be of any importance on plants that have been deprived of their leaves for a long time

A large number of experiments carefully conducted with various insecticides by Messrs. Wimmer and Amie have demonstrated that the following treatment gives the most satisfactory results: 1. Mow the plants immediately after their flowering, taking care to collect and burn all the leaves in order to destroy the eggs of the tetranychus. 2. Apply one of the following emulsions by means of a watering pot, or better, with a sprayer. First formula: Black hard soap six pounds three ounces, petroleum or kerosene same quantity, water twenty and two-thirds imperial gallons. Second formula: Black hard soap nine pounds, petroleum or kerosene same quantity, water twenty and one-third imperial gallons. Four applications should be made at intervals of four days each. 3. Manure the plants well and cover them, if possible, with dry leaves or tree twigs. A better emulsion of the petroleum would be obtained by adding first a little alcohol to the soap. 15 of Belle in preparing the above notes ventures the hope that they will furnish a complete check of this troublesome pest. At the two last meetings of the horticultural society some very fine plants were shown. One of our florists, Mr. Delayier, Paris, exhibited a dozen white, park and salmon colored carnations which measured hive inches in diameter. These flowers are said to have been stained from seed in the south of France. The other bouguet of the same kind of ear-basis for future experiment, resulting in a nation and at least equal in size but darker in color was staged at the meeting of last Thursday under the name of Le Colosse. The flowers shown had long stiff stems and notwithstanding their size were self-supporting. The famous white Souvenir de la Malmaison no longer stands alone and will soon have fitting companions as regards size and color. If the advance continues at such a pace, we shall soon have carnations rivaling the chrysanthemums in size.

Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co. sent in a collection of thirteen varieties of narcissus, among which one of the finest was X. pseudo narcissus bicolor maxima resembling the well known Empress but with a longer trumpet. The same firm had a splendid collection of dwarf calceolaria grandiflora hybrida; fifty-five different alpine plants and a couple of novelties worth mentioning, namely, Primula obconica grandiflora, pure white, making splendid pot plants, and a very dark blue form of Myosotis alpestris of very good habit, quite distinct and handsome. A plant which is also very effective and always attracts a good deal of attention is the Primula cortusoides amouna, of which some charming pots with large dark violet flowers were shown. Unfortunately the colors of this strain do not come true from seed, but the plants are easily propagated by division of the roots. If color is not of consequence, fine plants may be obtained by sowing the seed under glass in December or January pricking the young plants off into a seed bed until they can be set out in a light fresh soil, in a situation with northern exposure. Primula cortusoides amæna is a little tender for the Parisian climate, but when protected with leaves or litter, it sometimes withstands our winters. Of course it is more prudent to pot off the plants in the fall and place them in a heated frame or greenhouse, which treatment insures a good crop of flowers in The plant deserves to be more generally grown and mixed seed including the various colors, ranging from pure white to dark violet or carmine red, ought to be easily had from the seedsmen.

From central France was sent in a collection of large flowering pelargoniums with a very conspicuous new semi-double pure white sort, not yet named, which secured a first-class certificate and well deserved it. Other plants exhibited were a dwarf bright red canna named. General Boisdeltre: a collection of Cheiranthus Cheiri (wallflowers) including the fine dwarf canary yellow (green bud) and another new bright yellow color; a plant of Veltheimia Capensis in full flower; a pot of the quite distinct, curious leaved Viola palmata, with long narrow foliage. This variety however, is not new and has been grown for fifty years as a border plant or a plant for rockeries in pent; a pot of the pure yellow Viola pubescens, a native of Canada. The grower, Mr. Millet seems to pay particular attention to Canadian violets just now.

A very interesting collection of sprays of flowering shribs was also staged, comprising all the different kinds of ribes, prunus, malus, cerasus, cydonia, berberis and some plants of much promise as, Amelan hier lancifolia, with curious white flowers; Cydonia Japonica atrocoecinea plena; Malus Niedzwelliana, with large red flowers, dark foliage and red wood; Berberis dictyocarpa, a remarkable sulphin yellow flowering shrub introduced by Mr. Maurice de Vilmorin; Cydonia cubi a grandiflora.

Parisian.

The American Florist

Subscription $1.00 a Year. To Europe, $2.00, Subscriptions accepted only from those in the trade.

Advertisements, 10 Cents a Line, Agate; $1.00 per inch. Cash with Order.

No Special Position Guaranteed.

Discounts, 6 times, 5 per cent; 13 times, 10 per cent; 26 times, 20 per cent; 52 times, 30 per cent.

The Advertising Department of the AMERICAN FLORIST is for Florists, Seedsmen, and dealers in wares pertaining to those lines ONLY.

Orders for less than one-half inch space not accepted. Advertisements must reach us by Wednesday to secure insertion in the issue for the following Saturday.

Address THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO., Chicago,

TESTS at the New York Experiment Station show that spraying carnations with salt water is of no value in checking rust, and no benefit could be seen in any way from such applications. The application of salt to the soil was found to be decidedly injurious.

M. Lemoine, of Nancy, France, will send out, soon, several double and semidouble flowered varieties of Begonia semperflorens which he has succeeded in raising. If they retain the vigor of growth and free flowering character of the single varieties they should be very valuable acquisitions.

Mr. C. J. Stromback, of Lincoln Park, Chicago, states that in some experiments carried on under his supervision it was found that a solution of Kraft's Plant Tonic kills the little brown mite which infests Harrisii lily bulbs, and is supposed to be the cause of the trouble which growers have experienced lately with this plant. Poured into the bulb, this remedy, it is claimed, kills the insect in about ten hours, without any danger to the plant.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST has never been given to undignified or misleading editorial attacks. It may, however, with all modesty, invite comparison with any other paper in the trade as to those qualities which appeal to the intelligent reader. In the number and standing of its regular contributors, in the quality and quantity of its reading matter, in the mechanical excellence and pleasing appearance, in the extent of its circulation and in bona fide and paid advertising, in fact, in everything which gives a paper value to its readers, it invites comparison. It stands ready at all times to satisfy any inquirer among its advertisers as to its circulation, which it has often printed and has reason to believe is greater than that of all other papers in this trade com-

"The Pruning Book."

We have received through A. C. Me-Clurg & Company a copy of this addition to the garden-craft series of Prof. L. H. Bailey, published by the Macmillan Com-pany of New York. The book covers the entire subject of pruning, and is especially complete in its treatment of trees and shrubs grown for their fruits. It is a handy volume, written in the professor's best style, the contents well arranged and serviceably illustrated. The "why and wherefore" of many garden operations will be clearer to all after a perusal of its pages.

Lawn Grass.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—There has been some difference of opinion expressed here as to whether the grass should be raked off lawns after the lawn mower. I have taken a stand on the subject and would like the opinion of some of the practical contributors to your journal. I would esteem it a great favor if you would raise the question in the AMERICAN FLORIST, the point aimed at being a good clean lawn independent of the labor involved.

Cut Flower Price Lists Received.

H. L. Sunderbruch Co., Cincinnati; Ellis & Pollworth, Milwaukee; Bassett & Washburn, Chicago; Kennicott Bros. Company, Chicago.

Catalogues Received.

J. H. H. Boyd, Gage, Tenn., tree seeds; Wood Bros., Fishkill, X. Y., plants; Schlegel & Fottler, Boston, Mass., bulbs; W. L. Clark, Leamington, Ont., plants and seeds; Ellis & Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis., plants.

Greenhouse Building.

Springfield, Ill,-Bell Miller, one rose house, 30x115, one chrysanthemum house 10x115, one carnation house 20x70, one violet pit 6x115, one extension 29x20.

Galena, Ills.-B. F. Vandervate, one greenhouse 18x80.

Toronto, Ont.-John II. Dunlop, two commercial houses, each 20x400.

Brampton, Ont.—H. Dale, two green-houses each 20x600. R Jennings, one greenhouse 18x100.

Hail Notes.

The greenhouses of the Junction City Floral Co., of Junction City, Kan., and Wm. P. Ransom, of the same town, and those of A. B. Davis & Son, of Purcell-ville, Va., were struck by hail on the 11th inst. All were insured in the Florists' Hail Association.

On May 14 the establishment of the Humfeld Floral Company at Kansas City, Mo., were reduced to a complete wreck by hail. The loss will exceed $1,500.

Gus Obermeyer reports a hailstorm which did excessive damage at Parkersburg, W. Va., on May 15, both glass and plants being broken down.

How to Keep Catalogues.

Everyone knows how handy catalogues are for reference, and also what a nuisance it is to find the one you want when you are in a hurry. I have been studying for years to get some cheap and easy way of keeping catalogues, so I could find any one I wanted quickly, and having found one which fills the bill perfectly for me, am minded to tell the readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST all about it. I first made a number of shelves, one above another, four inches apart and large enough for large size catalogues to lie on them flat.

When a catalogue is received, I number it and put it on the bottom shelf. Then I open my American Florist's Directory OF FLORISTS AND SEEDSMEN to the list of firms issuing catalogues and put the same number before the name of the firm who issue this particular catalogue. Number two is treated the same way and placed on top of number one, and so on until the shelf is full. The shelf is then marked plainly, "Nos. 1 to 25," or whatever the last number may be, and the next shelf is used in the same way.

The catalogues are numbered for convenience on the cover near the lower left-hand corner. When a catalogue is needed, we simply open the directory, which is always left lying on the top of the last catalogue filed, get the number of the catalogue wanted and can pull it out in less time than it takes to tell about it.

B. Jones.

Society of American Florists. PURCHASING DEPARTMENT.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists held at Washington, D. C., March 15 and 16, 1898, by unanimous vote, a department of co-operative purchase was created. Its purpose is to secure lower prices by obtaining bids on large quantities of such materials and supplies as are used by the society's members.

The undersigned committee was appointed to carrythis plan into immediate execution, so that present members, or those who join the society may have the benefit which may accrue from this department before the next annual convention, and in this way test its value.

We, therefore, request that you make a list of your probable wants for one year, from April 1, 1898, on all kinds of materials or supplies that you may require, such as glass (state size, quality and thickness of same); pipe, valves, nails, etc. (state kinds and sizes); coal, (state kind and quality); rubber hose (state size and make you perfer); fertilizer (kind and make); tobacco stems. Also a list of any and all other supplies not above enumerated, giving detail as to quantity, quality, make, etc.

As soon as a sufficient number of replies are received, the amount will be collated and estimates will be invited for supplying the same to all members of the Society of American Florists, delivered f. o. b. at factory or some convenient shipping point. Each member of the society will be entitled to his supply of such material, whether large or small, at contract prices. It is believed that a large per cent. upon purchases can be saved to the society's members, especially to the small buyers, as in contracting for large quantities much better prices can be obtained.

Please be prompt in sending us reply, giving a list of your probable wants to April 1, 1899. It will enable the com-mittee to give you more promptly the results of their efforts.

Ермихр М. Wоор, W. W. Coles, W. K. HARRIS, Committee.

All communications should be addressed to William J. Stewart, secretary, 67 Bromfield street, Boston, Mass.

Springfield, III.

Trade is very quiet at present, as the social season is ended, and the sale of cut flowers is thereby restricted, while the plant trade is not yet opened. All winter business was brisk, and at Easter sales were only limited by the amount of good stock available.

Bell Miller, wholesale and retail dealer in cut flowers, has enjoyed such a phenominal increase in trade that she is nearly doubling the capacity of her establishment at 829 South Second street. She is repainting and repairing everything on the place and is putting in a boiler and steam heating plant. When the improve-ments are completed she will have a model place with a glass area of 20,000 square feet. Miss Miller has been engaged in commercial floriculture for but five years

Omaha.

PLANS FOR THE S. A. F. CONVENTION IN AUGUST .- BANOUET TO PRESIDENT GUDE AND SECRETARY STEWART.-A BUSINESS CHANGE.

The Nebraska and Iowa Florists' Club met last Thursday evening but immediately adjourned for one week in order to give those present an opportunity to get better acquainted with W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., president, and W. J. Stewart, of Boston, secretary of the S. A. About an hour was spent in listening to addresses by Messts. Gude and Stewart before our guests were ushered to the Delone hotel, where a banquet had been prepared. The table decorations were of prepared." Bridesmaid, red carnations, Easter lilies and adiantum. The musicians were in one corner behind a screen of palms, while other plants were scattered about the hall. Those who contributed post-prandial oratory were President Gude, Secretary Stewart, L. C. Chapin, of Lincoln; A. Delanney, of South Omaha; J. F. Wilcox, of Conneil Bluffs, Ia.; Ed. C. Erfling and Lewis Henderson, of Omaha, the latter gentleman reciting his favorite, "The Mission of Flowers.

Mr. Donaghue, Jr., suggested something aside from speeches for the guests and headed the list as a member of the Society of American Florists. This was gratifying to Mr. Stewart, who agreed to sing a song should he obtain ten new names. As the eleventh man gave in his name the song was asked for and Mr. Stewart responded promptly, singing that popular old air "Annie Rooney."

Those who attended the banquet were: William F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; W. J. Stewart, Boston, Mass.; L. A. Moore, Plattsmouth, Neb.; Henry Peterson, Florence, Neb.; J. F. Wilcox, Conneil Bluffs, Ia., L. C. Chapin, Lincoln, Neb.; A. Delanney, Fred. Berlinghoff and Lewis Henders, Sandy University Edition of the Proceedings of the Pro derson, South Omaha; John Simmons, R. 11. Davey, A. Donaghue, Sr., A. Donaghue, Jr., Ed. C. Ertling, S. B. Stewart, Geo. Swoboda, Ben Haas, Glen R. Hodson, Joseph Chalmers, Paul B. Floth, J. J. Hess and Mr. Adams, superintendent of city parks, Omaha.

The committee arrived in Omaha carly Thursday morning and secured the First Congregational church for the conven-tion in August. This is pronounced the best building the society has ever been able to so are for its annual sessions

Is arr & Davidson have succeeded Rober Inger at the old Parker place, and Lave opened a down town store, with Miss Katie Perker in charge. G. R. H

Pittsburg.

ODDER OF RAST MEN ARE DOING THE BE Priss of THE SMORY CITY: LATE 140815 - SEM TES DOINGS: LANGRYS

A rise to the market or the majorit. et the thurses' establishments at the der cohar the grover a bedding plant der ich act the grower of bettding plant will do the lock of the business during there is two or three weeks. In Me-ghen, essecially or the west and north-de let their large market building the exception of the very wide paveners or ade value entirely taken up with the dependent learners of blooming heldistrict in the

The relation in the early part of the configurations of Tuesday and Wellis days and well as the relation of th considered about the right time to begin. The stock grown this year is almost invariably of good quality, much better than in 1897, while the ruling prices are about the same as in late years. The Memabout the same as in late years. orial Day trade gives every promise of being greater than usual.

James Semple, of Bellevue, reports business as brisk with him, especially at the greenhouses, he having a very extensive trade at this season of the year at home. He informs me he has commenced planting out his asters and will put in fully double the quantity he usually does in order to meet the increased demand for the seed, and more particularly in seperate colors.

Langhans & Co. have been getting a goodly share of the business and express themselves as well satisfied considering the condition of affairs at present. They have in addition to their cut-flower trade developed quite a good business in foliage plants, palms, etc.

Mr. Rankoff was a visitor with us this REGIA. week.

Worcester, Mass.

Funeral work has kept down the surplus of stock this week, although flowers are very plentiful and the regular trade is dropping off very rapidly. Trade usually falls off a little just before Memorial Day, but it seems worse this year than usual.

The quality of blooms still keeps up, but prices have a downward tendency. bedding trade is not starting very well and growers who have a large stock of bedding plants are getting anxious. A general slaughtering of prices would not be surprising, though present charges leave a very small margin of Many growers who contemplate adding to their establishments are hesitating on account of the high price of glass, and quite a few will not build unless prices take a drop.

From all appearances the stock of flowers available for Memorial Day will be much larger than heretofore, with the quality very good. Lily of the valley, Narcissus Poeticus, white lilac and dentzia, field grown, will be in good condition and will help out greatly in designs. The war spirit should have influence on trade and unless popular cuthusiasm runs entirely to flags, florists should profit thereby. A. H. L. thereby.

SAN RALALL, CAL.-H. Schluter reports that never in the past nine years has business been so dull in his locality. Rain fell on May 14 for the first time since early in February.

SITUATIONS, WANTS, FOR SALE.

Advertisements under this head will be inserted at the rate of 10 cents a line (seven words) each inser-tion. Cash minst accompany order. Plant advs. not admitted under this head. Every paid subscriber to the AMERICAN FLORIST for the vent 188 is entitled to a live-line want adv. free to be used at any time during the year.

STILLATION WANTED By a good all round gar Statemer English married no limits, private piece preferred Statewayee II H. HINT, Evanston, III.

STILL CHON WANTED By a practical florist good propagator and designer. In wars experience to take charge. New Fuglind preferred. Address 11. c tre American Florist.

STILLATION WANTED As working foremen or otherwise by good rose grower, also carnathous surfacemens set. English, a new, age 2s, steady is our state wages. G. care Am. F.orlat.

CILATION WANTED By florist young man thoregals understanding all work perialiding to cut the and a setal establishment competent and stance experienced Excellent references Address G.W. care American Fiorist CITUATION WANTED-By a practical farmer and S gardener: German. 42 years of age, no children Understands his business thoroughly and not afraid of work Address F. J. LAMPERT, Ansonia, Conn.

SITUATION WANTED—By a married man, no family. English, age 28 years; 13 years experience, thorough in all bran hes. Would like to run small commercial place. Wages 8:0 per month.

GARDENER. Floral Park. L. I., N. Y.

STTUATION WANTED-By experienced florist, married (no children) middle age: either private or commercial place; understand rai-ing general stock, greenhouse building and steam fitting. Address FLORIST. 5739 Esston Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

SITUATION WANTED—by June 10th, by practical florist, single, 10 years' experience: roses, carnations, violets, miscellaneous stock, etc.; knowledge of floral work and outdoor bedding. References. State wa es. Address FRANK, care American Florist SITUATION WANTED as foreman in large out flower growing establishment by a first-class grower of roses, carnail loss, etc.; has been foreman in large places tor pust 10 years; 24 years experience. Best references. GROWER, care Am. Florist.

SITUATION WANTED—As head gardener in private place or public institution. English, 52, widower tone daughter. 25). Thorough horticulturist, fruits, flowers, vegetables, landscape and ornamental work; 4½ years la Golden Gate Park, one year head gardener in present attuation. Best of references, Address, stating wages, etc., G. M. Stratton, Dungeness, Cumberland Island, Fernandina, Fla.

WANTED-Pair Agave variegata 3 to 4 ft. spread.
Address with description and price
VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chingo.

WANTED-First-class florists' wire design worker.
Steady work the year round. Apply with refs.
HOLTON & HUNKEL CO., Box 103, Milwaukee, Wis.

WANTED An energetic foreman, married, for inrge cut flower growing establishment; must be experienced.

METEOR, care Am. Floriat.

WANTED-By June I. A. No. 1 rose grower (American Beauty a speciatty), married man, with good references; tair pay. T.W.L. Englewood, N.J.

WANTED-Gardener, private place, Chicago; palms, orchide, ferns, lawn, garden, firea, cow. Must be competent: attaches. Address Flowers, 622 Riatto Bldg., Chicago.

WANTED AT ONCE-An nll-round good florist, slogie. $1s to $20 per month with board and room. 2026 Senate Ave., N., Indianapolts Ind. room.

WANTED-Florist competent to grow good stuff, no roses, caronthons, 'mums, violets and general bedding stock; married man well experienced preferred. State wages required and ability, also refs. CHAS KLOPFER 208 Smithheld St. Philaburg, Pa.

FOR SALE the retail business with greenbouse largestock plants, palms; or exchange, a bargain have other business. Address 11 B. care American Florist.

POR SALE- East of Chicago & Northwestern Rail way, south of Graceland avenue, land suitable for greenhouse purposes at $25 to $25 per front foot. F. F. Shidlall, 215 Jansen Ave., Chicago.

FOR SALE OR RENT- Flourishing florist business in western city, including stock and implements. Terms to suit. Good chance for energetic and practical man. For particulars address. M. care Am. Florist.

FOR SALE—Foor greenhouses, nearly new, aplended retail stand, near business center in residence district, on fond to cemetery, paved street. Terms easy. Must retire on account of poor health.

A CLAUS, 503 N. Rth St., Springfield, III.

POR NALE One high pressure Liborae power tubular return steam boller, good as new, used two sensons only: at p escat bents 12000 feet of glass. Price complete, to b., 800 cash; cost $200. Address J. F. AMMANN, Hox 51, Edwardsville, III.

FOR SALE.

Greenhouses in one of the best cities in Wisconsin. A good investment and a money maker for a lineature. Owner must retire on account of poor health. For particulars write.

A. LEPUNER, Wausau. Wis.

CHICAGO LOTS FOR SALE.

One block from corner Lincoln avenue and Wellington street, a bunch of lots at $25 per front foot; sewer and water. Suitable for greenhouse purposes.

P. F. HAYNES & CO.. Telephone L. V. 247. 1004 Wellington St., Chicago.

Mention American Florist.

For Sale Cheap!

Wholesale Commission Store, centrally located in New York City; well ntted up with every convenience. Change of location, reason for selling.

Addross WHOLESALER, care Enstern Office

Decoration Day Howers

BUY YOUR STOCK DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS.

We are now cutting from FIVE to TEN THOUSAND TEA ROSES and TWO THOU-SAND BEAUTIES per day, besides a large amount of CARNATIONS, SMILAX, ASPARA-

Address all orders to.....

Bassett & Washburn.

Send Orders Now for Decoration Day Sales.

You want this for Decoration Day!

VASE FOR THE CEMETERY

Clara Cemetery

A RECEPTICIE FOR ELOWERS, LONG NEEDED FOR THE CEMETERY.

The CLARA VASE for use at the Cemetery is a handsome as well as one of the most useful articles ever placed on the market. It is absolutely a new thing and takes the place of all the old the cans bottles and various old truck the place of all the old the cans bottles and various the statement of the control of the canse of the control the statement of the control of the control of the control
the statement of the control of the control of the control that the day bottle the control of the control takes and thands about twelve incess high. The lower end is sharp-pointed so it can be embedded about as inches in the ground and stand firm. It will hold shillent water to keep the flowers fresh and sweet, and will accommodate towers with long as well as short stems. The VASE is bell-shaned and the too has a diameter of about five inches The VASE is sold at a very low price and is within the reach of all classes. It is very strong and well made and can not be broken by rough handfing.

Prices, delivered to rallrosds or express companies in
Chicago:

One Dozen, - - - - $3.50 Three Dozen, at - - - 3.25 Five Dozen, at - - - 3.00

Samples sent on recelpt of fifty cents (50c) each. These VASES will retail in the market for from 50c, to 75c, each, thereby giving the dealer a profit of over a hundred per cent on his investment.

GUS and VARIOUS OTHER FLORISTS' STOCK.

We have a very fine lot of fancy common ferns and green galax leaves just received.

Don't fail to write for our DECORATION DAY PRICE LIST which will be issued on Friday, the 20th inst. We will ship when possible direct from our greenhouses at Hinsdale, thereby saving the rehandling of the flowers.

nts. Will guarantee them to be as fine as any grown.

|                            | Per 100    | Per 1000 |
|----------------------------|------------|----------|
| American Beauty21g-inch pe | it. $5,00 | §50,00   |
| 3ridesimids 21             | 3,00       | 25,00    |
| President Carnol212        | 3,50       | 35 00    |

Bassett & Washburn

Growers of and Wholesale Dealers in CUT FLOWERS

GREENHOUSES AND RESIDENCE: HINSDALE, ILL. Store: 88 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

They Don't Miss

Who take the right course and dispose of surplus stock 🊜 through the advertising pages of 🧀 🏕

The American Florist

IT HAS NO RIVAL.

We are growers and sell at growers' prices.

The White Japan Lotus The finest of all Netumbiums. Flowering tubers, 80c each; $8.00 per doz.

AMERICAN LOTUS. $20.00 per 100.
NYMPILEA MARLIACILE CHROMATILLA 25.00 per 100.
NYMPILEA ODORATA. $.00 per 100.
NYMPILEA ODORATA ROSEA 25.00 per 100.

All other stock in proportion. We have every Water Lily and Aquatic worth growing. Catalogue free.

GEO. B. MOULDER, Smith's Grove, Ky.

THE "OLD RELIABLE" FOR

WHOLESALE

Hunt's Flowers Go Everywhere

76 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

E. C. AMLING

Wholesale Cut Flowers

51 Wabash Avenue,

W. S. HEFFRON, Mgr.

....CHICAGO.

A. G. PRINCE & CO. Wholesale Gut Flowers

AND FLORISTS' SUPPLIES.

Agents for the Hinsdale Rose Co. Special attention paid to shipping orders.

88 & 90 Webseh Avenue.

Telephone Main 320B.

CHICAGO.

It is not much trouble to mention the AMERICAN FLORIST when corresponding with an advertiser.

S. B. WINTER.

(Successor to WINTER & GLOVER.)

21 Randolph St., Chicago.

GRADE UU

PACKED RIGHT,

they will reach you in just as good condition as they reach us

WIRE DESIGNS: A Full Line. Write ue for our lilustrated Catalogue.

Wholesale Flower Markets

| CHICAGO, May 20.                  |               |
|-----------------------------------|---------------|
| Roses, Beautiesper doz75@2.50     | 1             |
| " Brides                          | 1.00@4.00     |
| " Meteors, Bridesmalds, Kalserin. | 1.00 @ 4.00   |
| " Gontlers, Perles                | 1,00@ 3.00    |
| Carnations, common                |               |
| " fancy                           | 2.00 (a 3.00) |
| Marguerites                       |               |
| Narcissus Poetlens                |               |
| Harrisli, Callas                  | 2.00% 5.00    |
| Lily of the valley                | 1.00@ 3.00    |
| Tulips                            | 1.0000 1.00   |
| Sweet peas                        | 50@ 1.00      |
| Tweet peas                        | C 18109 1.00  |
| Gladiolt                          | . 0.0004 5.00 |
| Adlantum                          |               |
| Smllax                            | 10.00@15.00   |
| Asparagus                         |               |
| Pansles                           |               |
| Paronlesper dozen, .25@ .50       | )             |

Dutch Bulbs

HYACINTHS. TULIPS, CROCUS, ETC. RUDOLPH VAN TIL & CO., Hillegom, Holland.

American Representative

L. C. BOBBINK, Rutherford, N. J. ASK FOR CATALOGUE.

For FLORISTS.. For SEEDSMEN.

VAN ZANTEN BROTHERS.

HILLEGOM,

Wholesale Florist

Don't Forget that we are at 4 Washington St., Chicago.

Write for special quotations on large orders.

wwWholesale Florists

111 West 30th Street, NEW YORK. Consignments Solicited. Telephone, 260 38th St.

JAMES

Cood Money for your Flowers. Good Flowers for your Money 49 WEST 29TH ST., NE TELEPHONE 1675 38th St. NEW YORK.

N. Y. CUT FLOWER EXCHANGE

404-412 E. 34th St. Near Ferry. Open for Cnt Flower Sales at 6 o'clock Every Morning.....

DESIRABLE WALL SPACE TO RENT FOR ADVERTISING.

JOHN DONALDSON, Secretary.

ROGERS PARK FLORAL CO..

Wholesale Growers of

FLOWERS.

51 WABASH AVENUE,

-CHICAGO.

HEADQUARTERS FOR AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

WHOLEBALE GROWERS OF

600,000 fELL OF GIASS.

We can fill all orders on short notice with all leading varieties of Roses and Carnations. We are Beadquarters for fine American Beauties. Give us a trial and convince yourself. & &

NO MORE ROOTED ROSE CUTTINGS.)

ROSE PLANTS

| Out of 25 inch pids 1 | her 100 - Per 1000 - |
|-----------------------|----------------------|
| American Beauty       |                      |
| Meteorica             | 2.50 22.50           |
| Bride                 | 2,50 22,50           |
| Testout               | 2,50 22,50           |
| Helle Siebrecht       | ., 2.50 22.50        |
| Perle                 | 2.50 22,50           |
| Pres. Curnet          | 2.50 22,50           |
| Kniserin.             | 2.50 22,50           |
| Bridesimiel           | ., 9,80 90,00        |
| La Fricine            | 2.50 20,00           |

CARNATIONS FROM SAND.

|                | Per 100  | Per 1000 |
|----------------|----------|----------|
| Flora Hell     | . $3.00 | $25,00  |
| Coddinch       | 1.50     | 12.50    |
| Bridesmid      | 1.50     | 12.50    |
| Wan Scott      | (41-1)   | 7.50     |
| Metawan        | 1.00     | 7,50     |
| Empire Workley | . 100    | 7.50     |

We would exposure special attention to our choice Smilax Plant (  $\sim \pm 2.00$  per 100 and \$15.00 per 100a

REINBERG BROS., 51 Wabash Avenue, Chicago. . 4

M. A. HART. Commission Dealer Cut Flowers. 44 WEST 29TH STREET,

NEW YORK CITY. THE BEST MARKET IN NEW YORK. 'Phone 1307 38th St.

TRAENDLY & SCHENCK. Wholesale Florists.

Control the stock of many celebrated growers and are prepared to quote prices on First Grade Cut Flowers. All varieties.

38 West 28th St., and Cut Flower Exchange, Tel. 961 18th Street. NEW YORK CITY.

THE NEW YORK CUT FLOWER CO.

119 and 121 West 23d Street, II2 and II4 West 24th Street,

Telephone 733-18th. CONSIGNMENTS SOLICITED.

Special Attention Given to Shipping Orders.

Wholesale Flower Markets

NEW YORK MOV 19

| NEW TORK, MAY 15.                        |
|------------------------------------------|
| Roses, Beauties. Hybrid 4_00@12_00       |
| " Bridesmaids, Testouts, Brides50@ 6.00  |
| " Morgans, Meteors                       |
| Carnations 75@ 1.25                      |
| Lily of the valley 1 00@ 2.00            |
| Lily of the valley                       |
| Daffodila, Tuiips (outdoor)              |
| llarrisii, Callas                        |
| Smilax                                   |
| Asparagus. 40.00@50.00                   |
| Asparagua 40.00@30.00                    |
| BOSTON, May 18,                          |
| Roses, Beauties, Brunners 5 00@15.00     |
| Notes, nearties, brunners 3 (00@15.00    |
| " Morgana, Meteors                       |
| " Brides. Bridesmaids, Carnot 2 00@ 6.00 |
| Carnationa                               |
| fancy                                    |
| Lilv of the valley 2.00@ 3.00            |
| Daffodils, Tulips (outside) 50@ 1.00     |
| Harrisii. Callas 4 00@ 8 00              |
| Sweet peaa 1.00                          |
| Smilax                                   |
|                                          |
| PHILADELPHIA, May 18.                    |
| Roses, Beauties, per dozen 1.00@ 4.00    |
| " Brunnera                               |
| " Jacqs 8.00@12.00                       |
| " Tens 3 00 a 10.00                      |
| Carnationa                               |
| Lily of the valley 3 00@ 4.00            |
| Longiflorums                             |
| Harrisii                                 |
| Sweet peas                               |
| Smliax 12.00@15.00                       |
| эшпал 12.00/913.00                       |

LUDLOW ST. PHILADELPHIA, PA

John I. Raynor,

49 WEST 28th STREET.

_NEW YORK.

SPECIAL EXTRA STOCK OF AM. BEAUTY, METEOR, BRIDESMAID, BRIDE. Record Breaking Carnations

ALL THE YEAR ROUND.

THOS. YOUNG, JR.

* * Wholesale Florist

43 West 28th Street. New York.

WALTER F. SHERIDAN. WHOLESALE

FLORIST.

39 West 28th Street, NEW YORK.

Roses shipped to all points. Price list on application.

ose (irowers

Will find a good market and good returns for their stock at....

JULIUS LANG'S 53 W. 30th Street, - NEW YORK.

Edward C. Horan. 34 W. 29th Street, NEW YORK,

WHOLESALE • FLORIST.

Careful Shipping to all parts of the country.

Price list on application.

WM. C. SMITH. Wholesale Florist

40 So. 16th St., PHILADELPHIA.

Consignments Solicited. Special attention given to shipping orders

Long Distance Telephone 5008 A.

9 Chapman Place, 15 Province Street, FLOWER MARKE BOSTON, MASS.

WELCH BROS., PROPRIETORS.

Consignments from regular growers assigned separate space in our market. We guarantee payment for all Flowers sold. Sales reported weekly; payments mouthly, or oftener if required.

THE NEW ENGLAND HEADQUARTERS FOR THE BEST GRADE OF FLOWERS AT ALL SEASONS OF THE YEAR.

J. K. ALLEN, Wholesale Florist.

EXTRA ROSES

57 West 28th Street,

Distance Telephone 382-38th St

NEW YORK.

GALVIN&CO. Wholesale Florists

AND DEALERS IN ALL

FLORISTS' SUPPLIES, 4 Ordway Place, BOSTON, MASS.

Cut Flower Consignments Solicited. Best market.

GEORGE A. SUTHERLAND, Cut Flowers & Florists' Supplies WHOLESALE.

67 Bromfield St..

BOSTON. MASS.

Wholesale Florists

JOBBERS IN

FLORISTS' VASES. Hortlenliural Auctioneers.

84 HAWLEY STREET, . BOSTON.

JOHN YOUNG, ROSES, CARNATIONS, VALLEY

and all other choice cut flower stock. NEW YORK. 51 W. 28th Street. Price list on application.

FRANK MILLANG,

WHOLESALE COMMISSION.

408 E. 34th Street,

Cut Flower Exchange.

NEW YORK.

BUFFALO FLORISTS' EXCHANGE IS BURNED OUT.—BUSINESS IS EXCELLENT.—A NEW FLORIST .- COMMENTS.

Buffalo now has another florist in the person of F. G. Liemberner, who occupied a part of the store at 452 Main street with W. A. Adams, and who opened a flower store in connection with his hair store when Mr. Adams moved.

The Buffalo Florists' Club has received an invitation from President Wm. Scott to meet at his Corfu greenhouses on Thursday, and I am sure a good crowd will go, as a trip into the country is always enjoyed by city boys.

The florists have suffered because of the war, as several weddings that gave promise of brilliance were hastened by the young men being called out with their regiments. One officer was single, married and separated from his wife in three hours, but in this instance the separation will, we hope, he only temporary.

American Beauties are being handled very largely by the stores, and good flowers sell readily at $5 to $7 per dozen.

Other roses are quite plentiful and are of good quality.

Fire visited the Tifft block on Washington street on Sunday morning and greatly damaged the stock of the Buffalo Cut Flower Exchange, but Manager Pickelman has secured another store on the same street and will be open for business in a few days. Had the wind been blowing we would have been minus both wholesale houses, as Kasting's store is in the second building from the Tifft block.

E. H. Vick, of Rochester, called on local florists last week.

Marquette, Mich.—Martin Peterson has established a local agency for the Negaunee greenhouses. He has had experience in floriculture in Sweden.

WM. F. KASTING COMMISSION FLORIST....

495 Washington St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Also Dealer in Florists' Supolies and Wire Designs

Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson,

45-47-49 Wabash Avenue,

WE OFFER ALL VARIETIES

SELECT ROSES and CARNATIONS

GET ORDERS IN EARLY FOR DECORATION DAY.

J. A. BUDLONG, WHOLESALE GROWERS.

OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

CINCINNATI, May 19.
Roses, Beauties, select.....

37=39 Randolph Street, CHICAGO.

Wholesale Flower Markets

| medium                                                    |  |
|-----------------------------------------------------------|--|
| " Brides, Bridesmaids 3 00@ 4.00                          |  |
| printes, printesimanda                                    |  |
| Mereora                                                   |  |
| " Perle 3 00                                              |  |
| Carnations                                                |  |
| fancy                                                     |  |
|                                                           |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Lily of the valley 3.00                                   |  |
| Harristi                                                  |  |
| Callas 6.00@ 8.00                                         |  |
| Stocks                                                    |  |
|                                                           |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Adiantum 1 00                                             |  |
| Аврагадиа 50.00                                           |  |
|                                                           |  |
| St. LOUIS, May 19.                                        |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Roses, Renuties 2 00@33 00                                |  |
| " Meteors 1,00@ 4 00                                      |  |
| " Bridea, Brideamaids 1.00@ 4.00                          |  |
| " Peries 1.00@ 1.00                                       |  |
|                                                           |  |
| EN1801111                                                 |  |
| Carnationa 1.00@ 3 00                                     |  |
| Violets, California                                       |  |
| " double35                                                |  |
| Lily of the valley 2.00@ 3.00                             |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Harristi                                                  |  |
| Callas 5.00@ ti 00                                        |  |
| Smilax,                                                   |  |
|                                                           |  |
| MILWAUKEE, May 19                                         |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Rosea Beauties                                            |  |
| Brides, Bridesmaids 2 0000 4 00                           |  |
| rere z uka 1.00                                           |  |
| " Meteors 2 00% 4 00                                      |  |
| Carnations                                                |  |
| Sweet pear                                                |  |
| Valley, Indoor 3.00                                       |  |
|                                                           |  |
| " ontdoor 1 00% 2.10                                      |  |
| T011ps                                                    |  |
| Panetes 50                                                |  |
| Sm(lax                                                    |  |
| Adiaptum 756c I 00                                        |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Tris. Hispanica,                                          |  |
| December 14 to                                            |  |
| BUFFALO, May 13.                                          |  |
| Roses, Beauties                                           |  |
| Brides, Bridesmaids, Meteors 3 0000 fi 00                 |  |
| " Perlea 2 0066 1 00                                      |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Niphetos 2.0064 00                                        |  |
| K.B.INEFIN                                                |  |
| Carnations, white and colored 1 00cc 2 00                 |  |
| Daybreak and fancles 2.00cc 3.00                          |  |
| Elly of the valley 3 100c 4.00                            |  |
|                                                           |  |
|                                                           |  |
| Sourcleaus                                                |  |
| Harristi                                                  |  |
| Prillian   7 (1965)   10 (10   1   10   10   10   10   10 |  |
| Laltpa 2 1063 3 00                                        |  |
| Panish 10s 50                                             |  |
| Variates                                                  |  |
| Smillex 15.00                                             |  |
| Adiantum 1 0026 1.25                                      |  |
| Asparagus                                                 |  |
|                                                           |  |
|                                                           |  |

HOLTON & HUNKEL CO.

The Wisconsin Flower Exchange. Fresh Cut Flowers, Florists' Supplies Manufacturers of WIRE DESIGNS

Phone Main 974

457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE.

C. A. KUEHN. Wholesale Florist.

1122 PINE STREET.

ST. LOUIS, MO.

A complete line of Wire Designs.

MOUND CITY CUT FLOWER CO.

Wholesale Florists.

CONSIGNMENTS SOLICITED Special attention given to shipping orders

1322 Pine St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

W. WORSEESESSES 2740 Olive Street, ST. LOUIS, MO. ERS ....wholesale....

.....ROSES, and a full line

Headquarters for the South West ...

ST. LOUIS CUT FLOWER CO.

Wholesale Florists

E. H. MICHEL

1620 Olive St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

Strings 8 to 10 feet long,

50 CENTS.

W. H. ELLIOTT, Brighton, Mass.

Volunteers Wanted!

Room for a few desirable recruits in our army of satisfied customers. LN-LIST at ONCE by SEND-ING US YOUR ORDER

Cut Flowers For Decoration Day.

C. AMLING. 51 WABASH AVENUE, 🥦 🥦 🥴 CHICAGO.

Going, Going, Gone!

and it's your own fault if you don't get the bargains. Auction Sales of Plants every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 9 A. M. at . . . . .

McCARTHY & CO.'S

B4 Hawley Street, BOSTON, MASS.

you want to buy, send for Catalogues. & you want to sell, write for terms. A A A

IT PAYS!

Greenhouse Building

Full information regarding building and heating Greenhouses is given in "GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION," by L. R. TAFT, Professor of Horticulture, Michigan Agricultural College.

PRICE, POSTPAID. $1.50.

"Greenhouse Management"

by the same author, treats of the forcing of flowers, fruits and vegetables under glass; also the propagation and care of house plants; insects, diseases and remedies. 400 pages. Just out. PRICE, POSTPAID, $1.50.

(See review in American Florist, page 1173, April 30, 4898.)

L. R. TAFT,

Agricultural College (P. O.), - Michigan.

FIRST EXCURSION OF THE SEA-SON TO CLEVELAND

via Nickel Plate Road, June 3 to 6 inclusive. $11 35 for the round trip on certificate plan. Tickets good returning until June 13 inclu-Three through trains daily from Van Buren Street Passenger Station, Chicago. For further information address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chi-Telephone Main 3389. (22) cago.

CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

meeting will be held in Cleveland, O., June 7 to 9 inclusive, account of which Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets at $t1.35 for the round trip on certificate plan. Dates of sale June 3, 4, 5 and 6 inclusive. Tickets good returning until and including June 13. further particulars address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389. (23)

Mention the American Florist when corresponding with an advertiser.

No. 60.

THIS COUPON

if presented on any Tuesday or Friday during the spring season will entitle THE BEARER to a good comfortable seat at where he can purchase at his own figures anything and everything in plants, roots, trees and shrubs......

CLEARY'S

Sales at 60 Vesey Street, NEW YORK, 11 A. M.

EVERY TUESDAY AND FRIDAY.

ใดงออดอดอดอดอดอดอดอดอดอด Spring Plant Trade will come easier, and be more profitable if solicited in the nice way you can do such things by means of

LONG'S

Samples for 20 cts. in stamps.

DAN'L B. LONG, Publisher BUFFALO.

EXCURSION TO CLEVELAND.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets from Chicago to Cleveland and return at a fare and one third for the round trip on certificate plan, good going June 3, 4, 5 and 6, and good returning until June 13, inclusive, on occasion of the annual meeting of the Congregational Home Missionary Society in that city. This rate will be $11.35 for the round trip, which is somewhat lower than via other lines. Those desiring space in sleeping cars should make early application in order to secure the best accommodations.

Any further information cheerfully given by addressing J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389. (21)

TELEGRAPH CODE

AM. SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

$2.00 in either stiff or flexible cover. ADDRESS ORDERS TO

> AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

For Insurance against damage by hail, Address JOHN G. ESLER, Sec'y, F. H. A., Saddle River. N. J. THIS IMPRINT ON AN ENCRAVING

IS A CUARANTEE OF SATISFACTORY QUALITY....

Manz makes illustrations for this paper.

GEO. E. COLE & CO. Blank Book Makers.

Stationers and F

86 and 88 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

THE Regan Printing House

NURSERY SFFD FLORISTS

> 87-91 Plymouth Place, *** CHICAGO***

ALL Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists wish-ing to do business with Europe should send for the

"Horticultural Advertiser"

This is the British Trade Paper, being read weekly by all Horticultural traders; it is also taken by over 1000 of the best Continental houses. Address EDITORS OF THE "H. A."
Chilwell Nurseries. - Notts, England.

...THE...

"Lyon=Horticole"

is an interesting review of French horticulture. Issued semi-monthly. 20 8-vo. pages illustrated. Subscriptions to the United States, 1 year, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00. Address

DIRECTEUR LYON-HORTICOLE, Lyon-Villeurbanne, France.

FLORISTS' MUTUAL

Application Blanks and Prospectus Ready....

Write now. Delays are dangerous.

W. J. VESEY, Sec'y. - Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE NATIONAL

C. S. LODER, Sec'y, 271 Broadway, New York.

THE WABASH R. R. COMPANY

The Short and Quick Line between the

The Short and Quick Line between the East and West connecting Buffalo, Detroit and Toledo with Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha.

The Wabash is the Only Line running sleeping cars and chair cars (free) between Buffalo and St. Louis and Kansas City.

Through sleeping cars between New York and Boston and St. Louis and Chicago run every day.

cago run every day.

For further information apply to the nearest Railroad Ticket Agent, or to

H. B. McCLELLAN, G. E. A.,

3B7 Broadway, New York Cily,

J. D. McBEATH, N. E. P. A.,

5 State Street, Boston, Mass.

C. S. CRANE, Gen. Pass. & Tkl. Agl., St. Louis, Mo.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. IRVING ROUSE, Pres.: E. ALBERTSON Vice-Pres.: GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y and Treas

THE San Jose scale has been found on nearly all classes of nursery stock, both fruit and ornamental, commonly grown in northern nurseries.

The New climbing rose Psyche, originated by Messers Paul & Son, Cheshunt, England, is a cross between a Polyantha rose and Crimson Rambler. The flowers are of good size, very double and of a light rose tint.

Arms on young nursery stock can be controlled by dipping the intected tips of branches in a solution of whale oil soap, one pound to seven gallons of water, according to a late bulletin of the New York Experiment Station.

Utica, N. Y.

As usual at this season of the year, C. F. Baker's establishment resembles the proverbial beehive. Ifound a small army of men scattered about the greenhouses, some attending to carnations and others to roses, while F. Baker, Jr., had theferns in charge. Ferns are one of their specialties and they are preparing at least two hundred thousand for the market. In order to extend their facilities in this special branch, it is quite likely that more glass will be added during the coming

The demand with which Red Jacket and Oneida, the two seedlings introduced during the past winter, have met, surpassed Mr. Baker's most sanguine expectations. In fact, there was not enough stock to go the rounds. I will remark in passing, for the bencht of those who have invested in the seedlings, that with ordinary treatment both will do well wherever planted. A white one is now on the list and may be heard from a year hence.

An experiment worth recording is that of Mr. Baker with grafted roses. He finds that Brides and Bridesmaids grafted on Manetti are in no wise an improvement over young stock on its own roots.

T. E. Shaw is now installed in his new quarters at 217 Genesee street. The store combines all the modern facilities which are essential leatures of modern flower stores

A call on Win. Mathews was a treat, for nowhere, and least of all in a commercial place is there such a variety of orchids in such splendid condition. Next to the Hispanio American quarrel, orchids were the tork of an house. the topic of an hour'z chat, and to hear Mr. Mathews dwell on his favorite subject is to enjoy a discourse the like of which no professional lecturer could give.

Spencer's, as usual, things At 1 C backed spick and span. His cornations and roses are as fine as they are ever grown, while his hedding stock presents a mass of bloom [1] C. Bigelow has no kirk coming? With a fine stock and bright prospects, life, in his opinion, is worth oving. He reports an encourag ar gr busin ess

Congratulations are now in order and same may be addressed to Alderman Front Baker, fr. Unca, N. V. On April Mr. Baker embarked upon the mattiomal see having been happily married of Miss Pose Weisbecker. The young to Miss Fose Weisbecker. The young couple have but recently returned from a wedding trip to Philadelphia and New Howo GLENBROOK, CONN.—J. Callahan has removed to this city from Stamford, Conn., and will engage in nursery business as well as commercial floriculture.

Armstrong's

Everblooming

Tuberose & &

A NEW departure in Tuberose growth.
Flower bearing buds continue to form around the old flower stock undefinitely.
Flowers greatly superior to those of all other single Tuberoses. Awarded Certificate of Merit by the S.A. F. at Providence last August, and the Shaw Gold Medal at St. Louis in November

For Prices and Particulars
...Address...

LUTHER ARMSTRONG,
3720 Olive St., ST. LOUIS MO.

3720 Olive St., ST. LOUIS MD.

OUR SPECIALTIES

AZALEAS, ROSES, RHODODENDRONS

New and rare hardy plants for forcing. Novelties in Ferns (raised by the largest London grower). The newest and best varieties of roses; If P. and Tea scented, from a French raiser. Write us and ask for quotations. We import direct to Boston to meet the demand from Canada and New England States.

F. Brunton & Co.

IMPORTERS AND EXPORTERS OF NEW AND RARE PLANTS,

136 Boylston Street, - BOSTON, MASS.

HARDY

Herbaceous Perennials

THE MOST COMPLETE STOCK IN AMERICA. PÆONIES, PHLOX, IRIS, DELPHINIUMS, ETC., ETC.

JACOB W. MANNING The Reading Nursery, READING, MASS. ESTABLISHED 1854.

Assorted in 25 Varieties.

selection $50 per 1000. Descriptive catalogue and price lists for the trade.

SAMUEL C. MOON,

Florists' Stock for Bedding

Alternanthera, Coleus, Geraniums, Pansies, Daisies, Verbeins, Fiichslas, salvia etc., etc. Wite for prices, Florists when in Milwankee are in-vited to look over our stock.

ARCHIE MIDDLEMASS. 1019 Forest Home Ave., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

EVERGREENS. Etc. 20,000 American Arbor Vitas, 2 to 8 feet specimens

20,000 American Arbor Vitas, 2 to 8 feet specimens and hedging plants.
5,000 Pyramidal Arbor Vita, 2 to 4 feet, 20,000 Compacts, Globe and other dwarf Arbor Vitas, all sizes.
3,000 Nordman's Silver Fir, 1 to 2½ feet, 2,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet, 5,000 Hemlock Sprince, 1 to 4 feet, 10,000 Retinosporas, Squarrosa, Plumosa, Plumosa aurea and other sorts, 1 to 5 feet, 5,000 Irish Junipers, 1 to 2½ feet, 10,000 Pines, Austrian, Scotch, Excelsa, White and dwarf varieties, all sizes.
1,000 Enonymous Japonica, 18 to 36 inches, 2,000 Enonymous radicans variegata.
1,000 Enonymous radicans variegata.
1,000 English Holly, I to 4 feet, 3,000 Mahonias aquifoha and Japonica.
3,000 English Ivy, strong plants, Prices low, Correspondence solicited.
THE WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

THE WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

IMPORTERS

JAPANESE PLANTS, BULBS, ETC.

At lowest prices. Small orders filled from experimental garden Columbia Road. Dorchester, Mass. Wholesale catalogue, 1898, free to the trade.

JAPANESE NURSERY,

Office: 272 Boylston St.,

BOSTON, MASS.

TOKYO... HURSERIES CO.

Headquerters for Japan Eliles Cyoas Revoluta. Morning Glory, sil k nds of Japanese plant, seeds etc. etc. Large assortment always in stock. Orders or on the property of the control of th

The Tokyo Nurseries Co. Komagome, Tokyo,

(JAPAN)
Cable Address
"Nuseries" Tokyo.

36 First Prizes out of 39 entries in 1896 and 1897. Peacock's Prize Winning Dahlias

Send for 1898 illustrated wholesale cataogue before placing orders elsewhere.

W. P. PEACOCK, - Atco, N. J.

Clematis strong young plants of the following leading sorts....

Large Flowering,

Jackmanni, Henryu, Duchess, Ramona, Mmc, Bullard, Frincess, Mmc, Ed. Andre, Superba, Just right for potting or planting up for next Fal-and Spring sales. $1.00 per doz., $8.00 per 100....

F. A. BALLER, Bloomington, III.

್ಷ ಕ್ಷಣೆ ಕ್ಷಣೆ ಕ್ಷಕ್ಷ ಕ್ಷಣೆ ಕ್ The Only Machine

on the market for automatically filling and scaling seed packets.

The Brown Bag-Filling Machine Co. FITCHBURG, MASS., U. S. A.

Necestatic certatetetetetetetet

A LIVE AND RELIABLE CORRESPONDENT

WANTED in every live city in the world. We enable you to deliver flowers by telegraph. A profitable convenience. For particulars, write

C. B. WHITNALL. MILWAUKEE, WIS. 438 Milwaukee St..

Kansas City.

THE MOST DESTRUCTIVE HAIL STORM ON RECORD DID THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS OF DAMAGE ON MAY 14.

When Kansas City starts in to do anything big, she generally "gets there," and when she started in Saturday last to break the hail storm record she surely did it. Starting at 6:30 p. m. and lasting for twenty minutes the hail paid no attention to mere stones but came down in chunks. A bombardment by a Span-ish fleet could not have been more, disastrous so far as glass was concerned.

At the greenhouses of the E. T. Heite Floral Co., not a light of glass was left and even the sash bars were heaten in. The same thing happened at Humfeld Bros.' greenhouses. Some of their houses were covered with lath screens, but the hail did not stop at a little thing like that. W. J. Barnes has 830 lights of glass left out of 6,490 squarefeet, and the loss of plants was very heavy. Other losses were Probst Brothers Floral Co., $4,500; James Payne, $2,000; R. Jarrett & Son, $1,000; A. F. Barbe, $2,000; R. S. Brown & Sons, $4,000. Paul Ducret, at the Union Cemetery, is also a heavy loser. The Baker Bros. report almost a total loss. Chick-Pratt Floral Co. lost about 600 lights. What has made this storm more disastrons is that owing to the bad, cold, wet weather very little of the spring bedding stock had been moved and was still in the houses.

At the place of the Ackerman Bros. their fine new house filled with cucumbers was riddled and the plants were beaten to pulp. They had just finished planting out tomatoes, big bushy plants a foot high, but the hail left no trace of them. lettuce, cabbage, rhubarb, alike being obliterated.

While there was a good deal of small hail the average size was large enough to break any glass exposed to it and the only wonder is that any remains.

Many dwellings, churches, business houses and other buildings suffered very severely, the fine new Manual Training School being especially unfortunate. It is very satisfactory to know that most of the florists were insured, R. Jarrett & Son being the only ones who had not taken out insurance. The Probst Floral Co. had, unfortunately, allowed theirs to expire. Many of the florists were caught in a hail storm last year, among them being James Payne, upon whom this last disasterfalls beavily. His houses were crowded with fine bedding plants, a very large proportion of which are ruined.

The parks met with great loss and Dr. I. M. Ridge's three fine conservatories were completely wrecked. W. J. B.

Los Angeles, Cal.

Los Angeles decided some months ago to hold the annual Fiesta during the first week in May, but when it became evident that war was inevitable the management of La Fiesta concluded to postpone the celebration until the return of peace.

A few days ago, Albert K. Smiley presented to the city of Redlands a magnificent building and ample grounds for a public library. The buildings and grounds have already cost $60,000. The grounds are being rapidly converted into a park, and rare products of the tropics will soon be found growing there. order to stimulate owners to make their home grounds neat and pretty, Mr. Smiley, one year ago, offered a prize of $250 for the prettiest place. The rivalry was so great, and so many competed, that it was necessary to divide the prize among many worthy places

Thomas Patch, formerly with the firm of Pitcher & Manda, is visiting Los Angeles. He had an exciting experience on the way out, as the train was held np, and two train employes and one robber were killed. Nevertheless, he is favorably impressed with this part of the world and may remain here.

Conrad Ohnemuller, who for several ears has been employed in Philadelphia, has returned to Los Angeles for the benefit of the health of some of his family. His address is 1326 Starr street.

C. J. Hartel, who has been in charge of the Oak Grove Nurseries, at Alhambra, has resigned and gone to San Francisco. George Watson, of Redondo, was in the city on Monday and said that the supply of carnations far exceeds the demand, and that he expects this state of affairs to continue until cold weather comes again.

Mrs. M. J. Sherman, who conducted a floral store on Spring street during the winter months, has discontinued business for the dull season. Some of the other stores are scarcely paying expenses

E. H. Rust, one of the horticultural commissioners of this county and the principal owner of the Park Nursery Co., of Pasadena, has departed for Illinois with the avowed intention of taking a new partner into the firm. When Ed. comes back his many friends will heartily welcome his bride. D. R. W.

FOR THE SOLDI

MEMORIAL DAY will be IVI here in one week, and there will be a boom in supplies appropriate for the demands of the day. . . .

Cycas Wreaths, Metal Designs in endless variety, Moss Wreaths, Doves, Inscriptions, Flower Holders for Ceme= teries, Immortelles, Cape Flowers, Bas= kets and Sheaves.

88888888

Every florist will need a big stock of all these things. We can supply these and all other requisites at lowest figures. Illustrated catalogue on application. Wholesale only.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co.,

50-52-54-56 N. Fourth St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SMALL GREEN A

Stiff, wiry stems. Work up beauutiflly. Are all the rage.

Box of 5000, $5.00. Less quantity at $1.25 per 1000. ....ADDRESS....

HARLAN P. KELSEY, 1150 Tremont Bldg., - BOSTON, MASS.

HARDY CUT FERNS

bouquet green, Moss (sphagnum and green), Laurel Roping, Xmas Trees; everything in the green line

H. E. HARTFORD'S, 18 Chapman Place, BOSTON.

Have You Seen Our Agent? A Complete

Catalogue for Florists. Send for One.

ELLIS & POLLWORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Rice & Co.

Exclusive Importers and Manufacturers of....

Florists' Supplies

25 N. 4th Street, -

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

REED & KELLER..... Florists' Supplies

122 W. 25th St.,

Boston Florist Letter Co.

This wooden box nicely stained and varnished, 18x30x12 made in two sections, one for each size letter, given away with first order of 500 letters.

Block Letters, 1 ½ or 2-inch size, per 100, $2.00. Script Letters, $4. Fastener with each letter or word. Used by leading fiorists everywhere and for sale by all wholesale fiorists and supply dealers.

N. F. McCARTHY, Treas. and Manager, 84 Hawley St., BOSTON, MASS.

August Rölker & Sons Cape Flowers, Cycas Leaves, Florist Baskets, SUPPLIES.

Send for trade list; also for prices on fall bulbs,

52 Dey Street,

NEW YORK.

John Conley & Son,

Manufacturers of

TIN FOIL

2 AND 4 DOMINICK STREET.

New York.

BRILLIANT GREEN AND BRONZE

GALAX LEAVES.

For Decorating and all Florists' Designs. CHAS. H. RICKSECKER, Linville, Mitchell Co., N. C.

When corresponding with any advertiser on this page, please mention the fact that you saw the ad. in the AMERI-NEW YORK CITY. | CAN PLORIST.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

JEROME B. RICE, Pres. E. B. CLARK, 1st Vice Pres. S. f. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Coan., Sec.y and Treas.

W. WERNICH, seedsman, of Milwaukee, died last week.

Visiting New York: Albert McCullough, Cincinnati, O.

Connecticut seed growers are drowned with rain again this scason.

C. E. ANGELL & Co., of Oshkosh, Wis., made an assignment, May 6, to George Hilton, of that city.

Visiting Chicago: Theo, Koss, of Mil-waukee: Henry A. Salzer, of La Crosse, Wis., who expects soon to make a western

MISS HEADWORTH, bookkeeper at Vaughan's New York seed store, beams again in her accustomed place, after an illness of three weeks

Titt. Albert Dickinson Co., formerly at 16th and Clark streets, Chicago, have moved into more convenient and commodious offices at West Taylor street and the river.

A COMMITTEE consisting of Messrs, W. Warnaar, L. Van Leenwen and Baart-man passed through Chicago, May 15, en route to Washington to investigate the bulb growing prospects of that state.

THE American Seed Trade Association will hold its sixteenth annual meeting at Old Point Comfort, Va., beginning Tuesday. June 14. A good attendance is expected. Full particulars as to routes, etc., can be had on application to Secretary S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.

California mail reports the past week indicate that most crops are in a critical condition. Hot winds at this time would be very disastrous, and unless the weather is very favorable from now until August all crops not irrigated will be very uncertain. Hay is now being shipped from the east and the state is liable to use a good many thousand tons before the season is over. As we go to press a telegram reaches us saying that recent rains. May 14th and 15th, may make half a crop of onion seed, but that the sweet bea outlook is but little improved.

An Important Circular to Seedsmen.

An Important Circular to Seedsmen.

I SITED STATES DELICEMENT OF AGRICULTURE, OFFICE OF HILL SECRETARY.

WA HISGOON D. C., May 10, 1808. The act of Congress making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending. June 30, 1809, under the neading "Boianical Investigations and Experiments, Division of Botany, contains the following clause. The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to purchase samples of seeds in open market test same, and when found not up to standard he may at his discretion, publish the results of these tests together with the names of the seedsmen by whom the seeds were sold.

The purchase of seeds for the tests authorized under this act will begin July 1, 1808.

The following standards are the basis for the decisions of the Department.

TANTARD OF FRITE AND GERMINATION OF GRICLITERAL FILES

CRECTIFICAL TILES

The seed must be true to name and practically free from sunt—intergot mace a or their eggs or large and the seeds of dodder (Cuacuta apply wild mostard (Brassica apply wild flax (Camelina apple) wild mostard (Brassica apply wild flax (Camelina apple). Fussian thistle—sussola kalitragus), Canada thiste—Card ins argenism—cockle—Agrostemma pithageo chess—dromus secolinus, quack grass (Agropyron repens—peuny cress (Chlaspi argenism) evilet out. Agens fat no and the bulblets of wild onton. All in vineale——It must not contain more than one per cent of other weed seeds.

and should come up to the percentages of purity; and germination given in the following table.

| Kind of seed                | Purity.    | Germina-tion. |
|-----------------------------|------------|-------------------|
|                             | Per cent.* |                   |
| Alfalfa                     | 98         | 85 90             |
| Asparagus                   | 99         | 75-80             |
| Barley                      | 99         | 93-95             |
| Beaus                       | 99         | 90 95             |
| Beet.                       | 99         | 140 150‡          |
| Blue grass, Canadian        | 90         | 45-50             |
| Blue grass. Kentucky        | 90         | 45-50             |
| Brome, awnless              | 90         | 70-75             |
| Buckwheat                   | 99         | 90.95             |
| Cabbage                     | 99         | 93-95             |
| Carrot.                     | 95         | 80.85             |
| Canliflower                 |            | 80-85             |
| Celery                      | 98         | 63 65             |
| Clover, alsike.             | 95         | 75 80             |
| Clover, crimson             |            | 81-85             |
| Clover, red                 | 98         | 85 9)             |
| Clover, white               |            | 75-89             |
| Collaid                     |            | 90-95             |
| Collaid                     | 99         | 90.95             |
| Corn, sweet                 | 99         |                   |
|                             |            | 8,91              |
| Cotton                      |            | 83-90             |
| Cowpea                      | 99         | 85-90             |
|                             | 99         | 85 90             |
| Eggplant                    |            | 75-80             |
| Fescue, meadow              | 95         | 85 90             |
| Lettuce Kafir corn          | 99         | 85-90             |
| Kahr corn.                  | 98         | 85-90             |
| Melon, musk                 | 99         | 85 90             |
| Melon, water                | 99         | 80-85             |
| Millet, common (Chaetochloa |            |                   |
| Italical                    | 98         | 85-99             |
| Millet, hog (Panicum milia- |            |                   |
| Millet, pearl               | 99         | 85 90             |
| Millet, pearl               | 99         | 85 90             |
| Oats                        |            | 90-95             |
| Okra                        | 99         | 80-85             |
| Onion                       | Hil        | 75-80             |
| Parsley                     | (14)       | 70-75             |
| Parsoip                     |            | 70-75             |
| Peas                        | 99         | 90-95             |
| Pumpkiu                     | 99         | 85-93             |
| Radish                      | 99         | 90.95             |
| Rape                        | 99         | S5-110            |
| Rye                         | 99         | 90-95             |
| Salsify                     | 98         | 75-89             |
| Sorghum                     | 98         | 85-90             |
| Spinach                     | 99         | 75 80             |
| Squash                      | 99         | 85-90             |
| Timothy                     | 98         | 85-90             |
| Tomato                      | 98         | 85-99             |
| Turnip                      | 99         | 90-95             |
| TurnipTobacco           | 98         | 75-80             |
| Vetch, hairy                | 98         | 70-75             |
| Vetch, kidney               | 95         | 85-90             |
| Wheat                       | 99         | 90-95             |
|                             |            |                   |

It will be the aim of the Department of Agriculture in carrying out this law to put a stop to the sale of seed so poor as to make probable a positive injury and loss to the purchaser, thus giving protection on the one hand to the farmer and gardener, and on the other hand to the honorable seedsman and seed dealer.

The purchase and testing of the seeds will be carried on under the supervision of the Botanist of the Department, Mr. Prederick V. Coville, and in the immediate charge of Mr. Gilbert H. Hicks, Assistant Botanist.

Seeds showing a test as high as these standards in the immediate charge of Mr. Gilbert H. Hicks, Assistant Botanist.

Seeds showing a test as high as these standards are considered of high grade. Seeds falling five points below the standard in purity, or containing an appreciable amount of the prohibited seeds or more than one per cent of other weed seeds, or falling twenty points below the maximum percentage in germination are, in general considered unfit for sale as first-class seed, and if sold as such the results of the tests are hable to publication. Furthermore, if seeds sold as of lower grade are found to contain a large amount of weed seeds or show a very low germination, so as to render them practically valueless or seriously murious, the results of these tests also are liable to publication. It is recognized, however, that in certain cases, as in highly bred varieties or growth and harvest under unfavorable seasonal conditions, seeds may show a germination lower than the normal, and due allowance will be made.

JAMES WILSON, Secretary. JAMES WILSON, Secretary.

'Impurity allowed refers to inert matter and one per cent (only) of weed seeds other than those practically prohibited, as above noted, (Each beet fruit, or "ball," is likely to contain from 2 to 7 seeds—One hundred balls should yield

1.0 sprouts
This means purity of grain, not purity of stock
A margin of 40 points is allowed in the clovers
One of crimson clovert, grasses and carrot.
A margin of 50 points is allowed in beet, and only 15 points in the bluegrasses.

Manufacturers and Dealers COTTON SEAMLESS, BURLAPS, ETC. SECOND HAND BAGS BOUGHT AND SOLD. CINCINNATI BAG CO. Second and Walnut Sts.. CINCINNATI. O.

RAFFIA BEST QUALITY.
LONG MADAGASCAR
Notwithstanding the higher market on this item I am still offering at the old figure so long as present stock lasts. stock lasts

ceive the same careful attention.

Grafting Wax

Trowbridge's Celebrated Grafting
Wax, the genuine article, 1 lb. bars
at 19c; ½ lb. bars at 20c; ½ lb. bars
at 21c per pound. Rebates: 10 lb.
lots, 5 per cent: 25 lb. lots, 10 per cent: 50 lb. lots, 15 per cent: 100 lb.
lots, 20 per cent. Address all orders
and correspondence to Juniper and Walnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

G. C. Watson, Seedsman.

TRY DREER'S GARDEN SEEDS.

Plants, Bulbs & Requisites.
They are the best at the lowest prices. Trade List issued quarterly, mailed free to the trade only.
HENRY A. DREER,
Philadelphia. Pa

BURPEE'S SEEDS PHILADELPHIA.

Wholesale Price List for Florists and Market Gardeners ------

CLUCAS & BODDINGTON CO.

Importers and Exporters of

Seeds, Bulbs & Plants,

501 TO 503 W. 13TH ST., NEW YORK CITY Send for quotations on all Florists' Bulb Stock.

BEST OF ALL' TOMATO
"ENGLISH" MELONS
(FOR FORCING)

FLOWER SEEDS FOR FLORISTS

WEEBER & DON, Seed Merchants and Growers, 111 Chambers St., NEW YORK, N. Y.

It is good to mess policy to mention the

....AMERICAN FLORIST

when you write to an advertiser.

DECORATION FLOWERS

FLORISTS
HAVING A SURPLUS OF FLOWERS
OF ANY KIND CONSIGN TO US.

In Abundance!

All leading varieties of Roses, Carnations, Paeonies, Lilies, Sweet Peas, Tulips, Lilac, Valley, Daisies, Gladioli, Mignonette, Narcissus, Pansies, Asparagus, Smilax, Ferns, Etc., Etc., &

GIVE US YOUR ORDERS
EARLY
AS POSSIBLE

VAUGHAN, MCKELLAR & WINTERSON,

45=47=49 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

2963636363636363636363636363636

FALL BULBS, AZALEAS, Etc.

Our advance IMPORT LIST is now being printed and will be ready next week. It you have not yet placed your order for this stock it will pay you to await our prices; we can save you money.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY SURPLUS BARGAINS

> Also a good stock of Caladium Esculentum, Begonias, Gladiolus, etc., at close prices ......

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE,

CHICACO: NEW YORK.

84-86 Randolph St. 14 Barclay Street,
——HEADQUARTARS FOR——

"FANCY" BULB STOCK AT REASONABLE PRICES.

Forcing Bulbs...

I T will pay every florist to get our prices on Romans, Harrisii, Longiflorums, Valleys, Hyacinths, Tulips, Azaleas, etc., etc., before closing contracts. Our reputation for high grade stock is well established. Our facilities for handling orders promptly are the best. (Our new quarters, 161 to 163 E. Kinzie St., six floors, 40x100 ft., give us ample room and every convenience for quick dispatch of your commands.)

Special Low Prices on Tuberoses, Gladiolus, Cannas, etc., etc., to close out

PURCHASING DEPARTMENT for florists saves you money on Glass, Pipes, Tools, etc. Service free to florists. Write for particulars.

W. W. BARNARD & CO.

161 to 163 E. Kinzie St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Beerhorst... & Van Leeuwen

GROWERS SASSENHEIM, HOLLAND.

Dutch Bulbs

AND PLANTS FOR AMERICAN MARKET.
Ask for Wholesale Prices.

We will stay in America until May 21st. Please address letters to

L. Van Leeuwen,

726 Broadway, - NEW YORK, N. Y.

TO IMPORTERS!

HAERENS BROS.
From SOMERGEM near Ghent, Belgium

SPECIAL Growers and Exporters of Azaleas, Palms, Arancarias and other decorative plants, take pleasure to inform you that their Mr. Aug. HARRENS is now on his annual visit through the United States. The stock he offers is immense, of best quality and at most reasonable prices. Their New Azaleas will be the favorites of the luture. Write for price list and special offer.

AUGUST HAERENS CARE OF ... VANDERGRIFT CO.
66 Beaver St., New York City.

The American Florist Company's Directory

NEW EDITION. PRICE $2.00.

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY, 324 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

Duluth, Minn.

Ed. C. Lindsay, the Lakeside florist. reports an excellent spring trade, and at present is disposing of a surprisingly large number of pansies. Of three lots which he planted out he finds that the May 1. The first lot was planted the day after Easter, in a fine dry soil in a sheltered situation, but did not make as good roots as desired. The second planting a few days later were somewhat better. Mr. Lindsay believes that too much watering is frequently responsible for lack of success in pansy growing. He is regarded as authority on floriculture in Duluth and conducts a department in the Herald in which he gives expert cultural stuff, per 100, $5.00.....

Asparagus Sprengeri

From 2-inch pots, good stuff, per 100, $5.00 .....

Ficus Elastica, true, large leaf variety, 6-inch bots, 20 tuches high a 50c each.

Crimson Rambler Roses, extra fine, bushy plants, in 4-inch pots, will soon bloom, per dozen, $2.00; per 100, $15.00.

Cycas Revoluta, dormant stems, size from 3 to 10 lb. (a 15c per lb.

Clothide Soupert, the great pot rose, our stock is A No. 1, 2-in, as $3.00, 242-in, as $4.00; 3-in, as $6.00, 242-in, as $4.00; 3-in, as $6.00, per 100.

Oahlias, 242-in, pot plants, in named varieties, per 100, $5.00.

100, $5.00

Pelargoniums Mme. Thibaut, Mrs. Robt. Sandiford, Edward Perkins and Dorothy, strong 3-inch stock, per doz., $1.50, per 100, $12.00.

For Cannas, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, send us your list; we have all kinds.

H. P. Roses, dormant, 2-year extra fine stock @ $12.00 to the per 100.

$12.00 per 100.
Clematis, Ampelopsis Vertehi, Hollyhocks, Paconics Hydrangens P. G., etc., we have in large quantities; write us for prices.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

Creenhouses: CHICAGO: Western Springs, III. 84-86 Randolph St.

Good Stock! Low Prices!

CANNAS strong plants of Alphonse Bou-nale Pauf Marquant. Win. Elhott Bisson, See Stewart I lumboyant, $4.00 per 100; $5.00 per 1000.

COLEUS Crimson Verschaffeltti, Golden per 100, 218 (0) per 10(0).

Geraniums Bonths Gen. Grant and S. A. Nutt. 20 y-linch pots. §3.00 per 100.0 extra good. 1-linch pots. §7.00 per 100.0 gr. 100.0 per 100.0 Cobica Scandens, 1-linch pots. 96.00 per 100.

JOHN SCOTT,

KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Cattleya Trianæ and C. Labiata, also Odontoglossum Crispum and Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

LAGER & HURRELL, Summit, N. J.

2000 Smilax

First class 3-inch stock, $2.50 per 100: $20 per 1000.

THE E. HIPPARD CO.,

......YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

Latania Borbonica

4-Inch, very time, with 2 character leaves, $12.50 per 100; $120.00 per 1000.
3-Inch, very time, with 1 character leaf, $10.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Lemon Verbenas

Sinch, fine (old) plants......$5 00 per 100 4-inch, fine (old) plants...... 6.00 per 100

Rooted Cuttings

Lemon Verhena... $1 per 100; $8 per 1000 Salvin Splendens, dwarf, $1 per 100, $8 per 100, $0 per 100, $0 montlowers, la Jadoo extra, $1.50 per 100 Coleus Golden Bedder, Nel·le Grant, Autumn Glow, 75c per 100; $6.00 per 100, Alternantheras, yellow, from soil, 35c per 100; $3.00 per 100, $3.00 per 100.

Smilax Seedlings

Fine, from Jadoo, 35c per 100; $3 per 1000

MOONFLOWERS

212-inch pots, strong ......$4.00 per 100

Critchell's

Cash with order, please.

Cincinnati, O.

ARECA LUTESCENS

ARECA LUTESCENS

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS

NANUS

PHOENIX RUPICOL

REGLINATA 1.50 12.50 35.00

1.00 7.50 20.00 1.00 7.50 20.00 J. L. SCHILLER.

404 East 34th Street, NEW YORK CITY.

PORT CRAIG & SON

ROBT. CRAIG & SON Roses, Palms

and Novelties in Decorative Plants.

Market and 49th Street, PHILADELPHIA

Rose Hill Nurseries

L ARGEST Growers of Palms, Orchide, Stove and Greenhouse plants, Ferns, Visuearnes, Pandams

SIEBRECHT & SON, New Rochelle, N. Y. New York Office, 409 Fifth Ave.

Crotons...

Rothschild, Hawkeri, Interruptum, Evansin-num, Rubra Lineata, Andreanum, Aurea Mac-ulatum and others, suitable for bedding. Pine plants in 3-inch pots, $2.00 per doz. New and rare varieties, 50 cents and. Aurea Maculatum, extra fine plants in 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; $15 per 100; 3-inch pot plants, $2 per doz.; $12 per 100; thumb pots, $1 per doz.; $6 per 100.

Edwin Lonsdale.

Money Order Office, Station H, Phila.

Florist.

CHESTNUT HILL, PHILA., PA.

HERE WE ARE 4 Weeks FOR

FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED.

FUCHSIAS in assorted varieties, double, Single, 2-la.... HIBISCUS in assortment, single and double, Rhynchospermum Jasminoides, 2-la. SMILAX, good strong plants, 2-ln..... 2.00 2000 MOON VINES, strong plants, 2-in...

NANZ & NEUNER, LOUISVILLE, KY.

STRONG STOCK TO POT ON NOW.

GOOD HOPE, - WASHINGTON, D. C.

Offers clean well rooted plants as below:

Per 100,
Areca Lutescens, 2 ft. thick, 4-inch. $25,00
Orange Trees. 2 ft., full of green fruit, 5-in. pots. 25,00
Pheenix Reclinata, 4-inch pots. $5,00
Pheenix Reclinata, 2-inch pots. $5,00
Pheenix Reclinata, 2-inch pots. $5,00
Pheenix Reclinata, 2-inch pots. $5,00
Per 1000 by exoress.

Oreodoxa Regla. 5-inch, 3 in a pot. (Royal Palm)
3 to 4 feet high $8,00
Pheenicophorium Seciellarum, 4-inch, nice plants
of this rare palm. $8,00
Nephrolepis d, furcans, 5-inch, extra large. $6,00
Pandanus Utilis, 5-inch, extra large. $6,00
Well packed. Cash with order.

Asparagus Sprengeri

50,000 Plants in 2%-inch pots, $5,00 per 100, express; 24 for $1,50 by mail. Specimens for 8-inch pots, $6,00 to $12,00....

A. Blanc & Co.

gentralisation timin in in in in in in in internation to the internation timin in Asparagus_

Sprengerii $5 00 per 100 Seedlings

American Rose Co., Washington, D. C.

Everybody is more pleased if you say "saw your ad, in the American Florist" when writing.

KENNICOTT BROS.

Wholesale Cut Flowers

SPECIALTIES FOR DECORATION DAY:

Cape Jasmines Pæonies Poets'Narcissus Gladiolus

AND ALL SEASONABLE FLOWERS

LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE EXPRESS 466...

AND Florists' Supplies

88 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO.

ROOMS 22 AND 23.

ongiflorum (Specially grown for Decoration Day .....)

SEND ORDERS EARLY.

$1.00 per dozen; $7.00 per 100.

DON'T FORGET WE HANDLE ROSES & CARNATIONS IN QUALITY AND QUANTITY.

After May 27 we can supply extra large plants of Bougainvillea glabra (?) and glabra Sanderiana, these are in 8 to 12-inch pots and now in full flower, which will be cut this coming week. These plants can have all the soil shaken off and be shipped at proportionately low cost. Write for prices.....

THEO. F. BECKERT, GLENFIELD, PA.

We mail 7 plants of above for $1.00. Please credit Am. Florist if you order from this adv.

ARECA LUTESCENS

3 plants, 5-in. pot 18 to 20-in. high, per 100, $40,00 3 plants, 10-in. pot, 48 to 50-in. high, each. 4.00 3 plants, 8-in. pot, 40 to 48-in. high, each. 2.50

COCOS WEDDELIANA

KENTIA BELMOREANA

2½-in., 3 leaves, 10 to 12-in. high, per 100. $20.00 3 in., 4 or 5 leaves, 15 to 18-in. high, per 100. 25.00 5-in., 4 to 6 leaves, 20 to 24-in. high, each... 1.00 All measurements from top of pot.

JOSEPH HEACOCK, WYNCOTE, PAL Mention American Florist when writing.

CAN YOU USE ANY

THE F. R. WILLIAMS CO.
WHOLESALE FLORISTS
AND SHIPPERS OF CUT FLOWERS
60 Huron Street, - CLEVELAND. O.

FOR DEGORATION DAY

And School Closing

Flower Baskets, Wire Designs, Wheat, Doves, Immortelles, Tin Foil, Paper, Sphagnum, Green Moss, Stakes, and in short, "All Florists' Stock in Season."

At Bottom Trade Prices.

Cannas...

Started Plants in

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE,

84 AND 86 RANDOLPH ST.,

CHICAGO.

Fresh Seeds of Kentia Belmoreana and Forsteriana by the case of 5000 Seeds received direct from Australia. Price $17.50 net cash, F. O. B. New York. Prices for large quantities on application.....

Australian Palm Seed Co.

ROOM 52. 34 34 34

90 Nassau Street, NEW YORK.

American Beauty and other Rose Problems.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-I would like your advice on running a house of American Beauties a second year in shallow benches. How shall I treat them in houses 20x100. short span to the south, benches on each side of the aisle 312 feet wide with walks 2 feet wide next to the walls? What distance from the glass should the benches What distance from the bottom of the benches should the steam return pipes be. I have been troubled this season in houses built as I have stated, in each of which there is a 2-inch supply pipe over-head and five 1-inch returns under the extreme outside edge and 2 feet below each bench. The back two rows of plants have seemed to suffer from too much X. Y. Z. heat.

So far as my experience and observation goes I should say that the few attempts made at carrying over to the second year American Beauties on shallow benches has been anything but satisfactory, and for that reason I do not advise trying it on a very extended scale. The reason we have not been more successful may be attributed to our ignorance, perhaps, rather than to the variety Experimenting with carried-over itself. Beauties, I have allowed the plants a short season of rest, and then have lifted, pruned, and replanted in fresh soil, and usually all through the fall they would look fine, but they did not hold out through the winter, the tendency being to produce nothing but quantities of short stemmed blooms. It may be that they would do better if simply ripened off, as recommended for other roses, for a month or six weeks during the latter part of June and July, pruned, and instead of lifting, given a liberal top-dressing of fresh soil and started up slowly the same as with a house of hybrid roses. The description given of the arrangement of the benches and piping does not leave the matter very clear. If the benches are only 312 feet wide there must be at least three of them in a 20-foot house, otherwise too much space is given up to walks. A house of this size should allow three benches each I feet wide, two paths on the sides 2 feet wide, and two center paths 18 inches wide. The south bench paths 15 inches wide. should be not more than 2 feet from the ground, the center one 21g feet, and the north bench 3 feet. For American Beanties the glass should be not less than 51g feet from top of bench. The arrangement of the steam pipes could easily be im-proved upon. In the first place, it is a mustake to run a steam main overhead in any rose house, unless it is carried away up near to the ridge, and in that case the heat which it gives off will be lost head steam pipes are unsightly, they ob struct the light, and are a nuisance gener alls like a magnet they attract the opening bads only to destroy them, and worse than all they create an atmosphere. close to the foliage in which red spider revels. I would advise putting the main as well as the returns under the benches. Do not have them in bunches of five they should be spread out evenly all terough the notes some under each beach and about so inches from the gr and. It is a mi-take to have all the p ping on the sides of the house as it sometrales recommanded, unless the house is very narrow indeed, any novice can see that outh such an arrangement it will be in possible to have the same tem perature an through the house on a ver-cald raght the points near the pipes will be allow transfed before the hot air can be driven into the center. I believe that eight pipes properly arranged will do better work than will ten of the same size when hung on the sides of the house. ROBT. SIMPSON.

Madison, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its usual monthly meeting in Masonic Hall on May 11, with President Duckham in the chair. Three of Mr. Tilden's rose men, W. Conley, J. Dervin and P. Redding, were proposed for membership. This will bring our family number to sixty.

The florist side of our house is keen on the value of co-operative purchasing of supplies. Some time ago a committee was appointed to look into the scheme, and interview all members desirons of participating. P. Conley, as chairman of that committee, reported that they had met with every encouragement, and hoped to have the matter on a substantial working basis by next meeting.

The monthly exhibition committee reported the completion of the schedule, which was read, discussed and adopted. It was decided to award to each successful competitor at the end of the year a silver medal bearing the society's coat of arms. A. Herrington moved that the exhibits at each meeting be divided between All Souls and Memorial hospitals, Morristown. The motion was carried unani-mously. John Davis delivered a most interesting and practical paper upon the "Cultivation of the Gloxinia," having fine specimens on hand to exemplify the process advocated. The subject was well received and much discussion followed, a sincere vote of thanks being tendered Mr. Davis for his carefully prepared essay. Mr. Duckham exhibited a beautiful collection of flowering shrubs; A. Herrington, wild flowers; J. Robertson, glox-inias; C. II. Atkins, megaseas and tulips.

A few varieties left; the 212-meh forcing stock.

BRIDE * * * ) $2.50 per 1000 BRIDESMAID | $20 per 1000

AM. BEAUTH S, $5,00 per 100; $45 00 per 1000 Cash must accompany all orders.

The Exotic Nurseries

J. B. HEISS, & DAYTON, OHIO.

ROSES

OWN ROOTS.* DORMANT .*.* FIELD GROWN

IN COLD STORAGE IN CHICAGO.

No. 1, 2 to 4 feet, cut back to 2 feet Yellow Rambler (Aglaia) Hybrid Perpetuals,

Mosses, Hardy Climbers and Madam Plantier

Occupants or ser, strong and well shaped on apple atom. Address

W. L. HEIKES, Manager,

CHICAGO, ILLS. 130B-1310 Unity Bldg., -

ROSES HRIDES AND BRIDESMAIDS.

R. ROY DAVIS, MORRISON, ILL.

ૣૢਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ਫ਼ Mrs. Robt. Garrett

NEW PINK FORCING ROSE

Winner of 6 certificates, medal and silver cup. §3.50 per doz., §25.00 per 100. A fine stock of young chrysanthemums and car-nations. Send for trade list describing nations. Send above in detail.

H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.

FROM 2 1-2 INCH POTS.

Strong, thrifty, well established plants. General price $4.00 per 100. Extra fine lot of Crimson Ramblers.

Jackson & Perkins Co. NEWARK, NEW YORK.

ROSES..

2-in. per 100 3-in. per 100 $5.00 Am. Beauties ... Perle . . . . . . $2.75 Bridesmaid . . . 2.75 4.50 4.50

MAPLEWOOD CUT FLOWER and PLANT CO. PLEASANT HILL, MO.

Memorial Rose

(Rosa Wichuriana)

Strong field-grown plants, $50, $75 and $100 per 1000

SAM'L C. MOON.

MORRISVILLE, Bucks Co., PA.

2-YEAR-OLD ROSES

from 4 in, pots in variety, $6.00 per 100. CARNATIONS, $2.50 per 100 from 2\(^1_6\) meh parts, Scott, Portia, McGowani also all young roses and general stock

THE NATIONAL PLANT CO. DAYTON, OHIO.

Do You Need Young Rose Stock

for planting, out of 3-in, pots? A dollar more on the hundred is nothing if you get better stock. Send bitc or $1.00 in stamps for samples of what you want to Mention this paper.

GEO. A. KUHL,

Do You Plant Beauties?

Am. Beauties, 3 inch at $5.00 per 100 Not cullings, but clean, strong, well grown stock and guaranteed free from all disease.....

A. DONAGHUE,

10B S. 16th Street. OMAHA, NEB.

ROSES Strong healthy plants from 2, 2% and 3-meh pots at $3, $4 and $6 per 100. Perle. Sunset, Brides and Mids, Gontier, Pink and White La France, Siebrecht 100. Cofens and Verbenas, $2.50 per 100; $20 per 1000 IRISH JUNIPERS for transplanting, well rooted a to tanches. Sample and prices on application

JOSEPH BEINL, Jacksonville, III.

AMERICAN BEAUTY

Fine young plants, healthy and trace, 22 y-inch puts, $8,00 per 1000 +70,00 per 1000.

ICD WIN LONSDALIC,

Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, with order PHILADELPHIA, PA. Money Order Office, Station II, Phila

Cleveland, O.

There is some business doing but there are always plenty of flowers to do it with, and some to spare, except in the case of carnations, which often run short, especially when dependence is placed upon local production to supply the demand. A good many growers have either thrown out their stock or, if not that, their crop is not yet fully in. Roses are plentiful, although the sun is beginning to affect their size. Sweet peas are in abundance and sell very well.

Acting upon the petition of Thomas Callahan, Judge Dissette has named Thomas Kelly as receiver for Erhardt & Co., florists, at 341 Prospect street. Callahan alleges that he went into partnership with Laura E. Erhardt on condition that each should put in $500. He declares that he put in his money but that she did not; that she took charge of the business and from it has made a good living for herself and family, while he has received nothing on his investment. He asks the court to settle up the business and return him his $500.

We were honored lately by a flying visit of President W. F. Gude and Secretary W. J. Stewart, of the S. A. F., who were returning from Omaha, where they had been to look the ground over in preparation for the annual convention in August.

Plant Labels.

Every gardener has been annoyed times without number at the loss of the labels of valuable plants by reason of the rotting away of the thin wooden labels ordinarily used, or of their becoming illegible. Nearly all of the indestructible labels in use are either expensive or require too much time in preparation.

For cheapness and convenience combined we have found nothing so good as sheet zinc cut to the proper form, using a chemical ink for the writing. The ink is made by dissolving a few crystals of chloride of cobalt in water, and can be used with a clean steel pen. The writing is allowed to dry without blotting and makes an indelible black stain. Labels of this kind have been buried in the ground for over four years and remained perfectly legible. These labels can be attached by tacks or copper wire to orchid cribs. They can be bent into hoop form and forced down to "straddle" the edge of a pot, or can be used with the seed, inserted in the soil as an ordinary label. For out-door use they can be attached to a piece of heavy wire; telegraph wire answers nicely. The wire is forced into the ground leaving the label suspended or lying on the ground or buried in the ground, as desired.

A very convenient form for tree labels is made from a strip of zinc twelve inches long and one inch wide. This is cut diagonally from a point one inch from one end to a point on the opposite side one inch from the other end, this making two labels with one end square for the inscription and the other tapering to a point. The tapered portion can be twisted around a branch of the tree and will not strangle it or cut the bark, as it expands with the growth of the tree.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The California Floral Society gave its annual flower show May 12 to 14. There were forty exhibits and $400 was given in premiums. The exhibition was largely attended, universally admired and the most successful in the history of the organization.

ORDER AT ONCE AND SECURE STOCK

CHRYSANTHEMUMS Rose Owen, J. H. Woodford, Dorothy Devens, G. F. Atkinson, Golden Trophy, T. B. Morse, Pres. McKinley, Western King, The Herriott, Surprise, Marcia Jones, Ellvena, Miss Heleu Wright, Belle of Castlewood, Chito, C. W. Ward, Mrs. S. T. Murdock, 75 cls, per dozen; $5.00 per 100. Glory of Pacific, Maud Dean, Mrs. R. Crawford, W. P. kayuor, Modesto, Lenawee, Pride of Castlewood, Bonnaffon, Ivory, Ruth Ellis, 56 cls. per dozen; $3.00 per 100. Frank Hardy, T. H. Spaulding, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, The Vellow Fellow, Madeline Pratt, Mrs. C. H. Peirce, Merry Christmas, 35 cls. each; $3.00 per dozen. Suow Queen, Penusylvania, 50 cls. each; $5.00 per dozen. W. H. Chadwick, $1.00 each; $6.00 per dozen. Wenyork, Empress and Evelina, $2.00 per dozen, Mayor Pingree, $5.00 per 100. Stom King, fine from soil, $2.00 per 100. C. A. Dana, Mayor Pingree, $5.00 per dozen Ami Pichon, Paul Marquaut, J. D. Cabos, L. Balley, Floreuce Vaughan, $2.50 per 100. Eldorado, A. Billard, Count de Bouchard, $4.00 per 100.

For full description send for our 1898 wholesale list.

THE COTTAGE GARDENS, Queens, N. Y.

CANNAS

plants from 4 inch pots

CANNAS

Duke of Marlboro, Defender, Pres. McKinley, 50 cents each; $4.50 per doz, Gloriosa, Philadelphia, Alemannia, America, $2.00 per doz.; $12.00 per 100. Flamingo, Pillar of Fire, Robert Christie......$1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100. Columbia, Mrs. Fairman Rogers, Golden Queen, $1.25 per doz.; $7.00 per 100. Alphonse Bouvier, Austria, Chicago, Egandale, Florence Vaughan, Italia, J. D. Cabos, Mme, Crozy, Paul Marquant, Queen Charlotte, Rosalind at $6.00 per 100.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS
All the new and standard varieties in A-1 stock ready for planting, including Alice F. Carey (pink), Dolores (yellow), Miss G. Vanderbilt (white), Robt. G. Carey (white), Spotswood (yellow), Frank Hardy and Mrs. II. Weeks, all at $20,00 per 100, net. for cash.

JOHN N. MAY.

SUMMIT, NEW JERSEY.

Chrysanthemums

Robinson, Philadelphia, Dailledouze, Ivory, Vellow Queen and others, 212

Mrs. S. T. Murdock, Mme. F. Chrysanthemums Whilldin, H. L. Sunderbruch, Eda Prass, Inter Ocean, V. Morel, Childs, John Shrimpton, Niveus, Golden Wedding, Mutual Friend, C. B. Whitnall, Bonnaffon, and 3-inch pots, $2.50 per 100. . . .

Mrs. A. F. Wienold

McDONALD & STEELE, Crawfordsville, Ind.

Chrysanthemum

Yellow Sport of JEROME JONES.

It received the highest points and a Certificate of Merit at the Cleveland Chrysanthemum Show. It is in Yellow what Jerome Jones is amougst the White. The very best for late blooming.  $2\frac{1}{2}$ -in, pot plants, strong, \$2.50 per doz.; \$20.00 per 100. Stock ready April 15th.

E. J. PADDOCK, 295 Erie St., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

NATHAN SMITH & SON

Wholesale Florists

Specialties & & &

ADRIAN, MICH.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS CARNATIONS & & & AND VIOLETS

· · · CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED · ·

2000 SMILAX

from thats, by mall 50c per 100; \$1.00 per 1000. 100 fine Perle Rose plants,  $3s_{\rm e}$  inch pots, for \$4.50. Tomato, carbiage and sweet points plants, 15c per 100; \$1.00 per 1000. ALONZO ULSH,  $\rm Box$  420, Wabash, Inc.

West Islip Greenhouses MARIE LOUISE VIOLETS

Rooted Runners, #4 per 1000. Cash with order.

E. B. SUTTON, Jr. P. O. Address... BABYLON, N. Y.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST'S COLOR CHART

is now accepted as the standard in preparing color descriptions, by many foreign houses as well as in America,

PRICE IS CENTS POSTPAID. AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 322 Dearborn St. Chica o

Piping.

En. Am. FLORIST:-How much 2-inch pipe will it take to heat a short-span-to-the-south house 29x100 to 50° in zero weather; plan enclosed. A. B. S. Co.

A well built house 29x100 feet can be heated to 50 in zero weather by twelve lines of 2-inch pipe, using hot water; but if the temperature goes much below zero it will be more economical of fuel to have one or two more pipes, unless the house is to be used for crops that will not be injured by an occasional slight drop in temperature. I cannot judge from the plan whether the beds are solid or raised. It would be advisable if the benches are raised to have three or four pipes on each raiseu to have three or four pipes of each side wall and the others distributed under the benches to provide bottom heat. In the case of solid beds it would be well to run two lines of pipe about three fect apart and eight inches below the surface of the soil in the beds. When used with solid heals at heat ten lines of pipe about solid beds at least ten lines of pipe will be required in addition to those used for L. R. TAFT. hottom heat.

FINE PLANTS

/ERBENA

IN BUD AND BLOOM.

Many Fine Varieties added to Our Collection.

Best Mammoth .....per 100, $3.00; per 1000, $25,00 Ceneral Collection 2.00; 20.00

ROSES.

| American BeautBridesmaid,Meteor. | ry, 3-Inch potaBride,Bon Silene, | . per 100, $10.00Perle,Watteville, |  |  |
|------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------|--|--|
| La France.                               | Sunset.                                  | Mermet.                                     |  |  |
| Deloo from Plainch                       | note: $5.00 per 1001;                   | $40.00 per 1000.                           |  |  |

Ever-blooming and Polyantha, in bud and bloom, from 36, 4 and 5-lacen puts, $10 (0, $15.00) and

Hybrid Perpetual, In bud, from a lneh pots, strong,

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Witne varieties from 2%-inch pots, $5,00 and $4.00 per 1.0 send for list of varieties.

MISCELLANEOUS PLANTS.

| Ready for immediate sales. 16                                                             |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Anthemia Coronaria, from 2 te fineh pot                                                   |
| Alternanthern all leading varieties                                                       |
| A continue of the abil while                                                              |
| Carnations, from 4 inch pots, thie stock 12 / Coleus, leading sorts 21 inch pots          |
|                                                                                           |
| Ceraniuma, double and single, I-inch pote 51                                              |
| 214                                                                                       |
| lvy fine variety, i "                                                                     |
| Ivy fine variety, t                                                                       |
| Hydranges Otakes, 5in bushy                                                               |
| Moonflower, 2glands pata 4 1 1 10                                                         |
| Palargoniums, /schich tiobs                                                               |
| Calvia Spiendena and Redman, 24-10, 1988                                                  |
| Vince Variesata and Elegana I Inch pota 10.0Violeta, Morie Louise, 24 Inch pota Edita |
| [100 F   1 E E   F.   1 E   E   E   E   E   E   E   E   E                                 |
| Panetee in bad and bloom #200 per 100; H5 (0                                              |
| All the above befrom stock in condition for imme                                          |
| Clinter anders                                                                            |

| Clate sairs                       |   |         |         |
|-----------------------------------|---|---------|---------|
| WELL CADMATIONS                   | • | FRO     | M       |
| ESTABLISHED CARNATIONS            | ) |         | SOIL.   |
|                                   |   | 100     | 114 (1) |
| C. A. Dana                        |   | (G (R)  |         |
| Mrs. McBurneyHarrison's White |   | . 5 (8) | 4       |
| Harrison's White                  |   |         | (E) (F) |
| ₩m bcott                          |   |         | 1. 40   |
| Lizzie Mr Cowan                   |   |         | 15.10   |
|                                   |   | 2 100   |         |

New Trade Lation application. WOOD BROS., Fishkill, N. Y.

4000 Marie Louise Violet Plants.

This rear a clean teat quality largest linwers [640] of less price in you take the whole let CEO, C. STEDMAN, Middletown, Cons.

ALWAYS mention the AMERICAN 110 RIST when writing to advertisers.

PELARGONIUMS

pots in bud and bloom; just the thing for Decoration Day trade. * * * * * * * *

|                                    | Per dox. |         |
|------------------------------------|----------|---------|
| MME, VIBERT                        |          | $12.00 |
| VICTOR                             |          | 12.60   |
| MRS. R. SANDIFORD                  |          | 20.00   |
| MRS. P. CARPENTER—fine double whit | e 2.50   | 20.00   |

Also a fine assortment of 4-NCH GERANIUMS in bud and bloom at $1.00 per dozen; $8.00 per 1000. Cash with order. Address

H. W. BUCKBEE,

FOREST CITY GREENHOUSES, ROCKFORD, ILL.

Princess of Wales Violet...

The Best Money-Maker Among Violets. Strong 212-inch pot-grown plants ......$5.00 per 100.

J. A. PETERSON, = 105 E. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

www.HERR'S

...SEED...

...SMILAX...

...PLANTS... Ready now at $1.50 per 14 oz. oz. ....PLAN I 5... Ready now, 75c per 100; $5 per 1000. September to January: 75c per 100; $4 per 1000.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

STRONG, HEALTHY ROOTED CUTTINGS Ready Feb. 1st and Later

Including Morello, Plora Hill, Daybreak, Wm. Scott. Lizzie McGowan, Ivory, Silver Spray, Emily Pierson, Goldfinch, Eldorado, and others. Send me a list of what you want and get prices before you buy. We also have a flue lot of Carnation and Violet blooms for sale. Write for prices. Address.

CHAS. CHADWICK.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. Lock Box II.

The best of all whites. Reduced price.

H. F. LITTLEFIELD, Worcester, Mass.

FLORA HILL CARNATION. It sells became there is nothing in sight to at all equal it. It speaks for largest bloom. It is fragrant. It is the largest bloom. It pits all others in the sinder hothing past or present to equal it. We have four thousand plants exclusively for propagating from the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and the latter of the last stock ever offered and th E. G. HILL & CD., Richmond, Ind.

F. DORNER & SONS CO.,

will exchange for Lincoln, Mrs. E. G. Hill and Golden Wellding 'Mums.

TEXAS SEED & FLORAL CO., Dallas, Texas.

NEW WHITE PERPETUAL

BLOOMING CARNATION

Anna H. Shaw

The Best "All Round" White Carnation for Cut Flowers. Recommendations: Wonderful bloomer, Unusual Vigor, Rapid Grower, Forms Strong Blooming Plants in a Very Shart Time. Perfectly Healthy, Handsome Folisge. Large Beautifully Formed Flowers on Long Stems, Exquisitely Fragrant, Never Bursts, Blooms Longer and Gives More Flewers than Any Other Variety Ever Offered. If you want a RELIABLE Carnation that can always be depended upon, give Anna H. Shaw a trial. Routed Cuttings, $1 per doz.; $6 per 100. Strong Plants, 175 per dox; $10 per 100. Send for Trade List and Catalogue of Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, Caett, Etc.

Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd,

Ventura (by-the-Sea), Cal.

VERY FINE

From soll, $1 M per 100. Well rooted cuttings, $2.00 per 100. Good stock ready now, each with order. Also 43 other leading varieties

GEO. HANCOCK & SON, CRAND HAVEN, MICH.

Bread and Butter

Carnations
Scott and Rose Queen for Pink;
Emily Pierson for Red; Meleor, Crimson; McGowan and Kohlnoor for White. No experiment and disappointment growing these carnations. Strong rooted cuttings $1.00 per 100, $8.00 per thousand. Cash with order, SOUTH SIDE FLORAL CO., Springfield, III.

Violet Plants

Marie Louise Strong, healthy rooted runners, 50c per 100; (100 per 1000, Will exchange some for Colous, Pansies or Cyclamen.

CHAS. LAYER, - GILMAN, ILL.

Cape Jessamine Buds WITH LONG STEAMS $1.00 per 100

by most 1, v press $5.00 per 1000. Also small plants act JOAN MONKHOUSE. Coddo Nursery, Jewella, La.

geoccoccoccoccoccoccocco

MAJOR VAR.

From 2½-inch pots......$2.50 per 100.

Two thoroughbred male ANGORA KITIENS, 8 weeks old, maltese and gray and maltese and white, $7.50 each. A good adv. for well-kept greenhouse.

Williams & Crittenden.

Waterloo, lowa. 8000000000000000000000000

KLONDIKE

Cold Fields at Your Door.

Cold Fields at Your Door.

COLEUS—All kinds, all grades and all prices. Verschaffeitt and Queeo, 75c per 100; $6.00 per 1000; 2½-inch pots. $15 00 per 1000; 175 per 100. Coleus in variety, 55c per 100; $15 00 per 1000; 23c-inch pots. $15 00 per 1000; 23c-inch pots. $12 00 per 1000; $5.00 per 100. Ageratum dwarf blue, 63c per 100; $5.00 per 100. Ageratum dwarf blue, 63c per 100; $5.00 per 100. Anthenits Coronaria. Golden Marquertte. $1.50 per 100. Anthenits Coronaria. Golden Marquertte. $1.50 per 100. $12.00 per 1000 per 100; $12.00 per 1000; $100 per 100. Alternanthera Paronychioldes, Major and Aurea Naoa, 35c per 100. Hellanthus Muttifiorus, Double Golden. $25 inch pots. $300 per 100; Gerandums, standard sorts, our selection. $1.50 per 100; $12.00 per 1000; $25 inch pots. $200 per 100; $100 per 1000; Muntialn of Snow, 2½-inch pots. $2.50 per 100; $25 per 100;

J. E. FELTHOUSEN, Schenectady, N. Y.

lo Ulean Vut.

| 2,000 Hellen Keller                   | $1.00 per 100 |
|---------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| 3,000 Aurea Nana                      | 1.00                  |
| 1,000 Lycopodium Dent                 | 1.00                  |
| 1,000 Geraniums, named, 2¼ in         | 2.00                  |
| 2,000 " 3 in., mixed                  |                       |
| 3,000 " pamed, 4 in                   | 5.00                  |
| 1,000 Salvia Clara Bedman, 4 in       | 3.00                  |
| 10,000 Asters, Perfection, white, pir | ik, blue and          |
| scarlet, 60c. per 100, $4 00 per     | 1000. Extra           |
| strong plants.                        |                       |
|                                       |                       |

Also 2,000 Asters, Snowball. 1,000 Fuchsias, 3 in., mixed, @ $2.50 per 100.

The Morris Floral Co.,

MORRIS, ILL.
Please mention American Florist

MAY OFFER.

| Alternanthera, 2-in. pots, A. Nana, $1.75, | Per 100       |
|---------------------------------------------|---------------|
| P. Major                                    | $2 00 |
| Begonia, 2½-in. pot, and Vernon             | 2.00          |
| Coleus, 21/2 in. pot, and Ceutaurea Gym.    | 2.00          |
| Geraniums. 20 var., 2½-in. pots, $2.00;    |               |
| 3-iu. pot                                   | 3.25          |
| Geraniums, 4-in. pots and Double Pe-        |               |
| tugias                                      | 4 00          |
| Smilax, 2-in. pots, 1000 $9,00             | 1.00          |
| Primroses, ready in June, single            | 2 50          |
| CACH DI BACK                                |               |

JOS. H. CUNNINGHAM, - Delaware, Ohio.

RARGAING IN DIANTS FOR

| DARLUMING IN             | LPWILLS            | CASH          |
|--------------------------|--------------------|---------------|
| French Cennes, Cro       | zy, Queen Charlott | e, per 100    |
| Florence Vangban, et     |                    |               |
| - Gereniums, Double G    |                    |               |
| Salvies, Clara Bedman    | , 21/6-inch pots   | 2.00          |
| Coleus, 5 varieties, fin | e. 2¼ loch pota,   | 2.00          |
| Regonie Vernon, fin      |                    |               |
| Mountain of Snow         | Ceranium, 2½ la    | o. pots. 3.00 |
| Order at once a          | and get good atock |               |

NICHOLAS AMOS, Crestline, Ohio.

HARDY PINKS

2½-in. pots: Souv. de Sale, $3.50 per 100; Her Majesty, Glen Valley, Laura Wilmer, Ger-trude, $3.00 per 100.

VIOLETS...

2½-in. pots; Admiral Avellon, Princess of Wales, $3.50 per 100; Luxonne, California, Campbell, Swanley White, $3.00 per 100.

THE CONARD & JONES CO .. . West Greve, Pa-

100,000 VERBENAS. THE CHOICEST VARIETIES IN CULTIVATION

Fine pot plants, $2.50 per 100; $20 per 1000. Rooted Cuttings, 75c per 100; $6.00 per 1000; $50 per 10000 NO RUST OR MILDEW.

PACKED LIGHT, AND SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. SEND FOR CIRCULAR. We are the Largest Growers of Verbenas in the country. Our plants cannot be surpassed.

J. L. DILLON, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Notice! WE have named our New Cannas.....

No. 47, THE MAINE; No. 48, ADMIRAL Dewey; No. 49, Manila; No. 50, Admiral Sampson; No. 51, Hayana.

A. BLANC & CO., - Philadelphia.

1500 Cannas

5-in. pots, including Burbank, Italia, Austria and all other good variet es

Chas. Frueh.

III6 Hoyt St., SAGINAW, L. S., MICH.

GERANIUMS

Fine 4-in, stock in 10 Standard and new varieties at $5, $6 and $7 per 100, 2.inch, $15.00 per 1000; $2.00 per 100, $1600 per 100, $2.00 per 100, $1600 per 100, $2.00 per 100, $1600 per 100, $1.50 per 100, $1600 per 1000; $1.50 per 100, $1.50 per er 1000; $1.50 per 100.

CARL HAGENBURGER.

West Mentor, Ohio.

Geraniums

Best mixed varieties for bedding, all in buds, strong, healthy plants; 3½ inch pots, $3.00 per 100: 2½-inch pots, $2.00 per 100.

Cannas 4-inch pots, fine plants; Madam Crozv. Charles Henderson and B. Bruwo, $5 00 per 100. Cash with orders.

CARL E. TAUBE, Proprietor, Paxton Creenhouses, - Harrisburg, Pa.

DOUBLE HOLLYHOCKS

Fine plants, Oce-year-old, from best seed.

PANSY PLANTS Large flowering kinds. Write for prices.

S. W. PIKE, St. Charles, III.

BENJ. CONNELL, Florist, WEST GROVE, PA.

10,000 Ampelopals Veitchii, fine dormaot pot plants, 1 and 2-year old; price 3 and 66 law pot plants, 2000 Violets; 2000 Carnations; Spirea Anthony Waterer and Blue Spirea; Strawberry-Raspberry and other new small fruits. All must be sold. Aak for prices. Address

BENJ. CONNELL. West Crove, Pa.

Good assortment from 212-in.

Thos. A. McBeth. SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

XX STOCK ...

A Rare Bargain In Bedding Plants.

Abutilous, 3 vars.; Artillery Plants; Fuchsias, Storm Kloz. etc.; Heliotropes, 3 vars; Lantanas, 3 vars. All are extra strong, in bud, sure to please. Casb. or one-half cash and balaoce C.O.D.

JOHN F. RUPP, SHIREMANSTOWN, PA.

Do not forget to say "saw your ad, in the American Florist" when corre-sponding with advertisers.

s, 75c per 100; $6. MILDEW. RANTED. SEND FO. /erbenas in the country. e surpassed. Bloomsburg. Pa. ROEMER'S Th Prize Pansies 'u of Pansies All the Highest Award Inter. Exhibition at Hamburg, 1897—Catalogue free on application.

Fred. Roemer,

Seed Grower, - QUEDLINBURG, GERMANY. n. Nececeseseseseseseseseseses

FAXON'S "WHITE PANSIES.

The best mixture in cultivation, flowers verge, thick and velvety; of superb colors and arkings. The perfection of form and texture.

In Trade Packets at $1.00 each. M. B. FAXON,

Lock Box 1528,

1528. BOSTON, MASS. Correspondence solicited.

PANSIES
THE JENNINGS STRAIN.
THEY ARE GRAND.
Fine stocky plants in bud and bloom, $10 and $15 per 100 by express; small plants.
The pansy seed, $1.00 per pkt. Aster seed, Semple's pink, $1.00 per oz. Cash with order.

E. B. JENNINGS,

Lock Box 254. SOUTHPORT, CONN. Crower of the Finest Pansies.

PANSY PLANTS

In bloom; choice strain; $1.75 per 100: $15.00 per 1000. * *

S. MUIR, 3530 Michigan Avenue, CHICACO

PANSIES IN BUD AND BLOOM

Extra fine plants, $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000, Cash with the order.

Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill. PAL Money Order P. O., Station II, Phila.

COLEUS. Rooted Cuttings Well Rooted.... Rooted Cuttings

Searlet Verschaffeltii, Golden Verschaffeltii, Fire King, Fire Brand, Tam O'Shanter, S. P. Gem, Alhambra, Golden Crown, Midnight, Salvator John Goode, Nigger, 15c, per doz.: 75c, per 100; $5 per 1000, express pard.

S. T. DANLEY, Macomb, III.

VEGETABLE PLANTS

Iomato, Cabbage, Lettuce, Celery and Sweet Potato.
15 cts. per 100; $1.00 per 1000.
Pepper and Egg Plants, 25c per 100; $2.00 per 1000.
Cauliflower Snowball, 35c per 100; $2.50 per 1000.
All plants by mail, 10c per 100 extra. Price list for large quantities. Cash with order.

R. VINCENT, Jr. & SON, White Marsh, Md.

5,000 SMILAX...

From flats, by mail 50c per 100 84 00 per 1000 From 2-inch pots, $2.25 per 100, $13 00 per 1000 Geranhums from 2-inch pots, $2.25 per 100; $20.00 per 1000. Cash with the order. Send for samples. Fred Boerner, CAFE MAY CITY, N. J

EXTENSION THE MODEL CARNATION SUPPORT

QUEENS, N. Y., Feb. 16, 'Y.
MR. THERON PARKER.
Brooklyn, N. Y., Dear Sir.—
I have tested your latest model Carnation Support and am free to say that I consider it the best wire carnation
support that I have ever seen.
It is quickly and easily appited, and i think will prove very durable, and you certainly deserve great credit
for the invention.
Very truly yours.
C. W. WARD.

FLATBUSH, BROOKLYN.
N. V., Feb. 18, 97
MR THERON PARKER.
Dear Sir. - Your wire stake
is certainly a gem. Without hesitating we indorse it as an up-to-date carnation support. Voors truly,
DAILLEDOUZE BROS

W. HOBUREN, N. J.,
Feb. 18, 97,
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. V., Dear Sir.—
It gives me much pleasure to congratulate you inpon your success in ketting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them They certainly fill my lidli tor an ideal carnation support, a thing I have been looking for for a long time.
Wishing you every success
in the sale of them, I am
Yours truly, E. ASMI'S.
Write for price list and discount on early orders.

22 Morion St.

THERON PARKER, 22 Morlon St. BROOKLYN, N. Y.

LOUISIANA Gypress Green House Material.

RED CEDAR

Write for Estimates.

FIRST-CLASS GOODS and CORRECT PRICES

have forced us to the front and today we are the largest manufacturers of.....

IRON RESERVOIR VASES

and Lawn Settees in America . . A 40-page catalogue for the asking

McDonald Bros.

108-114 Liberty St., COLUMBUS, 0

Mention American Florist

Scollay

Sprinkler....

INDUSTRIBLE I. A Scotlay, Maker, G Myrtle Ave

Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE HARRISII DISEASE

····

can be prevented by immersing the bulbs for ten hours in a half solution of 99%

T KRAFT'S PLANT TONIC

This has been conclusively proven by experiments at Lincoln Park, Chicago. The Tonic also kills Hard Shelled Scale, Mealy Bug, and other insect pests without injury to the plant. A trial of a 25-cent bottle will convince you that a really remarkable inserticide has been discovered.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

KRAFT PLANT TONIC CO.,

ROCKFORD, ILL.

TESE CROSS BRAND THE VERY BEST OF

if your dealer does not have it send direct to the manufacturers 35 Warren Street. The Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. 96 Lake Street.

DON'T SYRINGE WITH COLD WATER.

It lowers the vitality of your stock, but write for particulars of my tempering Apparatus.

134 LIBERTY STREET, NEW YORK. HENRY W. GIBBONS,

Jute Fibre Flower

B. WOODIN 0W0SSO, MICH.

The Finest Thing on Earth for Shipping Plants. & &

Pots...

Very Strong, Light, Neat and Attractive

Send 5 ets. stamps for samples and low prices.

J. B. WOODIN. – Owosso, Mich.

Stems...

Strong and Clean Bale (400 lbs.) $2.00 9.00

...Dust BEST QUALITY

T. W. Wood & Sons,

Seeds, Bulbs and Supplies for Florists and Clardeners,

... RICHMOND, VA.

Florists! Seedsmen! Nurserymen!

Wood on necrose your production and add to reland, account. Then hay HARDAG'S "UP-1D-DAD" GENERAL HARDAGIS "UP-1D-DAD" GENERAL HARDAGIS GOOD ACCOUNT AND A STATE OF THE POINTS OF THE PO of the GEO. L. HARDING,

BINCHAMTON, N. Y. MASTR D

STEMS DUST

BOTTOM PRICES.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE.

Chicagn. New York.

THE-GORTON SIDE FEED Boiler

is the only hoiler that will keep a steady heat in a greenhouse all night without attention. No sitting up all night to keep a good fire-

Further ioformation on application.

36

GORTON & LIDGERWOOD CO. 96 Liberty Street, NEW YORK.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO. nouse * Boller. 29 to 59 Erie St., CHICAGO.

Bollers made of the best of material, shell, firebox sheets and heads of steel, water space all around (front, sides and back). Write for information. Always mention American Florist.

ARGE STOCK PROMPT SHIPMENT. ANUFACTURERS

GREENHOUSE MATERIAI

Cal. Red Cedar and Louisiana Cypress. BEST GRADES. PERFECT WORKMANSHIP.

A. DIETSCH & CO. SHEFFIELD AVE. CHICAGO, ILL

Standard Flower

We ship all goods from Cincinnati, guaranteeing lowest treight rates and prompt delivery. Write us before placing your orders elsewhere.

CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO., Covington, Ky.

BRANCH WAREHOUSES: Kearney and Westside Aves., Jersey City, N. J. Jackson Av. & Pearson St , Long Island City, N. Y.

💌 GEO. KELLER & SON.

Flower Pots.

Before buying write for prices. 361-363 Herndon Street, near Wrightwood Ave., CHICACO, ILL.

FLOWER POTS

SPECIALTY

List and SAMPLES FREE.

J. G. SWAHN'S SONS, P. O. Box 78, MINN.

FULL SIZE AND WIDE BOTTOMS BULB PANS AND AZALEA POTS

DETROIT FLOWER POT M'F'Y, HARRY BALSLEY, DETROIT, MICH., 490 HOWARD ST.

Standard 🥦 🎉 FLOWER

If your greenhouses are within 500 miles of the Capitol, write us; we can save you money.

W. H. ERNEST, WASHINGTON, D. C. Station M. N. E.

Made by Good Railroad Facilities

For shipping.
Special Attention Given to Mail Orders, and Special
Sizes Made to Order.

NORRISTOWN, PA.

Price Lists Furnished on Application.

Lawn Vases, 17x17-ln., $1 00; 19x20-ln., $1 50; Bases 12-ln. high 50c. Address

HILFINGER BROS. POTTERY,
FORT EDWARD, N. Y.

AUGUST ROLKER & SONS, AGTS., 52 DEY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

NEW & SECOND-HAND MATERIAL.

purchased from Sheriit, Receiver, and Assiknee, sales at less than one-balf prices. Pipe and Fittings Hose, Floriats Wire, Hot Water Heaters, Greenhouse Bollers and Engines, Rope, Light Wrought Iroa Pipe, Glass Sash, and thousands of other articles, for sale by

CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO. Largest Mail Order Depot for New and Second-Hand Material in the World.

W. 35TH & IRON STS., CHICACO. Write for our free illustrated catalogues

Successful Growers are Wanted

To know that they can dispose of all their surplus stock by advertising in the American Florist. TRY IT NOW! .....tising in the American Florist.

Hot=Bed

Sash.

Tenons white-leaded. Corners secured with iron dowel pins. Every detail of construction perfect. Made of Clear Cypress Lumber.

Quick Shipments.

We have in stock and can ship immediately:

3 ft.x6 ft.,3 rows 10 in. glass. 3 ft.3 in.x6 ft.,4 8 in. 4 ft.x6 ft.,5 8 in.

Not glazed, 1% in. thick.

Delivered Prices

Quoted on application. State size and quantity wanted. No order too small to receive careful attention, and none too large for our facilities.

LOCKLAND LUMBER CO.,

Lockland, Ohio.

Mention the American Florist when writing to advertisers on this page.

Wheeler-Stenzel Co.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF

Make your contracts for next season now. We can deliver to any part of the country and Save You Money......

*************

Greenhouse Glass

72 Sudbury St., BOSTON, MASS.

VENTILATING

STANDARD

EQUAL IT Strength AND Durability

Send for Catalogue.

NOTHING Flimsy OR Complicated about it.

MACHINE.

E. HIPPARD, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO,

Prosperous Florists

are those who are up to-date in every leature that means decreased costs, or increased profits. Instead of wasting money on a played-out, worn-out, back-number boiler they

INVESTIGATE....

modern inventions and when it is shown money can be sayed, buy

MODERN BOILERS.

Some boilers are sold on their antiquity rather than their efficiency. We sell ours on

THEIR EFFICIENCY

instead of their antiquity, and the greater amount of heat furnished per pound of fuel used by our boilers over others shows why our boilers are worth more than others.

OUR GREENHOUSE BOILER CATALOGUE IS FREE > for the asking and we want every Florist to have it.

GIBLIN & CO., Utica, N.Y.

You can not get a GOOD THING tor nothing. But the price of this apparatus is next to nothing. Send for price and description to

J. D. CARMODY, Evansville, Ind.

CYPRESS Greenhouse Material

OF ANY

DESCRIPTION.

SEND FOR CATALOCUE.

EVANS' IMPROVED

CHALLENGE

VENTILATING

APPARATUS

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

QUAKER CITY MICHMOND, IND

FOR SALE CHEAP.

GLASS for Greenhouses, Conservatories, Hotbest beds, etc. Also Hotbed Sasbes and Mats, Paints, Oils, etc. THE REED GLASS & PAINT CO., 456 W. Broadway, NEW YORK

Simplicity in Greenhouse Construction.

During our long experience we have not only made many improvements in greenhouses, but we have so simplified the construction that building a greenhouse is no longer a matter so full of complications as to tax the patience and the ingenuity of even the most intelligent mechanic. Our is worked out in the best manner ready to be put up, and we furnish our customers such complete detail drawings that any workman of only ordinary capabilities can put it up correctly.

Clear Cypress Building Material

immonement

Write for Circulars or Estimates.

Lockland Lumber Co.

LOCKLAND, OHIO.

SALESROOMS:

133 Centre Street, - NEW YORK CITY. 510 Arch Street, - PHILADELPHIA.

COTTAGE BOILER

WESTERN AGENTS:
WESTERN BRASS MFG. CO.
ST. LOUIS, MO.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS:
HOLBROOK, MERRILL & STETSON
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

EUROPEAN AGENT:
AUG. EGGERS, BREMEN.

THE H. B. SMITH CO., Westfield, Mass.

Water

For Greenhouses, Gardens and Lawns in liberal quantities, every hour of the service, whether the wind services or not services services.

Improved Rider Hot Air Pump Improved Ericsson Hot Air Pump

Can be run by any ignorant boy without danger. Explosion impossible. Prices greatly reduced. In use in every part of the world.

RIDER-ERICSSON ENGINE CO.

22 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK. 191-193 High St., BOSTON. 684 Craig St., MONTREAL, P. Q. 86 Lake St., CHICAGO. 29-31 N. 7th St., PHILAOELPHIA. Send for catalogue "A 3."

G. M. KENDALL

GREENHOUSE CONTRACTOR, STEAM AND HOT WATER ENGINEER & & & &

The Largest Builder

Of Gugumber Houses in the World

GENERAL OFFICE AND LEOMINSTER, MASS.

Plans and estimates furnished for all kinds of Houses. "N. B." Will accept in payment—Part Cash, Balance on Mortgage. A large stock of Greenhouse Equipment constantly on hand....

Index to Advertisers. Long D B. 126
Loru & Burnnam Co. 178
Loru & Burnnam Co. 178
Lorus & Burnnam Co. 178
Lorus Burnnam Co. 178
Manling Jacob W. 176
Manling Jacob W. 176
Manling Jacob W. 176
Maplewood Cut Flo Co. 178
Mc John S. 178
Mc John J. 178
Mc J. 178 Armstrong Luther... Australian Paini Seed Co 1275
Baller F A 1.88
Barnard W W & Co 1271
Bartlett (160 S. 1278
Bassett & Washburn 1275
Bayersdorfer H & Co 1275
Beetherst & Van Leeu-Bayersdorfer H & Co 1228
Beerhorst & Van Leeuwen 1271
Blanc A & Co ... 1272 1277
Blanc A & Co ... 1272 1277
Blanc A & Co ... 1272 1277
Bornoink C ... 1274
Boerner Fred ... 1274
Boston Letter Co ... 1278
Brown Bag Filling
Machinet Co ... 1278
Brunton F & Co ... 1278
Brunton F & Co ... 1278
Buckbee H W ... 1276
Budlors J A ... 1277
Cambridge Hie Mrk 1279
Carmody J D ... 1284
Chicago Wreecking C 1277
Chicago Wreecking C 1277
Connell Ben J ... 1277
Connell Ben J ... 1277
Connell Ben J ... 1277
Contact Gardens ... 1277
Craic Robit & Son ... 1277 raig Robt & Son.... ritchell's Son B P nnningham J H criticall's son BT
noninkham J H. ...
noninkham J H. ...
banley S T. ... barle K Roy.
Detroit Flow Fro Mfar
Dietsoh A & Co. ...
Follon J L. ... bornashue A
Dorner Fred & Sons Col
Dreer H A
Elliot W H
Ellis A Pollworth P26
Ernest W H
Faxun M B
Felthousen J E. ...
Flo Mut Fire Ins Co. ..
Ford Bros ...
Frueh Chas
Gaivin & Co. ...
Gibbons H W
Giblin & Co. ...
Gorton & Lidserwood
Gurney Heater Co.
Sutta Percha Rub Co. ..
Haerens Auk askenburker Carl
Harlord H E.
Hartford H E.
Hartford H E.
Hart Ha M
Heacock Joa
Helkes W F.
Heinl Jos
Hels B B Hart M. A. Heacock Jos. Helken W. F. Helmi Jos. Helmi Jos. Helmi Jos. Helmi Jos. Helmi Jos. Hillinger Bros. Hillinger Bros. Hillinger Bros. Hillinger Bros. Hillinger Bros. Hillinger G. Leville, and Horker G. Horton & Hunker G. Jackson & Perkins G. Jackson & Perkins G. Jackson & Perkins G. Japanese Nursery Jeanings E.B. Kasting W. F. Keller Bros. A. Sons. Keller Geo. A. Sons. Keller Geo. A. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal Geo. M. a. enniout Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Kontal G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Keller Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Keller Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller Geo. M. S. Sons. Keller Harlan P. Keller Bros. G. S. Sons. Keller G. S. So aunnicott Bros Co.

Executand Lumita (20) Ltd Lumetale Edwin (22) LST

Laver C Ley John H Littleffeld H F

GREEN-HOUSE HEATING. MYERS & CO.

1518 & 1520 S. 8th St. PHILADELPHIA.

Hend for catalogue and price list.

Hitchings & Co.

ESTABLISHED 50 YEARS.

GREENHOUSE HEATING AND VENTILATING APPARATUS.

THE HIGHEST AWARDS RECEIVED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR FOR HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTURE, GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION AND HEATING APPARATUS.

Conservatories, Greenhouses, Palm Houses, etc., erected complete, with our patent Iron Frame Construction. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue.

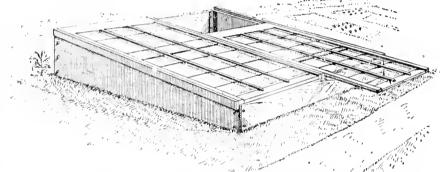

> NEW YORK. 233 Mercer Street,

LORD & BURNHAM CO.'S

CYPRESS HOT BED SASH and FRAMES

"The Best is the Cheapest."

Superior in Every Respect.

FREICHT ALLOWANCE covers Freight to most points in Eastern and Middle States. Send to New York
Office for circular and price list. Send 4 cts. postage for catalogue of Patent Iron Greenhouse Construction Estimates furnished for Cypress Greenhouse Material.
Send 5 cts. postage for latest catalogue of Greenhouse Heating and Ventilating.

New York Office: 160 FIFTH AVE., Cor. 21st St.

General Office and Works: IRVINCTON - ON - HUDSON, N. Y

Thos. W. Weathered's Son

Horticultural Architect ....and Builder

Manufacturer of Greenhouse Heating and Ventilating Apparatus, Cypress Greenhouse Material of every description. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue. 4.4.4

141 Centre St., NEW YORK.

Send for LUCAS ON Glass JOHN LUCAS & CO.,

4 Pamphlets Tell All About It.

Mass Auri Ca HHIapoor

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

America is "the Prow of the Vessel; there may be more comfort Amidships, but we are the first to touch Unknown Seas,"

Vol. XIII.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK, MAY 28, 1898.

No. 521.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

Copyright 1898, by American Florist Company. Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter. PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY. 324 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Eastern Office: 67 Bromfield St., Boston.

Subscription, $1.00 a year. To Europe, $2.00. Subscriptions accepted only from the Irade.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.
OFFICERS-WM. F. GUDE, Washington, D. C., preeldent; A. DONAGBUE. Omaha, Neb., vice-preeldent; W. J. STEWART, 67 Bromield St., Boston, Mass., secretary; H. B. BEATTY, Oll City, Pa., treasurer. The fourteenth annual meeting will be held at Omaha, Neb., August 16-19, 1888.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY. Annual Convention at Philadelphia, February, 1899.
ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster Pa., Secretary.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA. Annual meeting at Omaha, Neb., August, 1838. ELMER D. SMITH, Adrian, Mich., secretary.

CONTENTS.

| Herbaceous plan                                                      | £ III | Ht.   | ٠.  |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|-------|-----|-----|-----|----|-----|-----|----|----|---|---|---|
| New and rare pla                                                     | ant:  | ŝ     |     |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
| Leea RoehrsianaAmerican CarnaAcalypha Sande                  | (il   | lus   | .)  |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
| American Carna                                                       | tior  | 15    | )t* | iet | N.  |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
| Acalypha Sande                                                       | ri (  | 111   | us  | .)  | :   |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
|                                                                      |       |       |     |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
| Acalypha GodseChrysanthemumAmong ChiengoThe anthractiose | 110   | tes   | ,   |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
| Among Chiengo                                                        | gro   | n e   | rs  |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
| The anthracnose                                                      | of    | ti    | ėu  | - 1 | ea  | ve | s ( | ill | us | .) |   |   |   |
| New York.                                                            |       | -     | Ċ   |     |     |    |     |     |    |    | Ĺ | Ċ | i |
| New York,PhiladelphiaBoston                                  |       | -     | -   |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   | i |
| Boston                                                               |       |       |     |     | •   |    |     |     | Ċ  | Ċ  | Ċ | Ċ | Ċ |
| ChicagoBaltimoreThomas Cartled                               |       | ı.    |     |     |     |    |     |     |    |    | Ċ | Ċ | Ċ |
| Baltimore                                                            |       |       |     |     |     |    |     |     |    |    | Ċ |   |   |
| Thomas Cartled                                                       | 4744  |       | •   |     |     |    |     | •   | •  | •  | • | • |   |
| Milwaukee                                                            | ~.    |       | •   |     | •   |    |     |     |    | •  | • | • | • |
|                                                                      |       |       |     |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |
| San FranciscoNotes and comm                                      | ant.  | 2     |     |     |     | •  |     |     |    |    |   | • | • |
| Distalment                                                           | coc   | ٠.    |     |     |     |    | •   |     | •  | •  |   | • | • |
| Pittsburg.The nursery tra                                        | ia.   |       |     |     |     | *  |     | -   |    |    |   |   |   |
| Halpful reminde                                                      | ure . |       | ٠   | •   | •   |    |     |     |    | •  | ٠ | • | ٠ |
| Helpful remindsBuffaloThe seed trade                         | 1.5   | •     |     |     | -   |    |     |     | •  | •  | ٠ | • | • |
| The and trade                                                        |       | •     |     |     |     |    |     |     |    |    | ٠ | ٠ | ٠ |
| The secu trade                                                       |       |       | ÷   |     | ٠   |    | •   | •   | •  | ٠  | • | • | • |
| Outdoor propag                                                       | uum   | 111 ( | ) [ | 1.0 | 711 | ٠. |     | •   | •  | •  | ٠ | ٠ | ٠ |
| Omaha conventiSt. Louis                                          | υп.   | •     | ٠   |     |     |    |     | ٠   |    |    |   | ٠ | • |
| St. Louis                                                            |       |       |     |     |     |    | -   | ٠   | ٠  | ٠  | * | ٠ | ٠ |
| Richmond, Va.                                                        |       |       |     |     |     |    |     |     |    | •  | ٠ | ٠ |   |
| Hartford .                                                           |       |       |     | ٠   |     |    |     |     |    |    | ٠ | ٠ |   |
| Kansas City                                                          |       |       |     |     |     |    |     |     |    |    |   |   |   |

WARSAW, IND .- Louis Lentze has restocked the Lakeside greenhouses with the finest assortment of plants ever shown in Warsaw.

DETROIT, MICH.-August Kulschke, 68 years old, was caught at four o'clock in the morning of May 18 while carrying bedding plants stolen from a West boulevard mansion.

WEST BROOKFIELD, Mo.-Samuel Wass, well known as a florist, made his debut in operetta on May 18. The entertainment was given in the town hall and was a great success.

Herbaceous Plant Notes.

The month of May brings out a great number of showy hardy flowers and the borders are becoming more interesting every day. Where mixed borders have been planted judiciously, spring bloomers evenly distributed among the summer and fall flowering subjects, there will be no lack of cheerful and lively effects from now on. The early flowering material to draw upon is so very large that any soil, situation or exposure may be suited by proper selection. High dry ground can be made a success as well as the low damp places, and between the two extremes we may plant almost anything without discrimination, though some of the plants will require the protecting shade of their taller neighbors in midsummer, and therefore a knowledge of their special requirements is indispensible, for if we should place the helianthemums. for instance, in a shady nook we could not reasonably expect them to bloom with the same profusion, nor would their growth be so compact as when planted in a fully exposed position.

Among the many things in bloom at present I may mention the grand Doronicum plantagineum excelsum with its large well formed daisy-like yellow flowers; it is a most profuse bloomer and lasts for a long time, often maturing another fair crop of flowers toward or late in the fall. This is the tallest of the doronicums to my knowledge; under favorable conditions old clumps may attain a height of three and a half to four and a half feet, but in ordinarily good soil we seldom see them more than three feet high. Daphne cneorum is fully ont with its numerous bright pink flower heads, which are deli-cately fragrant; it does not really come under the head of herbaceous plants, being hard wooded and shrubby, but is in general use in all borders of any pretension. The plants spread out, but never grow tall with age. Propagation is effected by cuttings of the half ripe wood or by layers; it is slow work at best unless you have numerous large old stools to work from. The plants furnish a full crop of flowers regularly every spring and early summer and then bloom off and on, but more sparingly, up to late in autumn. Viola cornuta has started to blossom quite profusely. The blue varieties are used in many sections in place of violets when the latter are past, and though the flowers of the horned violet are a trifle larger than the best of our single large flowering sorts, and more pansy-like in shape, they answer admirably for the purpose. When planted in slightly moist ground and partly shaded from the hottest sun, we may pick flowers from them continuously until fall, but in a dry and very sunny exposure they will stop blooming during the hot weather in July and August. The pure white variety is equally desirable, and all are excellent plants for the border when slight shade can be provided for them, otherwise they are only effective in the early part of the summer and again in autumn.

The various kinds of trollius are very conspicuous at present with their bold globular yellow flowers. T. Europæus is pale yellow and the stems generally grow about one and a half feet high in ordinary garden soil; the flowers are very lasting. The plant is well worth growing for cutting, as also is the deeper colored T. Asiaticus, which in other respects resembles the first named. A variety which we received from a European grower some time ago under the name of T. giganteus has larger flowers and is a vigorous grower. The earliest lychnis with us is the elegant L. alpina, only about six to eight inches high, but well set with a great number of its many flowered bright pink flower heads. This useful plant is not met with very often, though easy to grow in dry and sunny places, while moisture and dense shade is detrimental to its welfare. It forms a nice little compact tuft of small narrow foliage and is evergreen; the flowers will last well into summer and the plant looks neat and clean throughout the year. Linum perenne is coming on fast; its lovely blue saucer-shaped flowers are very numerous every morning, but they close up after midday or when it rains, only to reopen again in the same profusion the following day. Its habit is graceful, light and airy, stems thin and wiry with narrow short linear leaves; the flowers are of no use forcutting, but no flower border should be without a few of these plants; they are always satisfactory and require no special care, doing well in any position if not too densely shaded, attaining a height of about one foot.

Stellaria Holostea, with a profusion of starry pure white flowers is conspicuous on the rockery and in the border; its densely matted growth hides the ground at all times and the flowers are freely produced in succession for about two months in spring. Armerias in a half dozen varieties are out too, mostly pink shades, a few whites among them; we can ill afford to do without any of them, for all have distinct and desirable qualities of their own. Iris pumila alba, with pure white standards, and I. pumila aurea are somewhat later with us than the blue varieties, but are well advanced now; both are valuable in the border, especially the last named, the color being a very deep golden yellow and the flowers per-feetly shaped; growing a little taller than the early blue, they are used extensively as cut flowers. Uyularia grandiflora with its long pendulous pale yellow flowers, which are kept in constant motion by the slightest breeze, is an interesting object when planted in large elumps; young plants with two or three stems are pretty, but do not create the same effect. These flowers are borne on the stout arching shoots and spring from the leaf joints on the upper part of the leaty young growth. Half shade is desirable for them, but open places will answer for them if the soil is not excessively dry. The rock roses (helianthemum) are just now beginning to be attractive and will be so throughout the season; every day will bring a new crop of the small roselike blossoms, white, vellow or pink, in various shades. The plant is shrubby, but very dwarf in habit and can withstand the dry heat in full exposure; the small foliage is green in winter and helps to keep up a cheerful appearance in the border or on the rockery, wherever we may happen to introduce them. They are propagated by cuttings in August.

The double white Ranunculus aconitifolius fl. pl. is one of the most useful plants of its genus for cutting, though the double yellows are also very serviceable. They are double to the very center and bloom freely in May and June on long branching stems, varying in height according to soil or situation from ten inches to two feet. The plants should not be disturbed too often, old clumps in fairly good soil giving a great mass of bloom year after year and growing to a good height, the flower stems being long, while newly divided plants are a great deal shorter of stem. Fair maids great deal shorter of stem. Fair maids of France and white bachelor buttons, they are called in different sections of the country. The double butterenp or yellow bachelor's button, R. acris fl. pl., is also in flower; it grows usually about one and a half feet high and is not so sensitive when divided and transplanted. All ranunculuses, of which there are quite a number of species, do best in rather moist soil, but an ordinary border will answer quite well for them.

J. B. Keller.

Notes on New and Rare Plants.

DRABA BRUNIIFOLIA.

We have in this a very mee dwarf plant about one inch high, which is well adapted for borders. The bright yellow flowers, three-eights of an inch in diameter, appear in such large quantities that almost nothing of the leaves is to be seen when the plants are in full bloom. The single flower lasts, as I observed, more than one week. The flowers appear in April. The perennial plants are raised from seed which should be sown in June, and the plants will then bloom next spring for the first time. The plant is also adapted for rockeries

TRANSHIP CHICLOS

This time tuberous plant flowered in January in the open air. It attains a hight of about four inches. Large tuber often produce twenty or thirty flowers as once. The flowers are best compared with those of Helleborus niger, but the are lattless, aller bright vellow and delightfull, fragrant. Immediately beneath the single steme of flower there is a fine rosette of three deeply initied lance with hore see exhalt recurved, while the flowers are in ore or less bell shaped. The are fine expanded only when the sur-shapes the points meanly allied to be noticed to the points meanly allied to be noticed.

by larger flowers and finer incised leaves. It was brought into commerce last year by Mr. Siehe, at Mersina, in Asiatic Turkey.

ANTHURIUM GUSTAVI.

This is far the most majestic of the anthuriums, as the leaves measure more than three feet in diameter in both directions. It grows best in a damp house in turfy loam, where it forms leaf after leaf at short intervals. But it is also grown easily in a much cooler temperature, and is a very decorative indoor plant. I have it without any protection in my room for more than a year, where it grows very satisfactorily, though the leaves do not attain their full size. The plant is propagated by cuttings, which will be easily obtained if the head of the plant is cut off.

STERNBERGIA MACRANTHA.

Mr. Siche has given us in this recent introduction another new plant of the highest value for cut flower purposes. It is quite hardy, and the flowers appear from the end of October until New Year's, They are as large as those of a good tulip, but of a shining yellow color. Cut flowers remain quite fresh, without water, for five days. The bulbous plant requires a very well drained soil, and to obtain flowers for cutting purposes should be grown in frames, for it is necessary that the plant be kept quite dry, without any water, and fully exposed to sunshine during summer. The plant is quite hardy. The allied Sternbergia lutea has flowers of only half the size of this plant.

UDO DAMMER.

ACALYPHA SANDERL

This was one of the most sensational exhibits at the recent Ghent, Belgium, quinquennial exhibition. It is described by Dr. Masters as one of the most striking and ornamental plants he had ever seen. Of branching habit, the branches spread widely and throw down long, bright crimson spikes like those of love lies bleeding, twelve to eighteen inches in length, beneath broad ovate leaves, in a most effective manner. To see a group of these plants at Messrs. Sander's, where one can look up at these crimson tassels, is to experience a sense of enjoyment not to be forgotten. This plant was collected by Micholitz in the Bismark Archipelago.

LEEA ROEHRSIANA.

This is one of the finest plants of the genus, and will make an excellent addition to the group of trailing plants. The plant has been named in honor of Mr. J. Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J. Dr. Masters describes it as a tropical climber with pinnate foliage sixteen inches long; each pinna very shortly stalked, six and one-half inches long and two and one-half inches wide, glaucescent, cordate, oblong, acuminate and coarsely crenate. The young leaves are bronze green, and the stem is marked with raised green spots. This plant is allied to cissus, and is found in the hotter parts of India, Malay and Philippine islands and Australia; not only has it this wide distribution, but it is exceedingly variable and therefore plentifully endowed with synonyms, of which L. Roehrsiana, Hort., Sander, is one. It is easy of propagation and rapidly attains vigorous proportions. Small plants bloom more easily, and in bush form it is useful for decorative purposes and cannot be equalled. As a climber its spikes are very attractive, lasting several weeks in a fresh condition. The foliage is of clear, shining green, and the spikes bright crimson.

LEEA ROEHRSIANA

ACALYPHA GODSEFFIANA.

The beautiful variegated foliage of this plant will make it exceedingly popular. The coloring in small plants is very marked. Specimens will prove invaluable for decorative purposes. According to Dr. Masters it is a low growing shrub of dense, bushy habit, with shortly stalked, ovate or ovate-lanceolate leaves, slightly cordate, acuminate, coarsely toothed, teeth incurved; disk three and one-half to four inches long, two and one-quarter to two and one-half inches wide, green, with a few thinly scattered, rather long white hairs on the upper surface and along the cream-colored or white margins; petiole three-quarter of an inch long, densely covered with felted seta. Flowers and fruit not seen. The cream colored marginal variegation gives this plant a very ornamental appearance. Although the flowers are not known, there can be little doubt as to the affinities of this plant, and indeed, there is in the Kew herbarium a specimen which may be the green form of this species. This has been referred with doubt to A. Pancheriana, of Baillon, from which, however, it differs widely as also form A. obovata, which has retuse, rededged leaves. Our present plant, which appears to be very ornamental, was collected in New Guinea by Micholitz.

А. Діммоск.

Forcing Strawberries.

I would like to get some information through the AMERICAN FLORIST with regard to growing and forcing strawherries in the greenhouse in winter. Should the runners be started in pots like violets, or would it be better to begin with old plants, potting or planting them in the fall? Please let me know about the best method of culture, including best forcing varieties, most suitable soil, temperature, with such hints as are likely to be useful to a beginner in the forcing of strawberries.

H. L.

In forcing strawberries the plan pursued at this place has been to plunge 3-inch pots along the rows of spring set plants, leading the runners into the pots in July or early August. When the plants have filled the pots with roots they should be taken up, shifted to 6-inch pots and these pots plunged in coal ashes or other similar material, giving them the necessary attention through the season and ripening them off before freezing weather sets in. They may be removed indoors at any time through the winter, subjecting them at first to from 40° to 45° and increasing the temperature gradually until at the time of flowering they will be held at 65°. When the fruit has set, liquid manure should be given twice each week until time of coloring. For ease of foreing and numbers of medium sized fruits the Beder Wood has proven the hest; for large dark fruits the Glen Mary is probably the best.

ACALYPHA SANDERI.

C. E. Hunn.
Ithaea, N. Y.

American Carnation Society Reports.

Eb. Am. Florist:—There appeared in your issue of May 14 last (pp. 1229-30), certain remarks touching my capabilities as a stenographer; and as these remarks are calculated to damage my reputation as such, I beg to ask that you publish the following explanation so as to set the matter right before your readers, so far as I am concerned.

Your correspondent, "E. L.," in writing on "The American Carnation Society," in the pages of your journal just cited, says: "When the society had agreed to meet in New York to complete its organization, the executive committee decided to secure the services of an expert stenographer, so that as complete a report as possible of the meeting would be given to the members who were unavoidably absent, to be published in the proceedings. A mistake, however, was made in the selection of the performer, for the merest tyro present could have made as complete a report from memory a month after the meeting had adjourned as was done in this case."

I am not aware whether your correspondent is cognizant of the agreement made with me, or the services expected of me in connection with the meeting in question. When Mr. C. W. Ward, who was then treasurer of the American Carnation Society, employed me at that time, the understanding was that I was simply to make a note of the minutes of the meeting, to relieve the secretary; not to give a verbatim report of the proceedings—the latter a work which, although I considered myself quite capable of undertaking it, was one that could not have been reasonably expected for the remuneration agreed upon and paid. Therefore, according to agreement, I furnished a summary of the doings of the society on that occasion; and I may add that that summary was not wholly utilized by the secretary.

Regarding the quality of my work at that time, I quote from a letter received from Mr. Ward, under date May 20 as follows; "Have never heard any dissatisfaction expressed with the minutes of that meeting, save by Mr. Lonsdale, who was then the president, and he thought it would have been nice to have had a verbatim report of the whole proceedings of the meeting. This, however, was an after and not a forethought. So far as I know there is no reason to criticise the work you did at that meeting."

In support of my statement as to my competency to give a full account of what transpired at the meeting, I will only quote your correspondent's own language quote your correspondent sown language in his article in your paper referred to. He says: "The trade papers published everything, good, bad and indifferent that was done at the meetings." (There was only one meeting as I remember.) For materials paper at least 1 and 1 for the control of the one trade paper, at least, I assume the responsibility of this comprehensive re-

But it is with reference to the meeting of the American Carnation Society, held at Chicago in February last, that I desire to write more particularly. spondent states: "The published proceedings of the last meeting were received last week, and the improvement in the report is quite noticeable, at least over that meeting which was held in New York in November, 1891." These remarks convey the impression that the report of the Chicago meeting is defective from your cor-respondent's standpoint, and as I was the "performer" on that occasion, too, l ask that you give publicity to the undernoted letters of W. N. Rudd, Esq., president, and A. M. Herr, Esq., secretary, of the American Carnation Society, with respect to the services rendered by me relative to the report of the Chicago meeting of the society:

ALEX. WALLACE, Esq., New York.

DEAR SIR:-Yours 16th to hand, and 1 have pleasure in saying that your work in reporting the recent Carnation Society proceedings was eminently satisfactory. May 19, 1898. (Signed) W. N. Rupp.

MR. ALEX. WALLACE, New York.

DEAR SIR:-Your work as stenographer for the American Carnation Society has been very satisfactory to me as secretary, and as I have heard no complaint from any member of the society it has evidently been equally so to the society as a body. (Signed) ALBERT M. HERR. May 17, 1898.

As my association with the latest report of the American Carnation Society is well known to this trade, I ask you to please insert this communication as a matter of justice and fairness.

ALEX, WALLACE.

New York, May 23, 1898.

Chrysanthemum Notes.

It is now time to begin planting chrysanthemums, especially the early varieties and those intended for exhibition purposes. The soil should be well mixed and of a live and pliable nature, using only well rotted manure as a fertilizer. regard to adding bone meal in mixing the compost heap, we have given that up, applying the meal after the soil is in the benches, and from close observation have found this plan to yield much better results.

The meal is applied at therate of about twenty-five or thirty pounds to 100 feet of bench four feet wide, thoroughly mixing it with the soil by means of a spading fork, after which the compost is made as firm as possible. This solid condition of the soil is quite essential to the production of fine blooms of good depth and keeping quality. If notes were made last season of the habit and growth of the different varieties, now is the time to study them out; by so doing lots of time and labor will be saved later on. It is a good idea to plant all the varieties of the same habit and growth and time of flowering together so far as possible. Our first plantings will be of the early kinds, of which there are few to choose from compared with the number of mid-season varieties.

In the selection of these early sorts it is well to take into consideration the fact that a great many of them do not come up to the later ones as regards size or color, and must, therefore, be out of the way before such varieties as Major Bonnation, Ivory or Mrs. Robinson come on the market. Unless there is a big outlet for the flowers, one should not plunge too heavy with sorts like Lady Fitzwigram, Merry Monarch or Mine, Bergmann.

Among early whites the first to mature with us last season was Midge, cut September 28, with stems about two feet in height. It is easily grown with fair sized flowers but the foliage is entirely too heavy to admit of planting close enough to be profitable. Geo. S. Kalb was ready to cut October 4 with a height of about The stock of this was grown three feet. The stock of this was grown from April struck cuttings, and to get the best results from this variety the cuttings should always be propagated at this early date. The stock of Geo. S. Kalb struck in June, though given the same treatment as the earlier cuttings, did not afford nearly such good results. When treated right, this is the best early white we have seen and a great deal better than Mme. Merry Monarch is a loose, Bergmann. Merry Monarch is a loose, spreading flower and has never been thought much of here for commercial purposes, though it may be useful to some on account of its earliness, being ready to cut during the first week of October; it is, however, rather a tall grower.

There are very few early pink varieties of merit to choose from, Elvena and Glory of the Pacific being the best that came under our notice last season. The blooms of both these sorts are of the light pink order and very beautiful unless allowed to remain on the plants too long, when they become very washy in color; they usually flower about October 10.

Vellow Queen is the only vellow variety with us until Major Bonnaffon comes in, and when well done and allowed to fully develop before cutting it is a beautiful flower of fine growth and stem. This is another variety which should be grown from early struck cuttings, taking the buds from August 25 to September 1 or thereabouts. It is ready to cut here about October 14. J. E. Lager, H. L. Sunderbruch and Sunclad are all very good yellows, coming in about October 20, but with us Major Bonnaffon is about ready by this time, and being much the better seller, we have not grown the others to any great extent.

Henry Hurrell is another early yellow that took our fancy last season; the only thing we had against it was that we could not get the plant to produce stems of sufficient length for commercial purposes; they were barely two feet high with us, but the flowers were extra fine. There has been very little done in regard to bringing out early reds and bronzes, due, no doubt, to the limited demand for blooms of these colors.

It greatly depends, of course, on the treatment given varieties whether or not they arrive at perfection early. At this time they should be well grown, thrifty plants. When transferred to the bench give them full light and ventilation; water only when necessary and then freely; syringe on bright days, mornings and afternoons; keep the plants clear of suckers and side shoots, thus enabling them to throw their entire strength into the development of the main stem and hasten their maturity.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Among Chicago Growers.

Hinsdale, sixteen miles west of Chicago on the Burlington route, is one of the most delightful suburban towns in Illi-nois, and there two of the largest cut flower growing establishments in the west are beated. O. P. Bassett commenced business at Hinsdale about twelve years ago, in what would now be considered a moderate way, with 30,000 or 10,000 feet of glass. Six or seven years ago Mr Washburn secured an interest in the business and the firm name became Bassett & Washburn. Every year large improvements and additions have been made, and they now have over 500,000 feet of glass. Roses have always been their specialty, although they have grown chrysanthemums and for several years have been large producers of Harrisii and general bulb stock.

Until this season they had not attempted much with carnations, but this year they had several houses of them, their stock being among the best in the market. The tollowing varieties were grown: Mrs. Bradt, Flora Hill, Mary Wood, Lily Dean, Maud Dean, Mayor Pingree, Jubilee, Wm. Scott and Daybreak. Next year Bassett & Washburn will grow carnations more extensively, having leased for that purpose the Mitchell place of about 34,000 feet of glass, which adjoins their property. It is their purpose to make Bassett & Washburn's carnations the standard of excellence in the market, just as their American Beauties have been the standard of roses, and they will grow from 1,000 to 7,000 plants of each of the following varieties: Flora Hill, Mrs. Bradt, Mary Wood, Mayor Pingree, Jubilee, Painted Lady, Gold Nuggett, Dazzle, White Cloud, Argyle, Armazindy, Evelina, Psyche, Scarlet Lady and Frances Joost. Flora Hill will be their leader. They will also have on trial from 100 to 200 plants They will of each of the new carnations of this year's introduction.

ACALYPHA GODSEFFIANA

Bassett & Washburn built a house 35x 300 feet especially for smilax and asparagus. The house is much higher than would be required for other purposes and would be required for other purposes and is now planted with 3,000 asparagus and 7,000 smilax. The asparagus is from eight to twelve feet high and so thick are the strings that in many places one can scarcely see through a seven foot border. Two more houses of asparagus will be grown this season. These will be planted on benches and grown to be cut in short sprays to be sold in bunches. About 3,500 plants will be required. Quite a large amount of replanting has already been done for Bassett & Washburn believe planting should be accomplished as early in the spring as is possible. Their young rose stock in pots is in a very vigorous condition. The stock from which they are at present cutting their blooms is clean and healthy, showing not a sign of mildew. Two houses of Kaiserin are remarkably fine. Bassett & Washburn sell all their stock at their wholesale store, 88 Wabash avenue, a very large proportion of it being shipped out of the city.

The Hinsdale Rose Co., although not so large producers as are Bassett & Washburn, are quite a factor in the cut flower trade of Chicago. They have three quite large establishments, two in Hinsdale and one at Downers Grove, a few miles west of Hinsdale. The company owns the old Geo. W. Miller and Paine Bros.' place in Hinsdale. At the former establishment quite a large amount of adiantum is grown, a number of the houses having been built for that purpose. A general collection of roses are all in good condition. One of the novelties to be seen here is a house of Sunset. A few years ago this rose was about as plentiful as Perle, but now it is seldom seen. At the Paine place a general collection of roses are well grown, and here also adiantum is a specialty remarkably well done. A special feature at this establishment is smilax, five houses being devoted to it. Over 15,000 plants are grown. A general collection of bedding plants is also grown. All the stock of the Hinsdale Rose Co., is sold by A. G. Prince & Co., 88 Wabash avenue.

The Anthracnose of Ficus Leaves.

During the present week my attention has again been drawn to a leaf trouble of the India rubber plant. Ficus elastica. This time the complainant came in person and laid his case before me, which is the same old story of the foliage losing its beautiful green color and turning to a sickly greenish yellow that finally ends in the affected foliage turning brown and becoming dry and distorted. Anything that affects the foliage of a rubber plant is sure to bring ruin, for the chief beauty resides in the luxuriant large thick leaves, deep green in color and glossy upon the surface. It is a serious blemish if any leaf is imperfect in any respect. The disease in question is due to a fungus of the group known as the anthracnose and belongs to the genus gloeosporium. The same or a similar species (Gloeosporium elasticae Cke and Mars) works upon the crotons, dracanas, neriums and dieffenbachias, and it is not unlikely that the disease spreads from one or the other of these greenhouse plants. As a rule the leaf shows at first a single patch an inch or so across that is losing its healthy green color and enlarges, and the center finally becomes light brown when the fungus begins to burst through the skin, most frequently upon the under side, and produces small pinkish rifts in the epidermis of the leaf. Fig. 1 is from a drawing of a leaf recently brought to the station by one who was alarmed at the sad plight his ficus was in. In Fig. 2 is seen a small portion of the In Fig. 2 is seen a sman portion of the underside of the blighted part showing somewhat enlarged the nature of the ruptures and the granular exudations of the spores. It is by means of these spores that the fungus is spread from place to place.

Should the reader wish for an illustration of a similar fungus the bitter rot of the apple may be mentioned, which in appearance to the naked eye is not easily distinguished from the one upon the ficus. As a remedy it is written that all affected leaves are beyond cure and should be removed and burned. The variegated variety of ficus is much more susceptible to anthracnose than the ordinary sorts, and if such diseased plants are grown they may breed the disease for the fully green specimens that might not otherwise be attacked. It is not expected that spraying could ever become popular with such plants as the ones under consideration, for the beauty would thereby be greatly diminished by the coating of the fungicide. It is possible that the whole plant may become infected and then there is little hope of saving it, but when a single leaf is diseased, and fortunately it is usually among the older ones, it should be promptly removed before the disease spreads to other portions of the plant.

Byron D. Hallsted.

New York.

VERY HEAVY RECEIPTS OF ROSES AND CARNATIONS.—BUSINESS EXCEEDINGLY DULL, —CROWDS PATRONIZE CLEARY.

One wholesaler estimates the receipts of roses in this city last Saturday to have been in the vicinity of 300,000. There have been few days in the history of the flower trade here when the aggregate cut has approached what it has been for the past few days. Carnations are also coming in heavily, seemingly making an effort to average up for the scanty production of a few weeks ago. Simultaneously with these overwhelming crops business has apparently gone to pieces and the demand is exasperatingly slow. The result is that there is no such thing as stable prices, and the most importunate Greek can simply have goods at his own figure, placing the wholesaler, too, under a debt of gratitude to him for carrying the stock away. The retailers remark that the buying season seems to get shorter each year. The long, profitless summer wipes out whatever gain they may have made during the active winter season.

John Weir's son James has gone to the front. Mr. Weir thinks that fighting the Spaniard will be boys' play compared with the fight he has had to keep up for the past few years on Twenty-eighth street.

Standing room is at a premium these days at Cleary's auction room.

Visiting New York: A. H. Hews, Cambridge, Mass.

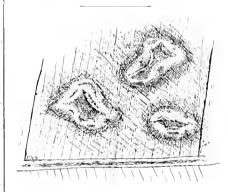

FIG II

Philadelphia.

TRADE IS QUIET AND PRICES HAVE NO STABILITY.—BEDDING STOCK SELLS AT PRICES WHICH DETER MANY GROWERS.

And still it rains, scarcely a day passing without a shower or two. The cut flower market is quiet, there is little doing in the stores and shipping trade is rapidly falling off with the commission men.

Prices, as is usual at this season of the year, have no stability. The price for tea roses in twenty-five and fifty lots is from 4 to 6 cents, but larger quantities go very low. Beauties range in price from $2 to $25 per hundred. Sweet peas are plentiful in all colors at from 25 to 75 cents per hundred.

Carnations are holding out well at from 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred, a few extras bringing $2. Paronics sell for $4 to $6 per hundred.

Bedding plants are moving lively when the weather permits of their being planted. Prices are about as follows: Lower grade of plants, such as verbenas, petunias and phlox, in 2½ inch pots $3 to 84 per hundred; 334 and 4-inch stock of geraniums, heliotrope, ageratum and fuchsias, 86 to 88. Larger plants of the same in 6-inch pots, $16 to $20. Roses sell for from $20 to $40 per hundred in 5 to Sinch pots.

Many growers say there is no money in 4-inch plants at less than $10 per hundred, or the 212 inch size at less than $4. and as such figures have not been realized for the past six or eight years they have turned their attention to palms and other foliage plants. However, there are plenty of growers who are encouraged to supply the demand at the quoted figures and who have enough left over for an additional house every year or two.

The florists' shad dinner and pienic was held at the grounds of the Gun Club at Wissanoming Wednesday and, considering the weather, which could not be otherwise than cloudy, with a little rain, it was quite successful. There were about seventy five ladies and gentlemen present and the afternoon was spent very pleasantly with games on the lawn and in watching the gunners at the trans. May pole was erected in the center of the lawn and was decorated with carnations, bunting and red white and blue ribbons. A dance about the pole took place, between the showers, to music by the orchestra. A forty yards race was won by 11. Dumont, with Wm. Smith and Wm. Craig second and third respectively. The running jump was won by H. Dumont, who covered sixteen feet, George Moss being second with fifteen and one-half feet. The forty-yard hurdle race was won by Geo. Moss, with H. Dumont second. Heacock won the high jump, with II. Dumont second, and the fat men's race was won by Edwin Lonsdale, with Chas. Fox second and T. Butler third. An excellent shad dinner was provided, to which all did justice. In the evening dancing was indulged in. The Brave Old Duke was rendered by Edwin Lonsdale in his best style, and the party broke up after singing the Star Spangled Banner

Boston.

MI MORIAL TOLY HOPES AND PROSPECTS .-ALL TLOWERS ALRY ARE SDANT, -- FAHIRE HOS AT HORBOULTURAL HALL - AT-TRACTIONS AT THE ARROREST M.

All thoughts are now turned to Memorial Day, and the prospects for supply and demand. Great hopes are based upon this observance, which New Lingland florists have learned to regard as one of the most profitable of occasions, rivaling Laster and Christmas, and to is high correct events are expected to give additional importance this year. florists will need all they can get out of Memorial less to average up on the losses of the past two weeles, during which ther have gone through a period a unparadicled duliness. The receipts of flowers have been very he cay and entirely out of proportion to the outlet for them. Outdoor bloom has begun to come in.

and that helps to still further embarass the situation. Not even the most sanguine grower has the temerity to suggest that there will be any shortage in any line for Memorial Day. All indications point to a tremendous crop of carnations and roses and moderate prices are likely to prevail.

Fyrnses, prunuses and redbuds are at their height at the Arnold Arboretum and make a gay display. The lilaes are following closely on them; they will be even finer than they were last year. The hardy indica azaleas have gone through the winter well and Mr. Dawson is highly clated over their acquisition.

There were quite a number of interesting things at the exhibition at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, May 21. Wm. Donald, gardener to J. S. Bailey, showed a plant of Miltonia vexillaria Hilliana, which won a certificate of merit for superior cultivation. Harvard, a fine dark crimson carnation, was shown by J. Tailby & Son. It is said to be a cross between Mangold and Uriah Pike. Rea Brothers' hardy perennials, C. H. Souther's gloxinias, Oakes Ames' hardy primula, James Comley's pyruses and magnolias, etc., all contributed to make an attractive show; but the title of "Grand Exhibition," as announced at the entrance, was hardly justifiable. Why is it that flower shows are always "grand?"

Wm. F. Dawson, son of Jackson Dawson, is to be married June 15, to Miss Julia Hoffman, of Schenectady, N. V. Mr. Dawson is consulting engineer for the Genetal Electric Company at Schencetady. Plant auctions at McCarthy's are booming now; prices up to the average, as a rule.

Chicago.

GREAT OVER-PRODUCTION OF STOCK .--GOOD PROSPECTS FOR JUNE TRADE. - FLO-RISTS' CLUB MEETING AND PLANS, -NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The generally predicted revival of trade The generally predicted revival of trade for Memorial week has hus far failed to materialize and the superabundance of flowers the fore part of the week was the largest of the season. Tulips, iris, narcissus Poeticus, paonies, lilae, spiraca, snowballs and Cape jasmine have been in the market in over supply. The season for all this class of stock except jasmine and paonies will be virtually over this week, and when these flowers are gone better prices will be realized for are gone better prices will be realized for roses, carnations and all greenhouse grown flowers. The market will probably be cleaned out of all salable stock this week. Another such glut as we have experienced for the past few weeks is not likely to occur before fall. Usually there is a very good demand for flowers during June and at the same time many growers will commence to throw out their stock of roses preparatory to replanting, which will materially reduce the stock of cut

The meeting of the Florists' Club, May 20, was well attended and two caudidates were elected to membership. Sweet peas and summer flowers were the subject for discussion. The general sentiment was that there is not enough demand for out flowers in summer to warrant any special effort to grow them for that

At the next meeting arrangements will be made for a series of summer outings. reamboat excursion to Milwankeehas born proposed and is generally favored es the members of Austin Shaw and I folder of New York, and C. C. Poll ith, of Milwankee, visited the club.

O. J. Friedman, who has been sick with typhoid fever for the past two months is much improved and will be down to his store in a few days.

A. L. Vaughan has returned from a business trip through the west.

Bassett & Washburn are mailing with their price list, a card giving samples of ribbon, with sizes and prices attached.

John Muno, one of the oldest settlers of Chicago, died May 19 at the home of his son, John Muno, Jr., the well known florist on Touhy avenue, near Western avenue. Mr. Muno was 86 years of age.

The floral tributes at the funeral of Police Inspector Michael Schaack last Sunday were the most elaborate seen in Chicago in a long time.

The Chicago Flower Mission will give an entertainment at Willard Hall on June Visiting Chicago: Miss Rose Wright Spokane, Washington. I. T. A.

Baltimore.

FLOWERS FOR THE SIXTH MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT WHICH WAS MOBBED IN BAL-TIMORE THURTY-SEVEN YEARS AGO.-HAIL STONE DAMAGE.—CHANGES IN THE PARKS.—NOTES.

The planting out season is in its full glory just now and to judge from the amount of talk it produces, the crop of torpedoes Uncle Sam has planted in the harbor is by far the most important plantation of all. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good," and at least one of the trade is satisfied with the war as he is finishing off the earth works and is sodding them for the government.

The hail storm that swept over the southwest part of the city left many a wrecked glass roof, too many to itemize, in fact, for from north of Catonsville around to Brooklyn not a place seems to have escaped damage, some indeed, having almost all the glass on the houses broken. The customary exaggeration would lead one to believe that balls of ice as large as hens eggs fell, but it is pretty certain that there were some as large as pigeon eggs, and anyway, they were large enough to shatter any single thick glass and broke much that was double thick.

There have been a good many changes among the superintendents and employees in the city parks. A. Anderson, of Patterson Park, has given place to Robert Corse. Mr. Johnson, of Clifton Park, has been succeeded by N. F. Flitton. Fred. Wessler is filling the position in Riverside Park lately occupied by Mr. Clark, and the changes made in subordinate positions are past enumerating.

The passage of the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment through the city called out boundless enthusiasm and used up a good many cut flowers, for which we should be thankful, as the demand outside of funeral work, is not what it might be. Besides the floral peace offerings to the officers of the regiment, flowers were actually strewn in the path of the rank and file at Mt. Royal Station, which was a much better way of treating the soldier boys than was the reception of stones accorded this same regiment when it passed through Baltimore in 1861,

BRINGLEORL, CONS.-Howard Bayette was so badly injured by a train at a street crossing at Rochester, N. V., that both legs were amputated at the knee. He was employed at his trade as a florist at the time of the accident. His family resides here

The American Florist

Subscription $1.00 a Year. To Europe, $2.00. Subscriptions accepted only from those in the trade.

Advertisements, 10 Cents a Line, Agate; $1.00 per inch. Cash with Order.

No Special Position Guaranteed.

Discounts, 6 times, 5 per cent; 13 times, 10 per cent; 26 times, 20 per cent; 52 times, 30 per cent.

The Advertising Department of the AMERICAN FLORIST is for Florists, Seedsmen, and dealers in wares pertaining to those lines ONLY Orders for less than one-half inch soace not accepted. Advertisements must reach us by Wednesday to secure insertion in the issue for the following Saturday.

Address THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO., Chicago.

THE leaves of vine forwarded by "M. were so far damaged in transit as to be beyond identification.

THE Florists' Hail Association is promptly adjusting and turning over the eash to cover the recent heavy losses at Kansas City.

FUMIGATING with hydrocyanic gas in the cellar after nursery stock is dug in the fall is recommended in a recent bulletin of the New York Experiment Station. This will probably destroy all insects.

WE have received a box of excellent Cape jasmines (Gardenia florida) from the Concordia Nurseries, Dickinson Texas. They were cut and packed when the buds showed color, and arrived in the best possible condition.

R. G. CAREY'S list of the hest twentyfive chrysanthenums, submitted to the Florists' Club of Philadelphia last November, and published subsequently in the AMERICAN FLORIST, has been translated into French and appears in the May issue of Le Nord Horticole. The list has also been published by the Gardening World, London. Special comment is made on the American requirement of good stem and foliage in a chrysanthemum.

MR. CHAS. RAYNER informs us that a new enterprise will be launched in Louisville, Ky., June 1. It will be known as the Louisville Florists' Supply and Exchange, doing a commission business with some unique features. All consignments are to be kept absolutely separate, and the consignee will be notified of any surplus and matters so arranged that his stock can be traced right through. No fakir business will be permitted at the new establishment, and it is claimed that a business of this kind will supply a long felt want in Louisville and will meet with the approval and support of the florists in general.

Resolutions on the Death of Thomas Cartledge.

At a special meeting of the Florists' Club, called Wednesday afternoon, May 18, to take action on the death of our fellow member and ex-treasurer, Thomas Cartledge, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, The Florists' Club of Philadelphia having learned with deep regret of the death of Thomas Cartledge, its late treasurer and honored member, therefore

Resolved, That the Florists' Club of Philadelphia hereby expresses its deep sense of the irreparable loss it has sustained in common with a host of sincere friends; they were proud to have known him, to have associated with him, and to have called him friend; a man just, honorable and true in every position to which he was called. His memory will long be kept green in the hearts of the many to whom he was always a wise, sympathetic and affectionate counsellor. The Florists' Club, to which he was long a faithful and efficient treasurer, and of which he was one of the founders, is unable to fully express the sense of great loss sustained by his death.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the club and a copy be sent to the family.

ROBERT CRAIG. Com. (Signed) CHAS. D. BALL. EDWIN LONSDALE.

Cut Flower Price Lists Received.

H. L. Sunderbruch Co., Cincinnati; Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee; Ellis & Pollworth, Milwaukee; St. Louis Cut Flower Co., St. Louis; Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo; City Hall Cut Flower Market, Boston; Illinois Cut Fower Co., Chicago; A. G. Prince & Co., Chicago.

Catalogues Received.

The Herendeen Manufacturing Co., Geneva, X. Y., heating; D. Haster & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, bulbs; S. A. Van Konijnenburg & Co., Noordwijk, Holland, bulbs; Illinois Cut Flower Co., Chicago, Ills., vases; A. Blanc & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., plants; Ellis & Pollworth, bulbs; Vredenburg & Co., Rochester, X. Y., lithograph plates; C. G. Olie. Boskoop lez Gonda, Holland, plants and bulbs.

Greenhouse Building.

Bloomfield, N. B.-John Campbell, one rose house.

Hartford, Conn,-John Coombs, three rose houses each 20x100, and two violet houses.

Waterbury, Conn.—A. Dallas, two rose houses, one 21x150, the other 21x50.

Grand Rapids, Mich.-Crabb & Hunter, large carnation house and violet houses. Henry Smith, violet house 150 feet long and carnation house 250 feet

A Famous Chicago Collection of Orchids.

The only private collection of any extent is situated within half an hour's ride from the heart of the city, where the influence of the impure smoky atmosphere at times has its effect on some of the varieties of tender constitution. The owner of this collection has seven houses devoted to their culture, and although small, they are well adapted to the needs of the varieties grown. It may be safely stated that no collection possesses such a combination of species as is here seen thriving and flowering with the greatest freedom, in fact the visitor will rarely be disappointed, finding a good display of flowers at any season.

It may not be generally comprehended, but it is true that here may be found the finest and most complete collection of hotanical orchids in the country. In many instances they are quite unique, and Mr. E. G. Uihlein, the fortunate owner, is ever ready to acquire any species that is novel or interesting. Many sarcopodiums, epidendrums, celogynes, aerides, vandas, masdevallias, odontoglossums, eattlevas and lælias are grown, but to ennmerate even a small share of them would encroach too much on your space. Foliage plants also have a large share of his attention, and very complete collections of alocasias, caladiums, crotons, dracænas, nepenthes, etc., thrive most luxuriantly.

The collection of cypripediums is very extensive, over fifty species and varieties being in bloom at the time of our visit. It is gratifying to note that the proprietor of this group of plants takes great pleasure in allowing any one interested to see them, and is ever ready to impart what knowledge has been obtained in growing so many species with such remarkable success in a comparatively limited space and under very adverse conditions. А. Биммоск.

Milwaukee.

AMARYLLIS CULTURE BY MR. NEHRLING .-THE DEVELOPMENT OF BULBS WHICH COST FIVE DOLLARS EACH.

There is a small private greenhouse in this city which is doing its full share in the development of high art in horticulture. It is owned by Mr. Nehrling, a naturalist who has gained a more than local reputation. Mr. Nehrling's chief hobby is the amaryllis, although orchids have had their share of his attention. For years he has been quietly at work hybridizing and studying the amaryllis, simply for love of the flower. No attempt has been made to sell the product of his labor. Florists have told him they did not care for amaryllis because "there is no money in them." Surely no florist would say that after seeing the plants I saw last week and they were inferior to those which had bloomed earlier and had gone to seed. The original stock came from the noted firm of De Graff Bros., of Leyden, Holland. Mr. Nehrling's endeavor has been to produce varieties of greater substance but the colors have also greatly improved. The different seed pods are carefully tagged recording all particulars of their growth. There are numerous batches of seedlings of various ages, one lot of which will bloom next season. It is difficult to judge their value. The original stock cost $5 a bulb, and he has spent years caring for them. It takes four years to produce a blooming bulb from seed. His conservatory became over crowded and several cases of bulbs have been sent to his place in Florida where they will be grown outside.

Binzell & Kellner have removed to temporary quarters on Chestnut street while the new building is being erected.

Garland Bros. display great skill and care in packing roses for the market.

Complaints about poor trade are not uncommon, but there are unmistakable evidences of evolutionary changes, and those who conduct their affairs as was common years ago do the most complain-

The Japan quince, which usually fails to bloom here, and the almonds are a mass of bloom this week. All vegetation is luxuriant this season, and records show that late, cool springs always bring forth the more gratifying results.

Grand Rapids.

MICHIGAN FLORISTS PROPOSE VISITING THE CHICAGO CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW, -NEWSY JOTTINGS OF MEN AND FLOWERS.

Trade has been fairly good this week, with an abundance of flowers of all kinds. Every florist is busy with plant trade. Prices range about the same as last year, with a prospect that everything in the plant line will be sold.

The Florists' Club met at the Eagle Hotel on Tuesday, May 24. On account of the busy season it was decided not to meet again until the first Tuesday in October. Those present were in favor of attending the Chicago chrysanthenium show in a body rather than to hold the annual picnic as heretofore.

Young stock of all kinds is looking well.

Carnations are all planted out in good

Crabb & Hunter are building a large carnation house and several violet houses. The Grand Rapids Floral Company expects to rebuild several houses this summer. Henry Smith is rebuilding several rose houses and has built a violet house 150 feet long and a carnation house 250 feet long. Jubilee and Murillo carnations have done well with him this year.

Crabb & Hunter have a fine show of Mayor Pingree, Flora Hill, Dazzle and several other carnations. Their new carnation, Irene, is looking well.

Hopp & Lemke have a good show of American Beauties. Their new carnation, Catherine Pantlind, has come to stay, as it is a pleasing color and lights up well at

The N. B. Stover Floral Company, of Grandville, expects to rebuild several of their carnation houses this summer. They report a very satisfactory trade so far this year.

F. A. Chapman has a sport from Daybreak of the Victor shade which he has been growing for several years.

Wenzel Cukierski, the city florist, has been promoted to be superintendent of He has worked hard to make the parks. He has worked hard to make the Grand Rapids parks what they are and is justly entitled to the position.

A committee of florists will meet with the secretary of the State Fair to arrange a premium list for their department in the exhibition to be held in September.

San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA FLORAL SOCIETY'S EXHIBIT WAS A FAILURE FINANCIALLY DESPITE THE UNUSUAL MERIT OF THE DISPLAYS. LIST OF THE AWARDS.

The following is the official list of awards at the exhibition of the California Floral Society held in Golden Gate hall, San Francisco, May 13, 14 and 15:

Best and largest collection of carnations, John II. Sievers.

Best and largest collection of pelargo-nium cut blooms, John H. Sievers.

Best and largest collection of ferns, John H. Sievers

Best display of greenhouse roses, John H. Sievers.

Second best display of greenhouse roses,

F. Pelicano & Co. Best display of flowering and foliage plants, John H. Sievers

Best and largest collection of pelargoniums, Geo. N. Tyler.

Best and largest collection of pansies, cut blooms, Geo. N. Tyler.

Floral designs, first premium, Frank Pelicano & Co.

Table decorations, first premium, Joseph II Leikens

Best display of foliage and ornamental plants, variety and grouping considered, Domoto Bros. & Co.

John II Sievers, as usual, took the lion's share of the premiums. This exhibit was tastefully arranged and included the following twelve varieties of carnations. the same that were exhibited at Chicago at the meeting of the American Carnation Society Dr. Tevis, Hannah Hobart, Grace Eunyon, Leshe Paul, Elsie Fergu sem Iris Miller, Maria Angela, Harriett Bradford, John Carbone, Sita Berniger. John Hinkel and Helen Dran. The last, a seedling from Albertina, is very fine three hundred blooms were exhibited and none of them were under two and three quarter inches in character, with stems from two to three feet in length. Hannah Hobart manother fine variety, the blooms exhibited were none of them under three inches in diameter and a great many of them were three and a half inches, with the same length of stem as the Helen Drau. I understand that six thousand plants of these twelve varieties have been sent to Albert M. Herr, Laneaster, Pa., for trial as commercial varieties and will be disseminated by him when the proper

In the center of the stage Mr. Sievers exhibited a vase of American Beauty oses with stems four and five feet long. He also displayed vases of Bride, Bridesmaid, Testout, Kaiserin, Meteor, Ulrich Brunner and Souvenir de Pres. Carnot. The background of his exhibit was arranged with palms and ferns, and in the foreground was a fine show of orchids, ferns, etc. In the forward center were cut pelargoniums. The exhibit on the whole was the finest ever seen in San Francisco.

Another display which attracted a great deal of attention was a floral design "the Maine," exhibited by Frank Pelicano & Co., whose show of green-house roses, while not so large as Sievers', was very fine.

Domoto Bros. & Co. displayed Japanese stock, ferns, eyeas, varieties of rhapis, maples, aspadistras, etc. The grouping was very artistic and received much favorable comment.

George N. Tyler won first premium on each of his entries, 100 varieties of pelargoniums and pansies grown from Vaughan's international mixture of seed.

But with all the fine displays of flowers and plants the show was a financial failurc, as the paid admissions did not equal the rent of the hall, let alone the premi-I think this will be the last floral exhibition for some time to come given by any of the floral societies in the towns adjacent to the bay of San Francisco. The Pacific coast public will not pay an admission fee to view a floral exhibit, no matter how fine it may be. I presume many of the eastern cities have gone through the same experience. G. N. T. through the same experience.

Asters.

Brown—"Has Mrs. Jones planted all those asters I sent her?" Jones-"I never aster."

SPRINGHIELD, MASS.—Schlosser & Andrews are making extensive repairs on their greenhouses.

JOLIET, LLL.-Emil Blum, of this city, and Miss Haerer, of Philadelphia, were married on May 11.

Covingtion, O —Dan Ruttle detected Ed. Berte in stealing flowers from his greenhouse. Berte was sent to jail.

OWATONNA, MINN.—S. S. Zeigler, of What Cheer, Iowa, has become field manager for the Owatonna Nursery Co.

CARLINABLE, LLL-Crum's Nurscry at Palmyra was almost entirely destroyed by a wind storm which swept Macoupin county on May 20,

NATION, MASS. William Montgomery, father of Alexander Montgomery, superintendent of E. M. Wood & Company's grounbouses, died on May 23, aged 72

BITUATIONS, WANTS, FOR SALE.

Advertisements under this bead will be inserted at the rate of 10 cents a line (seven words) each linear-tion i sach minst accompany order. Plant advs. not admitted under this head. Every pold aubscriber to the AMERICAN FLORIST for the year 19% is entitled to a five-line want adv. free to be used at any time during the year.

SHI ATION WANTED By young man of several cara experience as general helper. Best references

Offuation Wanted-By a good all-round gar-dener, English, married, no family; private place preferred. State wages. H. H. HUNT, Evanston, Ill.

SITUATION WANTED-By a practical fiorist, good propagator and designer; 25 years' experience. Can take charge. New England preferred. Andreas H, care American Florist SITUATION WANTED-By all-round florist on private or commercial place; married, good worker and total abstainer. Beat of references. Address A R W. Box 349, Stafford Springs, Conn.

SITUATION WANTED—By experienced florist, mar-or rice (no children), middle age: either private or commercial place; understand raising general ctock, greenhouse building and steam fitting. Address FLORIST, 5739 Esston Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

SITUATION WANTED—as foreman in large cut flower growing catablishment by a first-class grower of roses, carnations, etc; has been foreman in large places for past 10 years; 24 years experience. Best references. GROWER, care Am. Florist.

WANTED—To rent 15 00° to 20,000 feet of glass in good repair, near Chicage.
H. C. Blewitt, Des Plaines, Ill.

WANTED-Some 10x12 or 12x12 A double etrength, glass; also second band 4 in. cast iron pipe and fittings.

W. P. RANSON, Junction City, Kans.

WANTED-An energetic foreman, married, for large cut flower growing establishment; must be experienced.

METEOR, care Am. Floriat.

WANTED-First-class florists' wire design worker.
Steady work the year round Apply with refs.
HOLTON & HUNKEL CO., Box 103, Milwaukee, Wis.

WANTED AT ONCE—Florist, young man preferred, single, to grow roses, carnations, 'mums violets, wholesale only: state wages, with board, expected. MicHELL FLORAL CO., Grosse Isle, Mich.

WANTED-To rent or lease with privilege of pur-chase, greenhouses. 8 000 to 15,000 teet of glass. Must be in good repair and running order. Address with full particulars

W. R., care American Florist.

WANTED -A 20 or 25-horse power tubular boller, 236 or 3-in, tubes, front grates, everything complete and in good repair, ready to set up at occe. Must be cheap; will pay spot cash, E. C. NEWBURY, Mitchell, S. Dak.

WANTED-A GOOD second-hand boller in perfect creer for beating greenhouse by hot water under pressure of say 20 pounds; capacity equal to about 4000 lineal feet of I-in. plp. Address THOS. A. IVEY, 107 Colborne St., Brantford, Ont.

WANTED—A competent florist capable of taking charge of a small greenbouse. Must be cober and not atraid to work. State lowest wages till lat of October, when an increase of salary will be given.

W. H. Wittigm.

204 1st East St., Vicksburg, Miss.

FOR SALE CHEAP-Two Hitchings boilers. One No. 17, with corrugated fire box. In very good condition. W. T. Bell, Franklin, Pa

FOR SALE-A 10 H. P. hot water boller in A No. 1 condition. Only used two years. Price $60 on premises.

MRS H. C. BUCHELER, Oconomowo, Wis.

FOR SALE—Fine retail business with greenbouse, large stock plants, palms; or exchange, a bargain, have other business. Address it il, care American Florist.

FOR SALE-First-class retail stand, about 5000 feet of glass: new. Has never paid less than $1300 per year net. Will require $1000 cash, balance time at 6 per cept. Reason for selling, failing health. Address D.LINOIS, care American Florist.

POR SALE - Foor greenhouses, nearly new, splendid retail stand, near business center in residence district, on road to cemetery, payed street. Terms easy, Must retire on account of poor health.

A CLAUS, 563 N. 4th St., Springfield, Ill,

FOR SALE OR LEASE—A first-class oursery, to-cated near Frankford, Philadelphia, comprision 10 hothouses, 2½ story brick dwelling, stable, horses, wagons and all necessary implements. Lot 250x150 Must be sold owing to death of owner. For particulars call or address 1858 Buckins St. between Kensington and Frankford Aves , Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY.
A good all round Floreist, not affaild to work, on a commercial place, 6 houses: certoallons, violets and mains pricipally. Wages $20 per month and board; good home. Work be a temperate man.
MRS. H. C. BUCHELER, Oconomowoc, Wis.

CHICAGO LOTS FOR SALE.

One block from corner Lincoln avenue and Wellington street, a bunch of lots at $25 per front foot; sewer and water. Suitable for greenhouse purposes.

P. F. HAYNES & CO..
Telephone L. V. 247. 1004 Wellington St., Chicago.

It is good business policy to mention the

....AMERICAN FLORIST

when you write to an advertiser.

NOW READY!

FULLY REVISED TO DATE The_

American Florist Company's

S

WITH UPWARDS OF . W. W. W

3,000 NEW NAMFS

Florists, Nurserymen Seedsmen

SS OF SS

SS OF THE SS

UNITED STATES AND CANADA ARRANGED BOTH BY STATES AND & POST OFFICES AND ALL NAMES & A

ALPHABETICALLY

PRICE TWO DOLLARS.
IN FLEXIBLE LEATHER BINDING, THREE DOLLARS.

American Florist Company,

324 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A. &

WHOLESALE

Hunt's Flowers Go Everywhere

76 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

AND FLORISTS SUPPLIES. WIRE WORK 88 WABASHAVE CHICAGO.

E. C. AMLING

Wholesale Cut Flowers

51 Wabash Avenue,

W. S. HEFFRON, Mgr.

....CHICAGO.

A. G. PRINCE & CO.

AND FLORISTS' SUPPLIES.

Agents for the Hinsdale Rose Co. Special attention paid to shipping orders.

88 & 90 Wabash Avenue

Telephone Main 3208.

CHICAGO.

It is not much trouble to mention the AMERICAN FLORIST when corresponding with an advertiser.

S. B. WINTER.

(Successor to WINTER & GLOVER,)

21 Randolph St., Chicago.

PACKED RIGHT,

so they will reach you in just as good condition as they reach us.

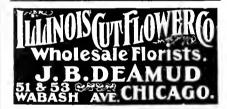

WIRE DESIGNS: A Full Line. Write us for our Illustrated Catalogue.

Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson, 45-47-49 Wabash Avenue, WE OFFER ALL VARIETIES CHICAGO SELECT ROSES and CARNATIONS We keep a large stock of all miscellaneous stock such as Narcissus, Lilies, Valley, Tulips, Lilac, Passonies, Sweet Peas, Pansies, Smilay, Asparagus, Ferns, etc., etc., Write for special prices on large orders. GET ORDERS IN EARLY FOR DECORATION DAY.

Wholesale Flower Markets

|   | CHICAGO, May 27.                             |
|---|----------------------------------------------|
| Н | loses, Beautiesper doz, .75@2.50             |
|   | " Brides 1.00@ 4.00                          |
|   | " Meteors, Bridesmalds, Kalserin, 1.00@ 4.00 |
|   | " Gontlers, Perles 1.00@ 3.00                |
| C | arnations, common                            |
|   | " fancy 2.00@ 3.00                           |
| N | larguerites                                  |
|   | arcissus Poeticus                            |
| ï | Isrrish, Callas 2.00@ 5.0                    |
| ĩ | Ally of the valley, ('ape Jasmine50@ 1.0     |
|   | ulips 1.00@ 4.0                              |
|   | weet peas 50@ 1.0                            |
|   | ladioli 6.00@ 8.0                            |
|   | dlantum                                      |
|   | mllax                                        |
| Ā | .sparagus40.00@75.0                          |
|   | 'analea                                      |
|   | euntesner dozen25@ .50                       |

...DO YOU KNOW....

He's a Wholesale Cut Flowers.

Send him a trial

DIS PLACE IS 37-39 Randolph St., Chicago.

88 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

Wholesale Dealers and Cut Flowers

CREENHOUSES: HINSDALE, ILL.

Wholesale Florist

Don't Forget that we are at 4 Washington St., Chicago.

Write for special quotations on large orders.

₩₩Wholesale Florists

III West 30th Street, NEW YORK. Consignments Solicited. Telephone, 260 38th St.

JAMES

Cood Money for your Flowers.

r Money 49 WEST 29TH ST., NE TELEPHONE 1675 38th St. NEW YORK.

N. Y. CUT FLOWER EXCHA

404-412 E. 34th St. Neer Feri Open for Cut Flower Sales at 6 o'ctock Every Morning......
DESIRABLE WALL SPACE TO RENT

FOR ADVERTISING.

JOHN DONALDSON, Secretary.

ROGERS PARK FLORAL CO..

Wholesale Growers of

51 WABASH AVENUE,

CHICAGO.

HEADQUARTERS FOR AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

600,000 FEET OF GLASS.

Beauties.

arb as on short notice with all lending varieties ittrations. We are headquarters for Fine American is a trial and convice yourself.

CARNATIONS FROM SAND.

|           | [5 r 100    | 15cm (000)   |              |               | Per 100    | Per 1000   |
|-----------|-------------|--------------|--------------|---------------|------------|------------|
| 3 r. 11   | 905 489     | 9.55 (m)     | S 11         |               | 181 LE.    | 赤7.54)     |
| 4 . (fitz | 1.5/1       | 12.50        | 1            |               | 1.00       | 7.50       |
| Fig. 10 c | 1 41        | 12.30        | Larra Andres |               | 1.00       | 7,50       |
| M. W.     | att of a to | cour choice. | Et and out   | 32 00 per 100 | and {La00] | a+g (1990) |

ROSE PLANTS

| Out of 21/2-inch pots. | Per 100 | Per 1000 |
|------------------------|---------|----------|
| American Beauty        | $5.00  | $45.00  |
| Meleor                 | 2.50    | 22.50    |
| Bride                  | 2.50    | 22.50    |
| Teslout                | 2.50    | 22.50    |
| Belle Siehrecht        | 2.50    | 22.50    |
| Perle                  | 2 50    | 22.50    |
| Pres. Carnot           | 2.50    | 22 50    |
| Kalserin.              | 2.50    | 22.50    |
| Bridesmaid             | 2.50    | 20.00    |
| La France              | 2.50    | 20 00    |

REINBERG BROS... 51 Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

M. A. HART. Commission dealer Cut Flowers.

NEW YORK CITY. THE BEST MARKET IN NEW YORK. 'Phone 1307 38th St.

TRAENDLY & SCHENCK, Wholesale Florists.

Control the stock of many celebrated growers and are prepared to quote prices on First Grade Cut Flowers. All varieties.

38 West 28th St., and Cut Flower Exchange, Tel. 961 18th Street. NEW YORK CITY.

THE NEW YORK CUT FLOWER CO.

119 and 121 West 23d Street, II2 and II4 West 24th Street,

Telephone 733-18th.

NEW YORK.

CONSIGNMENTS SOLICITED. Special Attention Given to Shipping Orders

Wholesale Flower Markets

| NEW YORK, May 25.                           |
|---------------------------------------------|
| Roses, Beautles, Hybrid 2 00@10 00          |
| " Bridesmaids, Testouts, Brides 50@ 1 00    |
| " Morgans, Meteors                          |
| Carnations                                  |
| Lily of the valley                          |
| Sweet peas, per 100 bunches 4.00@6.00       |
| Harrisii, Callas                            |
| Smllax                                      |
|                                             |
| Asparagus 40.00@50.00                       |
| Cattleyas 50 00                             |
| BOSTON, May 25                              |
|                                             |
| Roses. Beauties, Jacqs. Brunners 6.00@12.00 |
| Brides, Bridesmalds, Meteors 2 00@ 8.00     |
| Carnations, white                           |
| colored and fancy 2.50@ 4.00                |
| Llly of the valley 1.00@ 3.00               |
| Daffodils, Tulips, Spiræa stocks 2 00@ 3 00 |
| Harrish, Callas                             |
| Sweet peas                                  |
| Smilax                                      |
| Asparagus 50.00                             |
| ,                                           |
| PRILADELPHIA, May 25.                       |
| Roses, Beantles 2.00@ 25 00                 |
| " Brunners 6.00@ 12 00                      |
| " Jacqs                                     |
| Carnations                                  |
| extra                                       |
| Lily of the valley 3 00@ 4,00               |
| Harrisii                                    |
|                                             |
|                                             |
| Pæonies 4 00 @ 6.00                         |
| Smllax                                      |
|                                             |

John I. Raynor,

49 WEST 28th STREET.

NEW YORK.

SPECIAL EXTRA STOCK OF AM. BEAUTY, METEOR. BRIDESMAID, BRIDE.

Record Breaking Carnations ALL THE YEAR ROUND.

THOS. YOUNG, JR.

* * Wholesale Florist

43 West 28th Street, New York,

WALTER F. SHERIDAN. WHOLESALE

FLORIST.

39 West 28th Street, NEW YORK.

Roses shipped to all points. Price list on application.

ose Growers

Will find a good market and good returns for their stock wt....

JULIUS LANG'S 53 W. 30th Street, - NEW YORK.

Edward C. Horan. 34 W. 29th Street, NEW YORK.

WHOLESALE • FLORIST.

Careful Shipping to all parts of the country.
Price list on application.

WM. C. SMITH, Wholesale Florist.

40 So. 16th St., PHILADELPHIA.

Consignments Solicited. Special attention given to shipping orders

Long Distance Telephone 5008 A.

CUT FLOWER MARKET, 9 Chapman Place, 15 Province Street, BOSTON, MASS.

PROPRIETORS.

wers assigned separate space in our market. We guarantee payment for all Flowers sold. Sales reported weekly; payments monthly, or oftener if required.

THE NEW ENGLAND HEADQUARTERS FOR THE BEST GRADE OF FLOWERS AT ALL SEASONS OF THE YEAR.

J. K. ALLEN, Wholesale Florist.

EXTRA ROSES

57 West 28th Street,

Distance Telephone 382-38th St

NEW YORK.

GALVIN&CO. Wholesale Florists

AND DEALERS IN ALL

FLORISTS' SUPPLIES,

4 Ordway Place, BOSTON, MASS. Cut Flower Consignments Solicited. Best market.

GEORGE A. SUTHERLAND, Cut Flowers & Florists' Supplies WHOLESALE.

67 Bromfield St.,

BOSTON, MASS.

Wholesale Florists

ALWAYS ON HAND BRIDESMAIDS,

JOBBERS IN

Borticultural Auctioneers. 84 HAWLEY STREET. . BOSTON.

JOHN YOUNG. ROSES, CARNATIONS, VALLEY

and all other choice cut flower stock.

51 W. 28th Street. NEW YORK. Price list on application.

FRANK MILLANG, FLOWERS,

WHOLESALE COMMISSION,

408 E. 34th Street,

Cut Flower Exchange.

NEW YORK.

Notes and Comments.

It must have been a treat to listen to Professor Britton's intelligent and instructive address before the New York Florists' Club lately upon "Experiments with Chemical Fertilizers on Greenhouse Plants," taking into consideration the discussion which followed as reported under the head of New York notes in the American Phorist. When expressing my experiences in the use of peat moss and ashes in your columns recently. I had no idea that any systematic experiments had been carried on by so intelligent an experimenter as Professor Britton, with the same materials (the various essential plant foods added), at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station. It is quite a coincidence. It matters not whether Professor Britton is endorsed by "E. I." or whether "E. L." is endorsed by Professor Britton, the fact remains the same. I wish the feeling of comfort which I now experience could be conveyed to your readers, for 1 have noticed with a sensation akin to humor that the always flippant and frequently rampant critics so far have assumed no knowledge as to horticulture in any of its various branches, excepting a presumptuous dis-sertation upon Professor Britton's so-called misapprehension anent sleepy carnations some time ago. The practical gardener and equally practical commer-cial grower knows only too well that there are some varieties of carnations prone to produce sleepy flowers, which are actually caught napping on the plant before they are ready to cut. It is true, also, that some varieties are more sleepy than others and that the trouble in the same varieties of carnations is more aggravated some years than it is in others. The disease producing this unfortunate state of affairs in some of its phases has been called by some professors anthraenose. My impression is that more than one cause is at the bottom of the sleepy flower defect, for there appears to be variations of sleepy flowers, if I may be allowed to so classify the differences noticed in defective carnation blooms. Whether the fungus of the propagating bed has been classified as anthraenose, I cannot at this time recall, but I have often thought there is a close affinity between it and stem-rot and some sleepy carnations. It will take a professor to unrayel the trouble. I cannot.

ELGIN, ILLS.—George Souster has sixty acres of land at his establishment and devotes 18,000 square feet of glass to commercial floriculture. He reports an escellent spring trade.

WILLIAMS BAY, WIS = Frank T. Manahan, who met with great success as gardener for John M. Smyth, is now manaager of the Williams Bay Floral Company whose greenhouses are located upon the Peter Johnson place

Octoro, Iowa - Wm. Krueger has pur chased the half interest of W Owens in the Gould Nursery at Rolling Prairie, which has been planted to 19,000 new trees and will be run in connection with the Erneger Nursery

Asparagus

Strings 8 to 10 feet long,

50 CENTS.

W. H. ELLIOTT, Brighton, Mass.

Wholesale Flower Markets

| Cincinnati, May 26.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Roses, Beauties, select                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| " medium 8 (0/@12.50)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| " Brides, Bridesmalds                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| " Perles 2.00\(\alpha\) 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Carnations                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| fancy 1.50@ 2 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Marguerites, Sweet peas 25                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Lily of the valley                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Harrish 8 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Callas 6.00@ 8.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Stocks                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| 8m1(ax. 10.00 g 12.50                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Adjantum1.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Asparagus                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| and particular transfer and tra |
| St. Louis, May 26.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Roses, Beauties 2 00@20 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| " Brides, Bridesmaids 1.00@ 6.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Peries                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| " Kalserin                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Violets, California                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| double                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Lily of the valley 2.00@ 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Callas 5.00 is ti 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Smilax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| MILWAUKEE, May 26                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Roses, Beauties per dozen 1.50 @ 3.50                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| " Brides, Bridesmalds i 00@ ii 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| reflea 0 toos 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| meteors 1 to a 1 to                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Carnations 1.50@ 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Tulips. 3.00a 5.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Callas 8 00 at 10 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Parontes 4 00@ 5 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Magazine white file file                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| yellow                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Smilax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Adlantum                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| BUFFALO, May 26.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Roses, Benuties                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| " Brides, Bridesmalds, 4 0560 8 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| " Meteers                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Terres hiphens                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| " Kalserin 6.00@10.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Carnations, white and colored 1 50@ 2 50                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| " Daybreak and faneles 2.50@ 3.50                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Lily of the valley                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Harristi                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Talips 2 0000 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Paneles                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Sweet peas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| 8niliax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Adiantum 1 00@ 1.50                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| TO 100 ME 100                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Asparagus                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

You will benefit the American Floa thy mentioning it every time you write an advertiser in these columns

C. A. KUEHN. Wholesale Florist.

1122 PINE STREET.

ST. LOUIS. MO.

A complete line of Wire Designs.

C. W. WORSEESESES 2740 Olive Street, ST. LOUIS, MO. FLOWERS .... wholesale....

.....ROSES, and a foll line

Headquarters for the South West .....

ST. LOUIS CUT FLOWER CO. Wholesale Florists

E. H. MICHEL

1620 Olive St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

HOLTON & HUNKEL CO.

The Wisconsin Flower Exchange. Fresh Cut Flowers, Florists' Supplies Manufacturers of WIRE DESIGNS

Consignments Solicited.

457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE.

OF SEASONABLE FLOWERS IN STOCK.

F. KASTING WHOLESALE COMMISSION FLORIST....

495 Washington St., Buffalo, N. Y. Alse Onaler in Florists' Sopplies and Wire Designs

Pittsburg.

FLOWER SHOW QUESTION POSTPONED.-TRADE CONDITIONS.—LINCOLN NEFF AND HIS NEW DOWN-TOWN STORE.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was called for Monday night but the members were too busy, the bedding plant trade opening up this week with a rush, to attend in numbers sufficient to make a quorum; therefore the decision whether or not to hold a flower show in the fall was postponed until the meeting in June, when it is hoped there will be a full attendance.

The cut flower trade is quiet at present but the school commencement demand will make this branch of trade better for the next few weeks. Stock of all kinds is very plentiful and the quality is first-class Pæonies are coming in freely and are very cheap, $2 per 100 being the wholesale price.

Lincoln I. Neff reports business very fair, both at the Sixth and the Butler street stores and is very well satisfied with his experience so far in the downtown store on Sixth street, business there being fully up to his expectations, Mr. Neff attends personally at this location, Mrs. Neff having charge of the Butler street establishment.

WAUKEE, IOWA.-F. C. Carlton has been arrested at Kansas City for swindling J. Wragg & Sons by means of forged orders for nursery stock. Carlton received $150 in commissions upon orders on which Wragg & Sons lost $2,000 by reason of the non-acceptance of the shipments.

Greenhouse Building

Full information regarding building and heating Greenhouses is given in "GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION," by L. R. TAFT, Professor of Hortienture, Michigan Agricultural College.

PRICE, POSTPAID, $1.50.

"Greenhouse Management"

by the same author, treats of the forcing of flowers, fraits and vegetables under glass; also the propagation and care of house plants; insects, diseases and remedies. 400 pages. Just out.

PRICE, POSTPAID, $1.50.

(See review in American Florist, page 1173, April 30, 1898.)

L. R. TAFT,

Agricultural College (P. O.), - Michigan.

FIRST EXCURSION OF THE SEA-SON TO CLEVELAND

via Nickel Plate Road, June 3 to 6 inclusive. $11 35 for the round trip on certificate plan. Tickets good returning until June 13 inclu-Three through trains daily from Van sive. Buren Street Passenger Station, Chicago. For further information address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chi-Telephone Main 3389. (22) cago.

CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

meeting will be held in Cleveland, O., June 7 to 9 inclusive, account of which Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets at $11.35 for the round trip on certificate plan. Dates of sale June 3, 4, 5 and 6 inclusive. lickets good June 3, 4, 5 and 6 inclusive. lickets returning until and including June 13. further particulars address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389. (23)

Going, Going, Gone!

and it's your own fault if you don't get the bargains. Auction Sales of Plants every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 9 A. M. at . . . . .

McCarthy & Co.'S

you want to buy, send for Catalogues. & you want to sell, write for terms. & & &

IT PAYS!

is his name and he draws the crowd. Go and see him—and hear him—at 60 Vesey Street

NEW YORK CITY.

You will run up against a lot of your brother florists and you will find plenty of stock there that you can buy and make money on, thus combining business and pleasure, and you will resolve to go

> Every Tuesday and Friday while the Plant Auctions Last ....

SIGN OF THE RED FLAG.

Your Spring Plant Trade

will come easier, and be more profitable if solicited in the nice way you can do such things by means of

LONG'S

Samples for 20 ets. in stamps.

DAN'L B. LONG, Publisher BUFFALO.

EXCURSION TO CLEVELAND.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets from Chicago to Cleveland and return at a fare and one third for the round trip on certificate plan, good going June 3, 4, 5 and 6, and good returning until June 13, inclusive, on occasion of the annual meeting of the Congregational Home Missionary Society congregational Home Missionary Society in that city. This rate will be $11.35 for the round trip, which is somewhat lower than via other lines. Those desiring space in sleeping cars should make early application in order to secure the best accommodations.

Any further information cheerfully given by addressing J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389. (21)

TELEGRAPH CODE

SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

$2.00, In either stiff or flexible cover. ADI RESS ORDERS TO

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

For Insurance against damage by hail, Address

JOHN G ESLER. Sec'v. F. H. A., Saddle River. N. J.

AN ENCRAVING

CHICAGO

IS A CUARANTEE OF SATISFACTORY QUALITY....

Manz makes illustrations for this paper.

THE Regan Printing House NURSERY SEED FLORISTS

87-91 Plymouth Place. ***CHICAGO***

A LL Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists wish-ing to do business with Europe should send for the

"Horticultural Advertiser"

This is the British Trade Paper, being read weekly by all Horticultural traders; it is also taken by over 1000 of the best Continental houses. Address over 1000 of the best Continental houses. Address EDITORS OF THE "H. A."
Chilwell Nurseries. - Notts, England.

...THE...

"Lyon=Horticole"

is an interesting review of French horticulture, Issued semi-monthly. 20 8-vo. pages illustrated. Subscriptions to the United States, 1 year, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00. Address

DIRECTEUR LYON-HORTICOLE, Lyon-Villeurbanne, France.

FLORISTS' MUTUAL

Application Blanks and Prospectus Ready....

Write now. Delays are dangerous.

W. J. VESEY, Sec'y, - Ft. Wayne, Ind. THE NATIONAL

Florists Board of Trade

C. S. LODER, Sec'y, 271 Broadway, New York.

THE WABASH R. R. COMPANY

The Short and Quick Line between the East and West connecting Buffalo, Detroit and Toledo with Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaba.

The Wabash is the Only Line running sleeping cars and chair cars (free) between Buffalo and St. Louis and Kansas City.

Through sleeping cars between New York and Boston and St. Louis and Chicago ran every day.

For farther information apply to the nearest Railroad Ticket Agent, or to

H. B. McCLELLAN, G. E. A.,

387 Broadway, New York City,

J. D. McBEATH, N. E. P. A., 6 State Streel, Boston, Mass.

C. S. CRANE, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Aul., St. Louis, Mo.

American Florist Company's ..

DIRECTORY of Florists, Nurmen of the United States and Canada. Price Two Dollars. In Flexible Leather Binding, Three Dollars.....

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY 324 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. IBVING ROUSE, Pres.: E. ALBERTSON Vice-Pres. GEORGE C SEAGER, Rochester, N. V., Sec'y and Treas

Legislation on Inspection of Nursery Stock.

To the careful observer the multitude of laws recently enacted against nursery pests seem designed especially for the opening of the public purse and the providing of "good lat jobs" for sundry layored citizens, rather than being earnest attempts to meet and overcome the serious dangers which threaten our nurseries and orchards.

The folly of the inspection idea as embodied in the laws recently enacted has been well shown in recent articles by Prof. Smith and others. The vital defect in nearly all these laws is their failure to put the burden where it should be, that is, on the man who ships the diseased or infested stock. They provide a severe penalty for shipments without certificates of inspection, but in many cases no penalty whatever is provided for the sale or shipment of diseased or infested stock.

Every reputable nurseryman is watching his stock with the utmost care and destroying or treating everything infested in the slightest degree, and will ship nothing which is not known to be absolutely free from San Jose scale. Experiments prove that fumigation with hydrocyanic gas will destroy all insect pests. This is a somewhat difficult process for growing stock but becomes a very simple one after the trees are dug. Every nurseryman, therefore, can readily and at small cost make absolutely certain that nothing which he is sending out is infested.

Let a severe penalty, therefore, be provided against the shipment or sale of infested stock and give the buyer, as well as the state, the right of action for recovery of the penalty. Provide for the immediate quarantine and thorough treatment of nurseries in which any stock is infested and for the destruction of the stock, when so badly infested as to be necessary. These provisions will call a halt on the careless and unscrupulous dealer who is really the only one to be feared.

W. X. R.

Nashville, Tenn.

The Southern Memorial Day has come and gone with little or no difference to the florist The date observed here was May 19, when Confederate graves were decorated. There is still to be another Memorial Day, the 30th inst., for the Federal dead

The school commencement season is upon us and has given quite an activity in floral circles. The basket business, which in former years was such a bonanza to the florist, has been almost entirely done away with, bouquets being used in their place.

Cape passing from the south is now in the market and is quite popular for com-mencements. The quality of roses, Bride and Budesmood is very good for this season. The weather has been very warm and the sun secrebes the leaves, the figuring see e of the stack. There are ctes good Benuties till in the market after good Renuties till in the market and there is a very good call for them. One torist to still a few Harrisii likes. In the sport cheenent decorations hydrapped are being effectively used. Sweet peas to coming in abundantly and need with reach, sale.

A good rougher week broke the drougth which had pressed for some time and has given a good start to field plants. Funeral work was plentiful during the past week, and several times there was unite a rush.

M. C. Dorris. quite a rush.

Armstrong's

Everblooming

Tuberose & &

A NEW departure in Tuberose growth.

Flower hearing buds continue to form around the old flower stock indefinitely.
Flowers greatly superior to those of all other single Tuberoses. Awarded Certificate of Merit by the S. A. F. a Providence last August, and the Shaw Gold Medal at St. Louis in November.

For Prices and Particulars
...Address...

LUTHER ARMSTRONG,
3720 Olive St., ST. LOUIS MO.

3720 Olive St., ST. LOUIS MO.

OUR SPECIALTIES

AZALEAS, ROSES, RHODODENDRONS

New and rare hardy plants for forcing. Novelites in Ferns (raised by the largest London grower). The newest and best varieties of roses; it P. and Tea scented. from a French raiser. Write us and ask for quotations. We import direct to Boston to meet the demand from Canada and New England States.

F. Brunton & Co.

IMPORTERS AND EMPORTERS OF NEW AND RARE PLANTS.

136 Boylston Street, - BOSTON, MASS.

HARDY

Herbaceous Perennials

THE MOST COMPLETE STOCK IN AMERICA. PÆONIES, PHLOX, IRIS, DELPHINIUMS, ETC., ETC.

JACOB W. MANNING,
The Reading Nursery, READING, MASS.

ESTABLISHED 1854.

Assorted in 25 Varieties.

My selection $50 per 1000. Descriptive entalogue and price lists for the trade.

SAMUEL C. MOON,

Bucks Co., PA. MORRISVILLE, -

Florists' Stock for Bedding

Alternauthera Coleus, Geraniums, Pansics, Daistes, Verbenas, Enchsias, Salvis, etc., etc., Write for prices, Florists when in Milwaukee are ineited to look over our stock

ARCHIE MIDDLEMASS, 1010 Forest Home Ave., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

EVERGREENS, Etc.

20,000 American Arbor Vitas, 2 to 8 feet specimens and hedging plants.
5,000 Pyramidal Arbor Vitas, 2 to 4 feet.
20,000 Compacta, Globe and other dwarf Arbor Vitas, 31,000 Nordman's Silver Fir, 1 to 2½ feet.
2,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
5,000 Hembock Spruce, 1 to 4 feet.
10,000 Norway Spruce, 3 to 8 feet.
10,000 Rethiosperas, Squarrosa, Plumosa, Plumosa aurea and other sorts, 1 to 5 feet.
5,000 Firsh Junipers, 1 to 2½ feet.
1,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
5,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
5,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
5,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
2,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
2,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
3,000 Unglish Holly, 1 to 4 feet.
3,000 Unglish lyy, strong plants, Prices low, Correspondence solicited.

THE WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

THE WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

IMPORTERS

JAPANESE PLANTS, BULBS, ETC.

At lowest prices. Small orders filled from experimental garden Columbia Road Dorchester, Mass. Wholesale catalogue, 1898, free to the trade.

JAPANESE NURSERY,

Office: 272 Boylston St.,

ROSTON, MASS.

TOKYO... NURSERIES CO.

Headquarters for Japan tilles Cycas Revoluta, Morning Glory, all kinds of Japanese plants, seeds etc., etc.
Large assortment algree assortment algree promptly executed.
Write for catalogue.

The Tokyo Nurseries Co. Komagome, Tokyo. (JAPAN)

Cable Address
"Nurseries" Tokyo.

36 First Prizes out of 39 entries in 1896 and 1897. Peacock's Prize Winning Dahlias

Send for 1898 illustrated wholesale cata-ogue before placing orders elsewhere.

W. P. PEACOCK, - Atco, N. J.

Clematis Large Howering, strong young plants of the following leading sorts....

Jackmann, Henryli, Duchess, Ramona, Mmc. Bullard, Princess, Mmc. Ed. Andre, Superba, Just right for potting or planting up for next Fal-and Spring sales. $1.00 per doz., $8.00 per 100...

F. A. BALLER, Bloomington, III.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST'S COLOR CHART

ls now accepted as the standard in preparing color descriptions by many foreign houses as well as in America.

PRICE 15 CENTS POSTPAID.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 322 Oearburn St. Chicago

A LIVE AND RELIABLE CORRESPONDENT

WANTED in every live city in the world. We enable you to deliver flowers by telegraph. A profitable convenience. For particulars, write

C. B. WHITNALL,

438 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS

Helpful Reminders.

Secure yourself now against want for future necessities. All plants which you require for fall and winter propagation should be set aside, most of them in the garden. You can probably arrange with customers to allow them $1 for a bed of some special variety and in this way provide much of your fall stock without filling your own garden. This method is economical for you and your customer is economical for you and your customer is pleased to save a dollar, but have it understood now.

You should have a trial ground, no matter how small, in which to plant new varieties, or old ones with which you are not acquainted. You must keep posted. Almost every one relies on variegated vincas for trailing vines. Young stock should be planted out now, but try honey-suckles for variety. The variegated honeysuckle, Aurea reticulata, is beautiful and you can get strong roots, nursery grown, for 7 or 8 cents each. Bring into warmth March 1 and you should have a great show by May or June. Save your lobelias, ageratum, white geraniums and centaureas to border scarlet geranium beds with white and blue. You will be asked for some vine that will grow quick and act as a screen. To produce what is wanted with a hardy vine or trailing shrub requires a two or three years' growth, but your customer is impatient and I advise setting out the proper plant at once, providing trellis, and supplying a cobea or two that will answer for this season while the other plant is becoming established. This is the only way of getting along with some customers and is not a bad method.

Always charge 35 cents an hour for job-bing around. You cannot afford to do work poorly and you cannot do it thoroughly at your own expense. Make this a rule and you will increase your trade. You must do your work well, and be careful to give sound advice. A gardener's stock to-day is largely his brains and ability, just as it is with a doctor or lawyer.

C. B. W.

NEW CROP arriving daily, $150 per 1000. Discount to wholesale jobbers. Prince's Plne. 6c per lb. Headquarters for Galax Leaves. Laurel factooning, 4 to 8c per yd. Laurel and Prince's Plne Wreaths for Decoration Day, made to order. Fine green Moss to bibs, $100; in sacks, $5c. Our goods are always the best to be obtained for the money. Prompt attention to all orders. Sead in your orders now for Ferns for Decoration Day and you will be sure to have them.

Crowl Fern Co.

BOSTON, MASS.

You Seen Our Agent? A Complete

Catalogue for Florists. Send for One.

ELLIS & POLLWORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.

John Conley & Son,

Manufacturers of

2 AND 4 DOMINICK STREET,

New York.

BRILLIANT GREEN AND BRONZE

GALAX LEAVES.

For Decorating and all Florists' Designs. CHAS. H. RICKSECKER, Linville, Mitchell Co., N. C.  «Մարտանիան արտանան անդարան անձան անձա I SE AN ALLE AL LE ALLE
AS LEADERS

IN ALL THINGS

We Lead the Early Closing Movement and take this means to inform our many & &

PATRONS AND FRIENDS

that from June 1st until September 1st our store will close at 5 p. m. on week-days, 1 p. m. on Saturdays, and can still execute all orders as carefully and speedily as here-tofore. Yours respectfully,

M. RICE & CO.

IMPORTERS AND MANUFACTURERS OF FLORISTS' SUPPLIES.....

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

We Don't Quit Work

BECAUSE WE HAVE YOU ALL SUPPLIED WITH DECORATION DAY GOODS.....

We are now ready for June with its weddings, school graduations and college commencements. To the wide-awake, "get there" florist this is one of the most profitable months of the year.

You need fresh baskets, in fashionable designs and modern effects. These we are now opening in new materials and combinations. There is money in these goods at the prices we shall quote you.

Consignments of New Cape Flowers just received. Ribbon letters, Inscriptions, Cycas Leaves, Cycas Wreaths, Doves and Sheaves.

A Big Assortment. Send for Catalogue.

BAYERSDORFER & CO.,

50-52-54-56 North Fourth St.,

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SMALL GREEN

For use with.... VIOLETS

Work up beauutiflly. Stiff, wiry stems. Are all the rage.

Box of 5000, $5.00. Less quantity at $1.25 per 1000. ....ADDRESS....

HARLAN P. KELSEY, 1150 Tremont Bldg.,

quet green, Moss (sphagnum green), Laurel Roping, Xmas es; everything in the green line ays in stock at

H. E. HARTFORD'S, 18 Chapman Place. BOSTON.

Boston

This wooden box nicely stained and varnished, t8x30x12 made in two sections, one for each size letter, given away with first order of 500 letters.

Block Letters, 1½ or 2-inch size, per 100, $2.00. Script Letters, $4 Fastener with each letter or word. Tiget by leading florists everywhere and for sale by all wholesale florists and supply dealers.

N. F. McCARTHY, Treas. and Manager, 84 Hawley St., BOSTON, MASS.

Mention American Florist.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION. JEROME B. RICE, Pres.: E. B. CLARK, 1st Vice res.: S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec.y

August Rhotert, of New York, is making a western trip.

LIMA BEANS for contract show even more advance in price than the common garden varieties.

CHAS, F. MUTH, seedsman, of Cineinnati, and prominent there for twenty-five years, died last week.

RECENT advices from the blue grass region of Kentucky indicate that the new crop will probably be from 25% to 40% less than last season.

The seed tests to be made by the United States Department of Agriculture after July 1, are likely to become of serious interest to the trade.

Visited Chicago: W. J. Langbridge, Harry II. Hammond, who will locate at Bay City, Mich.; A. J. Joiner, of the Boston house of Jos. Breek & Sons' Corpora-

THE American Seed Trade Association will hold its sixteenth annual meeting at Old Point Comfort, Va., beginning Tuesday, June 14. A good attendance is expected. Full particulars as to routes, etc., can be had on application to Secretary S F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn. A rate is made from New York City of $13 for the round trip, with a thirty day limit. Western members not going via New York are recommended to use the Clesapeke & Ohio R. R.

Buffalo.

TRADE QUIET .- A CLUB MEETING AT CORFU ADOPTS THE SCHEDULE FOR THE CHRYS-ANTHEMUM SHOW .-- NOTES OF FLOWERS AND PEOPLE.

Trade was quiet during the past week while flowers were plentiful, roses on Saturday being almost a glut at the wholesale houses.

The florists went to Corfu Thursday, had a fine time and transacted some important business. On arrival Wm. Scott had dinner for all at the dining rooms of Mr. Taylor, after which the guests jour-neyed to the greenhouses of T. A. Webb. Many were surprised at the extent of his glass and complimented him on the gass and complimented him on the appearance of his place. The party was then taken to Mr. Scott's greenhouses and were shown the Genesee, Pingree and Jubilee. The Genesee were grand, and he may well feel proud of his stock. The meeting was then called to order by President State. dent Scott. Those present were D. B. Long, W. T. Kasting, S. A. Anderson, Wm. Legg, P. Scott, A. Scott, W. A. Adams, S. J. Rebstock, A. C. Wasson, W. W. Bench, L. L. Cook and our genial friend George Lancourt of Wilkesbarre. The club adopted with a few amendments the schedule of the chrysanthemum show as repeated by the committee. Other business of minor importance was dispatched before the meeting adjourned.

The show made in the different stores last week was a credit to all and showed plannly that new times large windows and good stool will be the only things seen in Buffalo from now on.

American Beautics are not as good as they were a week ago. Tally of the valley and sweet peas are in large supply. Mr. and Mrs. George, Larrouit, of Wilkesbarre, were here for several days last week. Mr. Kasting gave them a drive around the city and out to see Prof. Cowell at South Park.

Lawn Mowings.

In reply to your correspondent "R. U.," it is rarely necessary to use a gathering box on lawn mowers before the middle of August and during September and October, when the reduced sun power and heavy dews prevent the mowings from withering promptly. At those times the grass is apt to lie around in tufts all over the lawns and prove decidedly slovenly in appearance. On small lawns the rake may be used, but it is not a satisfactory tool, because it pulls over the coarse grasses, and gives the whole surface the appearance of a horse whose coat has been curried the wrong way.

Trenton, N. J. James MacPherson.

For a good clean lawn, healthy well grown grass is a necessity, and it is fair to presume that such treatment is sought which will maintain the quality. It is a common practice to sow oats with grass seed in making a new lawn, but it is best to give all the light and nutriment possible to the young seedlings and not oblige them to crowd their way between leaves that are not desirable. What is true of weeds or grain is equally true of grass where strewn over the growing plants. All other necessary conditions provided, remove the clippings as early as possible; but many lawns are benefited by allowing the elippings to remain, and in such eases it seems to be the least of two evils. I think this answers the question as explicitly as it has been put, but will extend reasoning further if desired.

TO IMPORTERS!

HAERENS BROS. From SOMERGEM near Ghent, Belgium

SPECIAL Growers and Exporters of Azaleas, Palms, Arancarias and other decorative plants, take pleasure to inform you that their Mr. Aug. HAERENS is now on his annual visit through the United States. The stock he offers is mmense, of best quality and at most reasonable prices. Their New Azaleas will be the lavorites of the future. Write for price list and special offer.

AUGUST HAERENS CART OF ... 66 Beaver St., New York City.

CLUCAS & BODDINGTON CO.

Importere and Exportere of

Seeds, Bulbs & Plants,

501 TO 503 W. 13TH ST., NEW YORK CITY

Send for quotations on all Florists' Bulb Stock.

BEST OF ALL' TOMATO "ENGLISH" MELONS

FLOWER SEEDS FOR FLORISTS
Catalogues on application.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Merchants and Growers, HII Chambers St., Ne.W. YORK, N. V.

SEEDS LAWN GRASS $12.00 per 100 lbs.

J. CHAS. MCCULLOUGH, SEEDSMAN, Second & Walnut Sts., Cincinnati, O. Sense for thostrated Catalogues.

"A good ad, is like the kiss of the sun that brings the daisies above the ground,"-Marco Morrost.

There's as much truth as poetry in the above quotation, and I trust there's more truth than poetry in the advertising of Yours truly.

G. C. WATSON.

I try to make my ads. good—that is: ruthful and attractive, and I find the response abundant and sure. My advertising pays me well because my interest in my customers does not begin and end with, "please remit." If my goods don't pay my customers to handle, I would rather not sell them. I want no one-sided trading sell them. I want no one-sided trading.

My Bid for Bulb Orders:

LONGIFLORUM PURE STOCK . SOUND AND WELL RIPENED.

Let's see how many "daisies" this one will start!

I have 3 sizes Japan Longiflorum-5 to 7, 7 to 9, and 9 to 10 inches, but as the large size is in short supply, I can book same only when some of the other two are taken, and I advise early orders, as there is a run on the Japan Stock this year. Delivery September 25th to October 15th, 1898. Prices guaranteed. will be pleased to have a list of your wants in this item; also in Harrisii, Romans. Paper Whites, Dutch Bulbs, Valley, etc. Let me hear from you. All "daisies," large or small, receive the same careful attention. Address all communications to Juniper and Walnut Sts, Philadelphia, Pa.

G. C. WATSON.

Seed Stores and Flower Stores. can profitably bandle our ODORLLSS PLANT FOOD. Write for the strumonal leaflet and free sample. We furnish Pure Bone Meat for florists use, tourranteed analysis. Write for sample and prices. Write for sample and prices. THI WAIKER FERTILIZER CO.

∰ Clifton Springe, N. Y. ~ක්කුක්කරටටටමන්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්ක්

BURPEE'S SEEDS PHILADELPHIA.

Wholesale Price List for Florists and Market Gardeners. *********

IT DE LOGICE BUSINESS POLLY TO MENTION MERICAN FROMIST WHEN YOU WHITE TO

DECORATION FLOWERS

FLORISTS HAVING A SUR-PLUS OF FLOWERS 0F ANY KIND CONSIGN TO US.

In Abundance!

All leading varieties of Roses, Carnations, Paeonies, Lilies, Sweet Peas, Tulips, Lilac, Valley, Daisies, Gladioli, Mignonette, Narcissus, Pansies, Asparagus, Smilax, Ferns, Etc., Etc. &

GIVE US YOUR ORDERS EARLY AS POSSIBLE

VAUGHAN, MCKELLAR & WINTERSON,

45=47=49 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

RAFFIA BEST QUALITY. LONG MADAGASCAR Notwithstanding the higher market on this item 1 am still offering at the old figure so long as present stock lasts

In bale lots (about 225 lbs.) at 8c 100 lbs. or over at. 9c 50 lbs. or over at. 10c 25 lbs. or over at. 11c 10 lbs. or over at. 12c Less than 10 lbs. at 15c per lb., f. o. b. Phila.; net terms and subject unsold on receipt of order.

This exceptional opportunity for buying a supply of fine quality at a low rate should not be neglected. All commissions, large or small, will receive the same careful attention.

Grafting Wax

ceive the same careful attention.

Grafting Wax

Irowbridge's Celebraled Grafting
Wax, the genuine article, 1 lb. bars
at 19c; ½ lb. bars at 29c; ½ lb. bars
at 21c; per pound. Rebates: 10 lb.
lots, 5 per cent; 25 lb. lots, 10 per cent; 50 lb. lots, 15 per cent; 100 lb.
lots, 20 per cent. Address all orders
and correspondence to Juniper and
Walnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

G. C. Watson,

Seedsman.

Of Florists, Nurserymen and Seedsmen or United States and Canada arranged both by States and Post Offices and All Names ALPHABETICALLY.

FULLY REVISED TO DATE WITH UPWARDS OF

3,000 New Names

Price Two Dollars. In Flexible Leather Binding, Three Dollars.

American Florist Company 324 Dearborn Street,

Chicago, III., U. S. A.

We are growers and sell at growers' prices.

Stock guaranteed The White Japan Lotus The finest of all Nelumbaums. Flow-ring tubers, 90e each; $8.00 per doz.

AMERICAN LOTUS. $20.00 per 100.

NYMPILEA WARLIVCE E CHROMATELLA 25.00 per 100.

NYMPILEA ODORATA 8.00 per 100.

NYMPILEA ODORATA ROSEA 25.00 per 100.

All other stock in proportion. We have every Water Lily and Aquatic worth growing. Catalogue free.

GEO. B. MOULDER, Smith's Grove, Ky.

Dutch

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, CROCUS, ETC. RUDOLPH VAN TIL & CO.,

Hillegom, Holland. American Representative

L. C. BOBBINK, Rutherford, N. J.

ASK FOR CATALOGUE. Mention American Florist.

BULBS FOR FLORISTS..

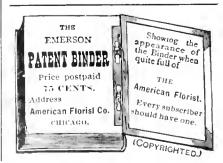

VAN ZANTEN BROTHERS. HILLEGOM. HOLLAND.

CHINESE PRIMROSE

...SEED...

Greatly improved and well-known to be of extra fine strains. Packets put up specially for Florists, of best single and double varieties. 400 seeds $100. Plants ready in August Cineraria seed of large flowering dwarf varieties in choicest mixture, pkt, 25c; 6 pkts., $100. Primula Obconica, pkt. 1000 seeds, &c. Primula floribunda, fine yellow, pkt, 25c.

IOHN F. RUPP. -Shiremanstown, Pa.

Hail Notes.

Hail losses are reported from Park Ridge, Ill.: Mechanicsburg, Pa.; Abilene. Kan.: Franklintown, Md.: lowa City, Iowa: Madison, Wis.: Oconomowoc. Wis.: Rockford, Ill.: Muncie, Ind.: Marshalltown, Iowa, and Colorado Springs, Colorado. The Florists' Hail Association will be called upon pay over $7,000 to policy holders in these cities.

TORONTO, ONT. - The Public School Board has let the contract for its spring supply of bedding plants to Miller & Son. of Bracondale, for $205, or about two cents per plant.

From 2-inch pots, good stuff, per 100, $5.00......

CANNAS A good line.

CANNAS A good line.

Ficus Elastica, true, large leaf variety, 6 inch nots, 20 inches high or 50c each.

Crimson Rambler Roses, extra fine, bushy plants, in 4-inch pots, will soon bloom, per dozen, 32,00; per 100, 515,00.

Cycas Revoluta, dormant stems, size from 3 to 10 lbs, 25 ib ots 12c lb., 100 lb, lots, $10.

Clothide Soupert, the great pot rose, our stock is A No. 1, 2-in, or $3,00; 2c-in, or $4,00; 3-in, or $6,00; 2c-in, pot phants, in named varieties, per 100, $5,00.

Pelarooniums Mme, Thibaut, Mrs. Robt, Sandiford.

Pelargoniums Mme. Ihibaut, Mrs. Robt. Sandiford. Edward Perkins and Dorothy, strong 3-inch stock per doz. $1.50; per 100, $12.00. For Carnations, Chrysanthemums, send us your list; we have ad kinds.

H. P. Roses, dormant 2 year extra fine stock (a. $12.00 per 100. Clematis, Ampelopsis Veitchi, Hollyhocks, Propines Hydrangeas P. G., etc., we have in large quantities; write us for prices.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY SURPLUS BARGAINS

Tuberoses... Dwarf Excelsior Pearl, strictly first size. $ .85 Second size.

All bloomers, 3000 for $9.00.

Tall Double first size.

Variegated Leaved first size. 3.50 1.00 10.00

Also a good stock of Caladium Esculentum, Begonias, Gladiolus, etc., at close prices ......

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

CHICAGO: Creenhouses: Western Springs, III. 84-86 Rendolph St.

large plants of Bougainvillea glabra (*) and glabra Sanderiana, these are in 8 to 12 inch pots and now in full flower, which will be cut this coming These plants can have all the soil shaken off and be shipped at proportionately low cost. Write for

THEO, F. BECKERT, GLENFIELD, PA.

We mail 7 plants of above for $1.00.

Orchids

LAGIR & MERREIL. - Summit, N. J.

Good Stock! Low Prices!

CANNAS Strong plants of Alphonse Boudale, Paul Marquant, Wm. Elliott Bisson, Sec. Stewart. Flamboyant. $4.00 per 100; $55.00 per 1000.

COLEUS Crimson Verschaffeltii, Golden Queen and Golden Bedder, $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.

Geraniums Double Gen. Grant and S. A. Nutt. 21,2-inch pots. $3.00 per 100; $28.00 per 100; extra good, 4-inch pots. $7.00 per 100; $65.00 per 100. Cobra Scandens, 4-inch pots . . . . . $6.00 per 100.

JOHN SCOTT,

KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES. BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Asparagus Sprengeri

50,000 Piants in 21<sub>2</sub>-inch pots, $5,00 per 100, express; 24 for $4,50 by mail. Specimens for 8-inch pots, $6,00 to $12,00....

A. Blanc & Co. PHILADELPHIA.

J. L. SCHILLER, NEW YORK CITY. 404 East 34th Street,

Rose Hill Nurseries

ARGAST Growers of Palms, Orchids, and tree above plants, berns.

SIEBRECHT & SON, New Rochelle, N. Y. New York Office, 409 Fifth Ave.

Crotons...

IN VARIETY

Rothschild. Hawkeri, Interruptum. Evansianum. Rubra Linenta, Andreanum, Aurea Maculatum and others, suitable for bedding. Fine plants in 3-meh pots, $2.00 per doz. New and rare varieties, 50 cents each.

Aurea Maculatum, extra fine plants in 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; $15 per 100; 3-inch pot plants. $2 per doz.; $12 per 100; thumb pots, $1 per doz.; $6 per 100.

Edwin Lonsdale,

Money Order Office, Station H. Phila.

Florist. CHESTNUT HILL. PHILA., PA.

FINE PAI

ARECA LUTESCENS

3 plants 5-in, pot 18 to 20-in, high, per 100, $40,00-3 plants, 10-in, pot, 48 to 50-in, high, each... 4.00 1 plant. 2 in, pot, 8 to 12-in, high, per 100, 5.00

COCOS WEDDELIANA

| 1 | plant, 4-in. |                        | .50  |
|---|--------------|------------------------|------|
| 1 | plant, 5-in. | pot, 24-in, high, each | . 75 |
| 1 | plant, 5-m.  | pot, 30-in. high, each | 1.00 |

KENTIA BELMOREANA

24. in., 3 leaves, 10 to 12-in, high, per 100... 3-in., 4 or 5 leaves, 15 to 18-in, high, per 100... 5-in., 4 to 6 leaves, 20 to 24-in, high, each.... All measurements from top of pot.

JOSEPH HEACOCK, WYNCOTE. Mention American Florist when writing.

STRONG STOCK TO POT ON NOW. JOHN H. LEY.

COOD HOPE. - WASHINGTON, D. C.

COOD HOPE, - WASHINCTON, D. C.

Offers clean well rooted plants as below:
Per 100.
Areca Lutescens, 2 ft. thick, 4-inch. $25.00
Orange Trees. 2 ft., full of green fruit, 5-in, pots. 25.00
Phoenix Reclinata, 4-inch pots. $5.00
Phemix Reclinata, 4-inch pots. $5.00
Phemix Reclinata, 2-inch pots. $5.00
Ferns, from flats, 8 good sorts, mailed 1.25
$10.00 per 1000 by express.
Per dozen.
Oreodoxa Regla, 5-inch, 3 in a pot, (Royal Paim)
3 to 4 feet high $8.00
Phemiclopolorium Sechellarum, 4-inch, nice plants
of this rare palm. $2.00
Lomaria globa, 4 inch. $1.00
Nephrolepis d. furcans, 5-inch, extra large, $5.00
Pandanus l'fills, 5-inch, extra large, $4.00
Well packed. Cash with order.

Asparagus,

Sprengerii 85.00 per 100 Seedlings

American Rose Co., Washington, D. C.

CYCAS REVOLUTA. The true, long-leaved variety. Freshly imported, dormant stems. Run from 6 to 9 to 10 fbs. each. Note the price: 10c, per 10b, $8 per 100 fbs., $75 per 1000 fbs., $10 per 100 fbs., $75 per 1000 fbs., at 1000 rate; 500 fbs. at 1000 fbs. at 1000 rate; 500 fbs. at 1000 f

UNITED STATES EXOTIC NURSERIES

(Formerly Pitcher & Manda.) SH RT HILLS. N. J. Wholesale Caralogue Palms & Fernson application.

Now Ready

American Florist Company's DIREC-THE American Plotist Company's Insection of the United States and Canada arining d both by States and Post Offices and all names Alpinabetically. Fully revised to date with upwards of 3,000 New Names. Price § 00 in flexible leather binding, §3.00.

American Florist Company,

321 Dearhorn St., Chicago, Hi., U. S. A.

SPECIAL OFFER DREER'S ...OF...

We offer the following leading varieties, established plants, in 3 inch pot

|                                      | Ħ.   | 100.   |                                     | ft. | 100·   |  |
|--------------------------------------|------|--------|-------------------------------------|-----|--------|--|
| Alphonse Bouvier, crimson            | 5    | $4.00 | Florence Vaughan, spotted vellow    | 4   | $5 UH |  |
| Amie P. G. Pegeaux, pomegranate      | 31 2 | 6 00   | Geol. St. Hilaire (brouze), searlet | 41. | 4 00   |  |
| Beaule Poitevine, rich crimson       | 3    | 10 00  | J. C. Vaughan (bronze), vermillon   |     | 4 00   |  |
| Baron de Sandrans, light yellow.     | 315  | 4 00   | Mme. Crozy, scarlet, gilt edge      | 31. | 1 00   |  |
| Chas. Henderson, crimson             | 3 -  | 4 00   | Mme. Pichon, yellow striped         | 3   | 4 (10) |  |
| Comte Bouchaud, yellow spotted.      |      | 4.00   | Madagascar, spotted oebre           | 31  |        |  |
| Columbia, rich erimson               | 3    | 10 00  | Pres. Chandon, deep orange          | 31. | 4 00   |  |
| Deuil St. Greyv (bronze), orange red | 5    | 4 00   | Papa, fine cherry red.              | 3   | 1 00   |  |
| Egandale (bronze) cherry red         | 4    | 4 00   | Queen Charlotte, scarlet, gilt      |     | 1 007  |  |
| Explorateur Crampbel, ordinge        | 4    | 4 00   | edge                                | 3   | 5.00   |  |
| Furst Bismarck, intense crimson.     |      | 6.00   | Souv. d'Antoine Crozy, gilt edge.   |     | 6.00   |  |
|                                      |      |        |                                     |     |        |  |

We call special attention to the following "sets" of new varieties. They are all of great merit and should be tried by everyone interested in Cannas;

Select Set of Six New Cannas for 1898.

Goliath, the fluest crimson extant.
J. O. Eisele, vermilion searlet.
Furst Von Hohenlohe, the best yellow.
One each of the above six for $3.00.

Set of Eight Best Italian or Orchid Flowered Cannas.

This set is the "cream" of over 30 varieties introduced last year at $3.00 to $5.00 each. America, orange salmon, feathered and veined searlet, bronze foliage, 35c, each Allemania, light and dark salmon, golden markings, flowers immense size; 36c, each. Alrica, orange salmon, deepening to scarlet, rich bronze foliage; 30c, each. Asia, bright yellow with red spots in threat; 30c, each. Aphrodite, salmon, edged and feathered light yellow; 30c, each. La France, similar to America, hut with darker foliage; 30c, each. Pandora, salmon, marbled with searlet, bronze foliage; 30c, each. Give a yellow, with red dashes, very large flower; 50c, each. One each of the eight varieties, $2.00.

Set of Six Best of Crozy's Introduction - Depute Ravarin, rich garnet. Mme. Leon Leclerc, scarlet, tipped and edged gold. Jos. Combet, velvety cardinal. R. Pearson golden, dotted red. Mme Favrichon, carmine, with orange sheen. Sec Chabanne, rich salmon, distant shade, 35c, each, or the set of six varieties for $2.00. Full descriptions of the above found on pages 26 to 29 of our current Wholesale Catalogue.

HENRY A. DREER, 714 Ghestnut St., PHILADELPHIA

Kennicott Bros. Company

Wholesale Cut Flowers and Florists' Supplies 88 WABASH AVENUE, CHICAGO, ILL.

Long Distance 'Phone, Express 466.

We quote as follows for the week of May 23, 1898;

| P. AND D. AT COST.          | PRICE PERHUNDRED. |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------|
| Am. Beauties, medium        | 5 to 8                |
|  tancy, fair length       | 8 to 12               |
| " long stam                 | 15 to 25              |
| Metaors, extra select       | 4 to 6                |
| Brides, Maids, extra select | 4 to 6                |
| Parles, extra salact        | 3 to 5                |
| Roses, our selection        | 3.00                  |
| Carnations, extra select    | 2 to 3                |
| " good, avarage stock       | 1.50 to 2.00          |
| " Whita                     | 2 to 3                |
| Harrisii                    | 7 to 8                |
| Callas                      |                       |
| Valley                      | 2 to 4                |
| Cape Jessamine              | I to 2                |
| Narciasus                   | I to 1.50             |
| , " double                  | 2.00                  |
| Smilax                      | .15                   |
| Adiantum                    | .75 to 1.00           |
| Asperagus, per atring       | .40 to .50            |
| Bougainvilleas, par spray   |                       |
| Calax                       |                       |
| Common Farns2.50 per M      | .30                   |
| Common Ferns, 500 et M rate |                       |
| Marguerites, White          | .40 to .60            |
| Marguerites, Yellow         | .60 to .75            |
| Iris                        | 2 to 4                |
| Tulips                      | 2 to 5                |
| Pæonias, axtra quality      |                       |
| Pæonies, Com                | 3.00                  |
|                             |                       |

Above prices subject to change without notice. All flowers in season at lowest market rates. FLORISTS SUPPLIES and WIRE WORK a specialty. On WIRE GOODS we can discount of the OWN OR ANY OTHER LIST. Write for particulars. Store open week days until 6:30 p, n.; Sundays and holidays until noon only.

Respectfully yours,

KENNICOTT BROS. COMPANY

Please Mention The American Florist

Prices...

NOW READY FOR

FANCY FORCING STOCK

ALL BULBS

Ask for a copy. & & &

We average very early deliveries.

Vaughan's Seed Store

NEW YORK: 14 Barclay St. CHICAGO: 84 and 86 Randolph St.

To Seedsmen, Nurserymen, Florists, Landscape Gardeners and others:

The extensive collection of Foreign Grape Vines of our manager, Mr. John G. Gardner, has been transferred from Jobstown, N. J, to our Nurseries at Stoke-Pogis, Pa., and all orders can now be promptly filled by addressing the undersigned. Descriptive catalogue mailed on application. Those in the trade having wealthy clients, with hot or cold graperies, can pro-cure for them, from this collection, the latest and best acquisitions, as well as the standard sorts. On and after JUNE 15th the plants will be ready to ship in pots, well-established, and in first-class condition.

STOKE-POGIS NURSERIES. JUNIPER AND WALNUT PHILADELPHIA.

G. C. WATSON, General Agent.

Annex Paying Customers....

THE AMERICAN FLORIST 🧈 A Peerless Drummer. 🚜 🧀

Outdoor Propagation of Roses.

Will some one kindly tell me through your columns, the best way to propagate sees outdoors? S. J. Y.

In the extreme south many florists consider layering the most satisfactory method for outdoor propagation of roses, and in a climate where the rose makes such vigorous growth in a season this system certainly has much to recommend it. Where there is abundant growth suitable for layering it would be no difficult task to propagate and have ready for sale in a very short time any quantity of large salable plants. The southern florists salable plants. The southern florists usually layer directly into pots; they are plunged deep into the soil all around the plant that is to furnish the layers, as many pots as there are available shoots. When they are all in position (and full of soil) a stout stake is put down firmly outside of but close to each pot, the shoots are bent over, a slit is made on the under side directly above the pot, the part cut is pressed down into the pot, covered with soil, and pegged down to hold it secure; the operation is completed by tying the end of the shoot to the stake. It is not a very difficult feat and need not necessarily consume very much time, besides if the weather is at all favorable success is reasonably certain. In a short time the shoot will have thrown ont roots immediately above the cut and it can then be severed from the parent plant. The work is always done in the early fall, as soon as the wood is mature and climatic conditions are favorable. Cuttings of outdoor roses are sometimes rooted in a cold frame with just enough protection to keep off the strong sunshine, drying winds, and freezing cold. For the state of Georgia the early part of October would probably be the best season to put in the cuttings. This is a time honored mode of propagating, but for rooting hardy roses, either north or south, I would recommend in preference a hotbed and the summer months for the work. All that is required is a good deep frame facing north, plenty of stable manure, good sash and movable shade. Fill the frame with manure almost up to the glass and tread it thoroughly; cover with three inches of clean coarse sand; when the bottom heat registers 90 with a tendency downward put in cuttings, water thoroughly the first time, afterwards sprinkle and water as often as may be needed to preserve the foliage crisp and tresh Keep frame close until roots begin to form; a little air morning, and evening to carry of excessive moisture will be suthcient. Shade whenever sun shines, but at other times give full benefit of the light Cotton cloth stretched on a frame gives about the right amount of shade and it it is suspended some distance from the glass so as to allow a circulation of air between the two, it will help materially in keeping down the temperature. With good cuttings from fairly well matured wood and good attention, a frame of this kind will root from eighty to one hundred per cent, according to variety. After porting, the plants should have the same treatment as regards shade, light and air for a few days as recommended for the cuttings

FORT SIMPSON.

Limber, N. V. Grove P. Rawson is editing for the Advertiser a department of horticulture which is attracting wide attention among amateur florists. In his column Mr. Fawson gives practical advice upon the culture of plants

YOUNG

ROSES

PLANTS

ALL STOCK SENT OUT IS FIRST-CLASS IN EVERY RESPECT.

| From 21/2-inch Pots |        |          | Per 100 | Per 1000 |
|---------------------|--------|----------|---------|----------|
| AMERICAN BÉAUTIES,  | Rooted | Cuttings | $5.00  | $40.00  |
| BRIDES              |        |        | 3.00    | 25.00    |
| BRIDESMAID          | . 4    |          | 3.00    | 25.00    |
| METEOR              | * .    |          | 3.00    | 25.00    |
| KAISERIN            |        |          | 3.00    | 25.00    |
| PERLE               |        |          | 3.00    | 25.00    |
|                     |        |          |         |          |

TERMS CASH WITH ORDER.

J. A. BUDLONG, 37-39 Randolph Street, CHICAGO

40,000 FIRST QUALITY FORCING ROSES

Fully equal to those sent out the last six years, first-class and perfectly healthy in every respect. Only selected growth from flowering shoots used in propagating. Wooton, La France, American Beanty, President Carnot, 3-in. pots, $8 per 100; 4-in. pots, $12 per 100. Meteor, Kanserin, Sunset, Bon Silene, Mernet, Perle, Goutier, Bridesmaid, Belle Siebrecht, Mme. Haste, Niphetos, Bride, 3-in. pots, $7 per 100; 4-in. J. L. DILLON, Bloomsburg, Pa.

OWN ROOTS & DORMANT & & FIELD GROWN

IN COLD STORAGE IN CHICAGO.

No. 1, 2 to 4 feet, cut back to 2 feet Yellow Rambler (Aglaia) Hybrid Perpetuals,

Mosses, Hardy Climbers and Madam Plantier

These plants are very strong and well shaped. Prices on application. Address

W. F. HEIKES, Manager,

1308-1310 Unity Bldg., -CHICAGO, ILLS.

Do You Plant Beauties?

Not cullings, but clean, strong, well grown stock and guaranteed free from all disease.....

A. DONAGHUE.

108 S. 16th Street, OMAHA, NEB.

AMERICAN BEAUTY

Fine young plants, healthy and strong,  $2^{k_2}$ -inch pots, $8.00 per 100; $70.00 per 1000.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, Ith order. PHILADELPHIA, PA. Money Order Office, Station 11, Phila.

ROSES FOR WESTERN GROWERS

Benoties, Brides, Maids, Meteors, Wootfons and Perles, 20g. 3 and 1-in. Strong, clean, and Perles, 2%, 3 and 1-in. Strong, clean, healthy stock, cheap for cash, to clean up. If you want good stuff at prices to said write us for prices at once. Address...

J. N. KIDD, Florist, St. Joseph, Mo.

Rose Plants...

Line Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle, Sunset and Meteor,

2 - meh Rose pots ... $3.00 per 100, 3 meh pots standard . ... 5.00 per 100

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, FORT WAYNE, IND.

NOW READY! The American Florist Company's DIRECTORY of Florists, Seedsmen and Nurserymen of the United States and Canada Price $2.00 In Flexible Leither Binding, $3.00....

AMURICAN LUORIST COMPANY, .124 Dearborn St., Chicago, III.

<sup>୷</sup>ୡୡୡଌଌଌଌଌଌଌଌଌଌଌଌଌୡୡୡୡୡୡୡୡୡ

NEW PINK FORCING ROSE

Winner of 6 certificates, medal and silver cup. $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100. A fine stock of young chrysanthenums and car-nation. Send for trade list describing above in detail.

H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.

FROM 2 1-2 INCH POTS.

Strong, thrifty, well established plants. General price $4.00 per 100. Extra fine lot of Crimson Rambiers.

Jackson & Perkins Co. NEWARK, NEW YORK.

ROSES..

2-in, per 100 3-in, per 100 $...$5.00

Am. Beauties . . Perle . . . . . . . $2.75 4.50 Bridesmaid ... 2.75

MAPLEWOOD CUT FLOWER and PLANT CO. PLEASANT HILL, MO.

Memorial Rose

(Rosa Wichuriana)

Strong field-grown plants, $50, $75 and $100 per 1000

SAM'L C. MOON, MORRISVILLE, Bucks Co., PA.

2-YEAR-OLD ROSES

CARNATIONS, $2.50 per 100 from 20<sub>2</sub>-anch pots. Scott, Portin. Metiowan; also all young roses and general stock.

THE NATIONAL PLANT CO.

Do You Need Young Rose Stock

for planting, out of 3 in. pots — A dollar more on the hundred is nothing if you get better stock—Send size or $1 M in stamps for samples of what you want to

GEO. A. KUHL, .... PEKÍN, ILL.

The Omaha Convention.

Preparations are advancing smoothly and if the low rates of fare which are confidently expected should materialize, there is no reason why the Omaha meeting should not be the equal of any of its predecessors in interest and value. The local florists, although not primarily responsible for the selection of Omaha as the convention city, are fully aroused to the importance of the occasion and will not be found lacking in those hospitable qualities that characterize the profession in all places and at all times. They look forward with keen anticipation to the approaching visit of their fellows from other sections of the country and are prepared to give a good account of themselves as generous hosts. A bowling club has been formed and a challenge to the expert bowlers of other cities is about to be issued. Eleven of the Omaha florists have become members of the National Society since May 1.

The representatives of the executive committee of the S. A. F. found the ideal meeting place in the First Congregational Church, which has been selected as the headquarters of the society. The audience room is a beautiful place, spacious and luxuriantly furnished; parlors and reception rooms are connected with it, and the basement, 48x72 feet, will accommodate a moderate sized exhibition nicely. A rearentrance on the same grade as the basement gives convenient access for exhibits and there are plenty of suitable tables at the disposal of the society. The church is on the corner of 19th and Davenport streets, in one of the most attractive residence sections of the city and conveniently reached from all points.

Manufacturers and dealers in florists' requisites and equipments in the large eastern centers will make a great mis-take if they do not take full advantage of this opportunity to get into communication with a new clientage. Many florists will be present on this occasion who have never heretofore visited a tradeexhibition or had an opportunity to examine the latest devices and improvements in green-house appliances, and a valuable trade is bound to come to those who make the effort to open up this new and rapidly developing market for their goods. It is safe to assume that no previous convention has been favored with a more deeply interested and interesting local attendance than that of next August.

The matter of railroad rates is still under consideration and there is good reason to expect that in a few days it will be possible to announce the most favorable terms ever granted to the S. A. F. for its convention. The railroad officials, as well as the managers of the great Trans-Mississippi Exposition understand that upon a liberal policy in the matter of transportation will depend much of the success of the undertaking, and they will, without doubt, see that everything is done that can possibly be done to insure a large attendance.

W. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Meadville, Pa.

August Krueger has enlarged and remodeled his down-town flower store, and contemplates making extensive additions and alterations about his greenhouses, while a handsome and spacious conservatory will be added to his store.

Henry Krueger, who succeeded Ehrgott Bros. at Conneaut, O., reports a good trade all along the line. Two green-houses for miscellaneous stock will be built during the coming summer.

Waterbury, Conn.

Improvements of one sort or another seem to be the order of the day and, such being the case, it goes without saving that business is brisk.

Alex. Dallas has again touched up his store, the improvement consisting of a handsome ice box with mirrored walls, and the introduction of electric lights, both in his store and in the adjoining conservatories.

Mr. Dallas' already extensive plant will soon be enlarged by two additional rose houses, one of which will be 21x150 and the other one 21x50. I hardly need add that up-to-date methods will be followed. A feature to be introduced is solid stone beds instead of the usual benches. These beds instead of the usual benches. will be constructed in a way to insure perfect drainage. A sight well worthy of seeing is Mr. Dallas' specimen Arecalutes-cens, Pandanus utilis and Pandanus Veitchii. The latter two are especially attractive, being decidedly the finest specimens of their kind I have yet seen, veritable giants with not a flaw or blemish to be found on any of the leaves. His American Beauties, Brides and Bridesmaids are

R. S. Rasmussen reports trade good. He is cutting some fine carnations and roses, for which he finds a ready demand. It is likely that Mr. Rasmussen will make some alterations about his greenhouses.

Lake Preston, S. D.—S. L. Keith, a practical nurseryman, has been employed to lay out the new city park.

ORDER AT ONCE AND SECURE STOCK

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Rose Owen, J. H. Woodford, Dorothy Devens, G. F. Atkinson, Golden Trophy, T. B. Morse, Pres. McKinley, Western King, The Herriott, Surprise, Marcia Jones, Elvena, Miss Helen Wright, Belle of Castlewood, Chito, C. W. Ward, Mrs. S. T. Murdock, 75 cts. per dozen; $5.00 per 100. Glory of Pacific, Maud Dean, Mrs. R. Crawford, W. P. Raynor, Modesta, Lenawee, Pride of Castlewood, Bonnaffon, Ivory, Ruth Ellis, 50 cts. per dozen; $3.00 per 100, Frank Hardy, T. H. Spaulding, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, The Yellow Fellow, Madeline Pratt, Mrs. C. H. Peirce, Merry Christmas, 35 cts. each; $3 00 per dozen. Snow Queen, Pennsylvania, 50 cts. each; $5.00 per dozen. W. H. Chadwick, $1.00 each; $5.00 per dozen.

Mayor Pingree, $5.00 per 100.

Mayor Pingree, $5.00 per 100.

Mayor Pingree, $5.00 per 100.

CANNAS
Pres. McKinley, Defender, Pres. Cleveland, Tarrytown, 60 cts. each; $5 00 per dozen. Ami Pichon, Paul Marquant, J. D. Cabos, L. Balley, Florence Vaughan, $2.50 per 100. Eldorado, A. Billard, Count de Bouchard, $4 00 per 100.

For full description send for our 1898 wholesale list.

THE COTTAGE GARDENS, Queens, N. Y.

CANNAS

In extra fine strong plants from 4 inch pots

CANNAS

Duke of Marlboro, Defender, Pres. McKinley, 50 cents each; $4.50 per doz. Gloriosa, Philadelphia, Alemannia, America, $2.00 per doz.; $12.00 per 100. Flamingo, Pillar of Fire, Robert Christie.......$1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100. Columbia, Mrs. Fairman Rogers, Golden Queen, $1.25 per doz.; $7.00 per 100. Alphonse Bouvier, Austria, Chicago, Egandale, Florence Vaughan, Italia, J. D. Cabos, Mme. Crozy, Paul Marquant, Queen Charlotte, Rosalind at $6.00 per 100.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS
All the new and standard varieties in A-1 stock ready for planting, including Alice F. Carey (pink), Dolores (yellow), Miss G. Vanderbilt (white), Robt. G. Carey (white), Spotswood (yellow), Frank Hardy and Mrs. H. Weeks, all at $20,00 per 100, net, for cash.

JOHN N. MAY, SUMMIT, NEW JERSEY.

Chrysanthemums

Santhemums

Mrs. S. T. Murdock, Mnie. F. Bergman,
Whilldin, H. L. Sunderbruch, Eda Prass,
Inter Ocean, V. Morel, Childs, John
Nivens, Golden Wedding, Mutual Friend, C. B. Whituall, Bonnaffon,

Shrimpton, Nivens, Golden Medinson. Philadelphia, Dailledonze, Others, 21/2 lvory, Vellow Queen and others,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  and 3-inch pots, \$2.50 per 100. . . . . Mrs. A. F. Wienold

McDONALD & STEELE, Crawfordsville, Ind.

Shrysanthemum

Yellow Sport of JEROME JONES.

It received the highest points and a Certificate of Merit at the Cleveland Chrysanthemum Show. It is in Yellow what Jerome Janes is amongst the White. The very best for late blooming. 29<sub>2</sub>-in. pot plants strong, $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100. Stock ready April 15th.

E. J. PADDOCK, 295 Erie St., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

St. Louis.

PLANTING BUSINESS OPENS WITH A RUSH WHICH OVERWORKS THE FLORISTS. CUT FLOWER PRICES GO DOWN .- DULL TRADE. -THRIP AND ITS RAVAGES.

Bright weather seems to have come at Planting out has been last to stay. delayed and all outside work interfered with by the cold, wet spring, but when planting commenced it came with a rush, everybody wanting their work done at once. Complaints without number have resulted from the overworked florists not being able to do half a dozen things at the same time.

Planting in the parks is being pushed and the work is giving quite a summer air to the grounds. Quite a lot of new planting is being arranged for at Forest Park, and the older parks have about the usual amount of bedding; the changes being made are mostly in design and location of beds.

Market trade this season has not been as satisfactory as was expected, and all trade may be said to have been more or less unsatisfactory. In out flowers one illustration will suffice. One of the principal fakirs doing business down town has announced the fact that he is going to close out and leave town as there is not enough doing to enable him to make a living.

Stock of all kinds is accumulating, although whatever comes in, either roses or earnations, that is strictly first-class sells out at good prices, roses bringing as high as 6 cents and carnations bringing B cents. There is, however, any quantity of stock going at nominal prices. Carnations were I cent, with a drop on 500 or 1,000 orders. Common roses command from 1 to 3 cents with discounts on large lots. Pæonies are over plentiful and move slowly. Gladioli, too, are slow sale. Sweet peas move better than most stock, there seeming to be more call for them.

Almost all roses, and quite a few of the other varieties of flowers, coming to this market show by their appearance that the thrip is becoming more and more of It is only about three seasons an injury. ago that thrips appeared herein sufficient numbers to cause damage to stock, and then only in one or two places. Since then, however, they have spread with great rapidity and it is now an exception to find a place that is free from their ravages. There seems to be no way of keeping them in check or destroying them without injuring the roses. Tobacco has been tried, both in tunigating by burning and by the use of the extract, and fair success is reported, although smoking hurts the flowers and the extract costs about what you get for the flowers after R. F. T. they are saved.

ERIE, PA - The Tegler millinery establishment gave its first semi-annual flower show and sale on May 19 and 20. It was a most successful departure.

BALTIMORI, MD - Michael Boylan, propagator at Patterson Park, has a novel flower design nearly ready. It is a huge calendar plat of the month of June. The figures and letters are two feet square and the bed required 2,000 plants.

SALT LAKE CHY, UTAH. There was a ery interesting meeting of the Salt Lake Florists and Gardeners, Society on May 16. There was a large attendance and papers were read by P. J. Huddart upon chrysanthemum pilture, by J. C. Swane upon the growth of vegetables, by Park Keeper Shaltas on bedding plants, and by Ldw. Party on the circ of lawns.

MANAHERR'S PANSIES MANA

SEND FOR REASONS WHY THEY ARE THE BEST.

...PLANTS...

...SMILAX...

Ready now at $1.50 per 1, oz. ....PLAN IS... Ready now, 75c per 100; $5 per 1000. September to January; 75c per 100, $4 per 1000.

Sample plants for 10 cents.

على على على ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

FINE PLANTS

VERBENAS

IN BUD AND BLOOM.

Many Fine Varieties added to Our Collection.

Best Memmoth .....per 100, \$3.00; per 1000, \$25.00 Ceneral Collection  $\frac{1}{2}$   $\frac{1}{2}$   $\frac{1}{2}$   $\frac{1}{2}$   $\frac{1}{2}$

ROSES.

American Beauty, 3-Inch pots ......per 100, $10 00 Bridesmaid, Bride, Bon Silene, Watteville, Sunset, Wernet, Price from 24-Inch pots, $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 100. $10 per 100 per

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

50 tine varieties from 25-inch pots, $3.00 and $4.00 per 100. Send for list of varieties.

MICHELLANEOUS DIANTS

| MIGUELLANEUUS PLANIS.                                                                                                                                                           |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Ready for immediate sales. 100. Anthemia Coronaria, from 2½-inch pots                                                                                                           |
| Alternanthere, all leading varieties 3 (0) Ageratum, other and white. 3,00 Carnations, from 4-lineh pots, fine stock, 12 (0) Coleus, leading sorts, 234-lineh pots, 3 (0) 5 (0) |
| O o - i como don blo and alnello (Jneb nota 190)                                                                                                                                |
| 24, 4.00                                                                                                                                                                        |
| 1                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Hydrangea Otakaa, 5 lm. hushy                                                                                                                                                   |
| Moonflower, 212-inch puts. 4.00                                                                                                                                                 |
| Pelargoniums, 2½-inch pots                                                                                                                                                      |
| ESTABLISHED CARNATIONS FROM SOIL.                                                                                                                                               |

C. A. Dang. $100, 1000, Wrs. McBurney $610, 1000, Harrison's White $2.50 $20,00 Wm Scott $2.00 17.50 Lizzie McCowan $2.00 15.00 Portia New Trade List on application.

WOOD BROS., Fishkill, N. Y.

NEW WHITE PERPETUAL

BLOOMING CARNATION

Anna H. Shaw

The Best "All Round" White Carnation for Cutrlowers Recommendations Wonderful bloomer, Causela Vigor, Rapid Grower, Forms Strong Bloomer, Instead Vigor, Rapid Grower, Forms Strong Bloomer, Indianated to Avery Short Time, Perfectly Healthy, Handsome Foltage Large Beautifully Formed Flowers on Long Stems, Exquisitely Fragrant, Never Bursts, Blooms Longer and Gleen More Flowers and Calabatic Carnation that can always be depended upon, give Anna H. Shaw a trial. Boated Cuttings & pur doz; & per 100. Strong Plants & per doz; & per 100. Strong and Catalogue of Seeds, Balba Plants, Caett, Etc.

Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd,

Ventura (by-the-Sea), Cal.

The best of all whites. Reduced price. ....

H, F, LITTLEFIELD, Worcester, Mass.

STRONG, HEALTHY ROOTED CUTTINGS Ready Feb. 1st and Later

Including Morello, Flora Hill, Daybreak, Wm. Scott, Lizzie McGowan, Ivory, Silver Spray, Emily Pierson, Goldfiuch, Eldorado, and others. Sead me a list of what you want und get prices before you buy. We also have a fine lot of Carnation and Violet blooms for sale. Write for prices.

CHAS. CHADWICK.

Lock Box II.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

All the novelties of 1898 at $10.00 per 100. Flora Hill, Jubilee and Pingree, a fine trio, $5.00 per 100. All the best standard sorts.

GEO. HANCOCK & SON, GRAND HAVEN, MICH.

FLORA HILL cause there is nothing to sight because there is nothing to sight botal graphs to the lergest bloom. It puts all clusters to the shade Nothing past or present to equal it. It speaks for thousand plants exclusively for propagating from thousand plants exclusively for propagating from thousand blants exclusively for propagating from the best stock ever offered, S.100 per 100; $40.00 per 1000. Our trade list is issued. If you have out received one send for it

E. G. HILL & CO., Richmond, Ind.

WE still have some varieties from Pots w and Flats ready to plant in the field. Field-grown plants of all popular varieties in the Fall. . . . .

F. DORNER & SONS CO., LA FAYETTE, IND.

will exchange for Lincoln, Mrs. E. G. Hill and Golden Wedding 'Mums.

TEXAS SEED & FLORAL CO., Dallas, Texas.

Bread and Butter

Carnations Scott and Rose Queen for Pink; Emily Pierson for Red; Meteor, Crimson; McGowan and Kohinoor for White. No experiment and disappointment growing three carnations. Strong rooted cuttings $1.00 per 100, $8.00 per thousand. Cash with order, SOUTH SIDE FLORAL CO., Springlield, III.

"ALPHONSE RICARD."

Wm. Scott recommends this variety as the fluest boulde Searlet GERANIUM to date. Extra strong plants from 1-in, pots $1.25 per dozen #10 per 100. Mme. Brant, same size and price S.A. Nutt, 1-in, $7 per 100. Cash

H. L. PHELPS, SPRINCFIELD, ILL.

Cape Jessamine Buds STEMS STEMS STEMS TOWN ON CO. 1 Section 1000, Also small plants grown on co. 1 John Monkhouse, Caddo Nursory, Jewella, La.

Please mention the American Florist when write a to advertisers.

Per 100 GERANIUM "MARS" 2½-in. in bloom, $5.00 Geraniums, single scarlet, 4-inch in bloom....

bloom....
Frank Hardy Chrysanthemums, 2½-in.
pots....per doz., $1.00.
BRIDESMAIO ROSES, extra clean, 2½

inch pots.

BRIOE ROSES, 2½-inch pots.

Bonnaffon and Ivory Chrysanlhemums,

2½-inch pots.

Henry Eichholz Frenklin Co., WAYNESBORO, PA.

KLONDIKE

Cold Fields at Your Door.

Cold Fields at Your Door.

COLEUS—All kinds, nil grades and all prices. Verschaffeltil and Queen. 75c per 100; $6.00 per 1000; $26-inch pots. $15 00 per 1000; $1.75 per 100. Coleus in variety. 55c per 100; $4.90 per 1000; $24-inch pots. $12 00 per 1000; $1.50 per 100. Agratum dwarf blue. 66c per 100; $1.50 per 100. Agratum dwarf blue. 66c per 100; $1.50 per 100. Anthemis Cor naria. Golden Macquerite. $1.50 per 100. Anthemis Cor naria. Golden Macquerite. $1.50 per 100. $12 00 per 100. Salvia splendens $1.00 per 100 Vinca variesata $1.00 per 100; $12 00 per 100; $20 0 per 100; $20 0 per 100; $20 0 per 100; $20 0 per 100; $3.00 per 100; $1.50 per

J. E. FELTHOUSEN, Schenectady, N. Y.

THE MORRIS FLORAL CO., Morris, III.

ALTERNANTHERA....

P. MAJOR, AUREA NANA and ROSEA NANA. 21/2-inch, per 100 $1.50; per 1000 $15.00.

VINCA VARIEGATA, per 100 $1.50.

THOS. A. McBETH, Springfield, O.

June Offer Per 100

ALTERNANTHERAS A. Nana, $1.75, P. Major, $2.00
BEGONIAS, COLEUS, 2½-inch pots 2.00
GERA IUMS, mixed colors $2.00 and 4.00
SMILAX, 2-inch $9.00 per 1000, 1.00
PRIMROSES, ENGLISH IVY 2.50

JOS. H. CUNNINGHAM, Delaware, O.

BARGAINS IN PLANTS CASH

NICHOLAS AMOS, Crestline, Ohio.

HARDY PINKS

2½-in. pots; Souv. de Sale, $3.50 per 100; Her Majesty, Glen Valley, Laura Wilmer, Ger-trude, $3.00 per 100.

VIOLETS...

2½-in. pots: Admiral Avellon, Princess of Wales, $3.50 per 100; Luxonne, California, Campbell, Swanley White, $3.00 per 100. THE CONARO & JONES CO., . West Grove, Pa.

VERBENAS.

The choicest varieties and healthiest plants grown.

Strong plants in bud and bloom. $2.50 per hundred; $20.00 per thousand.

GERANIUMS.

75 finest varieties in cultivation, grown in 31/2in pots. Strong plants in bud and bloom. $5.00 per 100.

J. L. DILLON, BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Notice! WE have named our New Cannas.....

No. 47, THE MAINE; No. 48, ADMIRAL Dewey; No. 49, Manila; No. 50, Admiral Sampson; No. 51, Havana.

A. BLANC & CO., - Philadelphia.

CANNA BARGAINS. Dormant roots with two and more eyes. PURCHAS-ER'S SELECTION of Alphonse teur Crampbel, Florence Vaughan, J. D. Cabos and Chicago, $15 per 1000; $2.50 per 100. Burbank and Austria, in 3-inch pots, $3 per 100. MIXED CANNAS, $10 per 1000; $2 per 100.

AMERICAN BULB COMPANY. United States Exotic Nurseries, SHORT HILLS, N. J. TRADE LISTS ON APPLICATION.

GERANIUMS

Fine 4-in, stock in 10 Standard and new parieties at $5, $6 and $7 per 100, 2 inch, $15.00 per 1000; $2.00 per 100, Mme, Bruant, strong, 2½-in, $3.00 per 100, BLGOMA Vernon, 2½-in, $2.00 per 100, COLUS Plants, mixed, $1.50 per 100, Carnation Lizzie McGowan, 2-in, $12.00 per 1000; $1.50 per 100. Cash please, . . . CARL HAGENBURGER. West Mentor, Ohio.

Geraniums

Best mixed varieties for bedding, all in hada, strong, healthy plants;  $3\frac{1}{2}$  inch pots, 3 00 per 100;  $3\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pots, 3 00 per 100; 3

Cannas 4-inch pote, fine plants; Madam Crozy, Charles Henderson and B. Brown, $5 00 per 100. Cash with orders.

CARL E. TAUBE, Proprietor, Paxton Creenhouses, - Harrisburg, Pa.

DOUBLE HOLLYHOCKS

Fine plants, One-year-old, from best seed.

PANSY PLANTS Large flowering kinds. Write for prices.

S. W. PIKE, St. Charles, III.

BENJ. CONNELL, Florist, WEST GROVE, PA.

10,000 Ampelopsis Veitchii, fine dormant pot plants, 1 and 2-year old; price 3 and 6c 10 000 pot-grown Cannas, cream of bedding sorts. 20 000 Violeta; 20,000 Carnations; Spirea Anthony Waterer and Bine Spirea; Strawberry-Raspberry and other oew amail fruits. All must be sold. Ask for prices. Address

BENJ. CONNELL. West Crove, Pa.

MAJOR VARIEGATA LEFT.

Fine plants from 2½-inch pots, $2.50 per 100.

WILLIAMS & CRITTENDEN.

WATERLOO, IOWA.

XXX STOCK...

A Rare Bargain In Bedding Plants. A Rare Bargain in Bedding Fights. Abuti-lons, 3 vars.: Artillery Plants: Fuchsies, Storm King, etc: Heliotropes, 3 vars.: Lantanas, 3 vars. All are extra strong in bind, sure to please. Cash, or one haif cash and balance C. O. D.

JOHN F. RUPP, SHIREMINSTOWN.

Successful Growers are Wanted

To know that they can dispose of all their surplus stock by advertising in the American Florist. TRY IT NOW! .....tising in the American Florist.

ROEMER'S Superb Prize Pansies

The finest strain of Pausies in the World,

INTRODUCER AND GROWER OF ALL THE LEADING NOVELTIES.

Highest Award Inter. Exhibition at Hamburg, 1897 Catalogue free on application.

Fred. Roemer,

Seed Grower, - QUEDLINBURG, GERMANY. n Pererererererererererere

"WHITE FAXON'S "WHITE" PANSIES.

The best mixture in cultivation, flowers very large, thick and velvety; of superb colors and markings. The perfection of form and texture.

In Trade Packets at $1.00 each. M. B. FAXON,

Lock Box 1528.

1528. BOSTON, MASS. Correspondence solicited.

PANSIES
THE JENNINGS STRAIN.
THEY ARE GRAND.
Fine stocky plants in bud and bloom. $10 and $15 per 100 by express; small plants, 75c by mail. Pansy seed, $1.00 per pkt. Aster seed, Semple's pink, $1.00 per oz. Cash with order.

E. B. JENNINGS,

Lock Box 254. SOUTHPORT, CONN. Crower of the Finest Pansies.

PANSIES IN BUD AND BLOOM

Extra fine plants, $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000. Cash with the order.

Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, PAL Mnney Order P. O., Station II, Phila.

Vinca Major Variegata

1000 3-INCH POTS

Three to five lends, 18 to 24-inches long, 75c per doz.: $5.00 per 100.

NATHAN SMITH & SON, ADRIAN, MICH.

OLEUS. Rooted Cuttings Well Rooted....

Searlet Verschaffeltii, Golden Verschaffeltii, Fire King, Fire Brand, Tam O'Shanter, S. P. teen, Albambra, Golden Crown, Midnight, Salvator, John Goode, Nigger, Isc, per doz.; 75c, per 100; $5 per 1000, express paid.

S. T. DANLEY, Macomb, III.

VEGETABLE PLANTS

Tomato, Cabbage, Lettuce, Celery and Sweet Polato, 15 cts per 100; $1 00 per 1000.

Pepper and Egg Plants, 25c per 100; $2 00 per 1000 Cauliflower Snowball, 35c per 100, $2.50 per 1000 All plants by mail, 10c per 100 extra Price list for large quantities. Cash with order.

R. VINCENT, Jr. & SON, White Marsh, Md.

5,000 SMILAX..

From flats, by until 50s oer 100 $1 00 per 1000 From 2 Inch pots $2 25 oer 100 $1300 per 1000 Germatums from 2-toch pots, $2.25 per 100; $20.00 per 1000. Cash with the ord r. Send for sampless Fred Boernor, CAFE MAY CITY

RICHMOND, VA.-Mrs. Elizabeth Harvey has made an assignment, for the benefit of creditors, to Mexander H. Sands. The liabilities are about $5,000 and the assets, including real estate, notes and accounts, considerably exceed that sum. The assignee is privileged to earry on the business for a period not exceeding ninety days and may dispose of the stock at either public or private sale. The real estate will be sold at auction. Mrs. Harvey did business as Harvey & Co., and succeeded the old firm of J. H. Harvey & Co., which failed about two years ago. The store is at 5 Broad street and the greenhouses are at Barton Heights.

ALBANY, N. V.-Washington Park is at present affording a tulip display of unexcelled beauty. There are thousands upon thousands in bloom, the principal varieties being Elmmacule, Gloria Solis, Murillo, Vellow Prince, Gesneriana Rex Rubrorum, La Belle Alliance, Vander Veer, Cottage Maid, President Lincoln, Proserpine and Duchesse de Parma, W.S. Egerton is the park superintendent.

EXTENSION THE MODEL EXTENSION SUPPORT

QUEENS N.Y., Feb. 16, 37
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y., Dear Shr.
I have tested your latest model Carnation Support and ann free to say that Lomsider
If the best whe carnation support that I have every seen.
It is quickly and easily appiled, and I think will prove very durable, and you certainly deserve great cicdit
for the invention.
Very truly yours,
C. W. WARD.

FLATRUSH, BROOKLYN,
N. Y., Feb. 18, 37.
MR. THERON PARKER,
Dear Sir. - Your wire stake
is certainly a gem. Without hesitating we indured it as an up-to-date carration support. Yours truly,
DAILLEDOUZE GROS

W. HOBOKEN, N. J.,
Feb. 18, 37
MR. THERON. PARKER
Brooklyn, N. Y. Dear SlirIt glives me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in gettling up entuation supports. I think that those I have had from you
are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation
support, a thing I have been hooking toy for a long time.
Wishing you every success
in the sale of them, I am yours truly, E. ASSU'S.

flat and discount on early orders THERON PARKER, 22 Morton St. BRUOKLYN, N. Y.

FIRST-CLASS GOODS and CORRECT PRICES

have forced us to the front and today we are largest manufact

IRON RESERVOIR

and Lawn Settees In America A 10-pags catalogue for the asking

McDonald Bros. 108-114 Liberty St.,

COLUMBUS. 0

OSE LER EXTRACT TOBACCO W

FOR SALE BY SEED STORES FOR FULL PRIMARILE LOUISVILLE SPIRIT CURED TOBACCO CO

THE HARRISII DISEASE can be prevented by immersing the bulbs for ten hours in a half solution of 99%

RAFT'S PLANT TONIC

This has been conclusively proven by experiments at Lincoln Park, Chicago. The Tonic also kills Hard Shelled Scale, Mealy Bug, and other insect pests without injury to the plant. A trial of a 25-cent bottle will convince you that a really remarkable insecticide has been discovered.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR.

KRAFT PLANT TONIC CO.,

ROCKFORD, ILL.

`..........

if your dealer does not have it send direct to the manufacturers 35 Warren Street. The Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. 96 Lake Street

Jute Fibre Flower Pots...

The Finest Thing on Earth for Shipping Plants. 🚜 🧀

Very Strong, Light, Neat and Attractive

Send 5 ets. stamps for samples and low prices.

J. B. WOODIN, - Owosso, Mich.

Scollay Sprinkler....

INDISPENSABLE

J. A. Scotlav, Maker,

74 Myrtle Ave. Brooklyn. N. Y.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Gen'l Western Agents. 84 Randolph St., CHICACO.

SHADING Weather Proof Paper, ready for use on sash or greenhouses. I neverthele for Palm, Fern or Pringing houses. If will

1 hexcelled for Palm, Fern or Propagating houses. It will tones in rolls about 16 pounds in PAPER worth 38-meloes wide, 25 yards PAPER one at NH 52.50 the roll.

August Rölker & Sons, Sole Mntrs. Agents, - 52 Dey Street, NEW YORK.

FXPRESS PAID on Receipt

...$4.00...

Wild dost Paris tireeo, Purple Hellebore etc. over some hopkes or similitrees. No water or plaster reguted. Urcular free. (A. Passel, b.S.)

Vaughan's Seed Store, 84 Randol h St.

COLORLY DOES IT.

STEMS DUST EXTRAGT

BOTTOM PRICES.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE,

Chicago New York.

Florists! Seedsmen! Nurserymen!

Would con increase your production and add to your bank account? Then buy BARDING'S "UP-10-DAR" GIMRAI FRIBITIR. Guaranteed analysis; Nitrogen 3 15 per cent. Phosphoric Acid, 10,50 per cent. Pidash, 5 per cent. Special 30 day offer, $1,50 per 100-16 bag. Ten lots even lower. Try sample beg. CASH WITH ORDER

GICO. L. HARDING.
MANIE OF FEIGHLIERS AND POLITRY FOOD.
BINCHAMION, N. Y.

GEO. S. BARTLETT, SUCCESSOR TO CINCINNATI, O. Cin'ti Desiccating Co.

1255-1257 West Sixth Street.

Hartford, Conn.

With the rise of temperature there is a orresponding rise in the demand for bed-ing stock and from all appearances hings will be kept moving along from now on. There is nothing in the war seare. The spring of '98 promises to sur-There is nothing in the war pass that of a year ago by a good margin.

John Coombs intends building three additional rose houses, each 20x100, and two good sized violet houses The rose houses will run east and west with the long span to the south. As usual, no expense will be spared to make the houses models of their kind. In Mr. Coomb's own words: "All things considered, a substantially built house at double the expense of a cheap structure, is by far the cheapest in the end." His general stock Номо. is in excellent condition.

GEO. KELLER & SON,

Flower Pots.

Before buying write for prices. 361-363 Herndon Street, Wrightwood Ave., CHICACO. ILL.

FLOWER POTS

A SPECIALTY

List and SAMPLES FREE.

J. G. SWAHN'S SONS, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Standard & & FLOWER

If your greenhouses are within 500 miles of the Capitol, write us; we can save you money.

W. H. ERNEST,

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Good Railroad Facilities KELLER BROS.

Special Attention Given to Mail Orders, and Special Sizes Made to Order. NORRISTOWN, PA.

Price Lists Furnished on Application.

When corresponding with advertisers, mention the AMERICAN FLORIST.

Wheeler-Stenzel Co.

14433333333BBBBBBB

Viske your contracts for next season now. We can deliver to any part of the country and Save You Money .....

***********

Greenhouse Glass

72 Sudbury St., BOSTON, MASS.

It's easy to use because the principle is right. A boy can operate it. It's easy to put up because of it's ex-treme simplicity. It's easy to buy because the price is reasonable.....

THE CHAMPION VENTILATING APPARATUS

Catalogue is free. A postal with your name and address secures it. Address

AMERICAN ROAD MACHINE CO., Kennett Square, Pa.

GREENHOUSE MATE

Cal. Red Cedar and Louisiana Cypress.

BEST GRADES. PERFECT WORKMANSHIP.

A. DIETSCH & CO. SHEFFIELD AVE. CHICAGO. ILL

Standard Flower Pots...

OUR POTS ARE OF THE BEST QUALITY.

We ship all goods from Cincinnati, guaranteeing lowest treight rates and prompt delivery.

Write us before placing your orders elsewhere. . . . . . .

CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO., Covington, Ky.

"STANDARDS"

FULL SIZE AND WIDE BOTTOMS. BULB PANS AND AZALEA POTS. DETROIT FLOWER POT M'F'Y. HARRY BALSLEY, DETROIT, MICH., 490 HOWARD ST.

EVANS' IMPROVED Ventilating A*PPARATUS*

QUAKER CITY MACHINE WORKS.

FOR SALE CHEAP.

GLASS for Greenhouses, Conservatories, Hot-beds, etc. Also Hotbed Sashes and Mats, Paints, Oils, etc. THE REED GLASS & PAINT CO., 466 W. Broadway, NEW YORK. Shes and GLASS &

STANDARD FLOWER POTS

Send for price list of Standard Flower Pots, Hanging Vases, Seed Pansand Cylinders for Cut Flowers Lawn Vases, 17x17-ln., $1 00; 19x20-ln., $1 50; Bases 12-ln, high 50c. Address

HILFINGER BROS. POTTERY, R.... FORT EDWARD, N. Y. AUGUST ROLKER & SONS. AGTS... 52 DEV STREET. NEW YORK CITY.

NEW & SECOND-HAND MATERIAL,

purchased from Sheriff Receiver, and Assknee, sales at less than one-half prices. Pipe and Fittings Hose, Florists Wire, Hot Water Heaters, Greenhouse Bollers and Engines. Rope, Light Wrought from Pipe, Glass Sash and thousands of other articles, for sa e by

CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO Largest Mail Order Depot for New and Second-Hand Material in the World.

W. 35TH & IRON STS., CHICACO. Write for our free illustrated catalogues

Always mention the .....

American Florist

when writing advertisers.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.-In 1891 the greenhouses of Walter Miller were burned. establishment was mortgaged to Mrs. Johannah E. Courtail, to whom the Firemens' Fund Insurance Co., of San Franeiseo, paid $950 to settle the loss. Subsequently the company thought it had discovered evidence of conspiracy to destroy the greenhouse to collect the insurance and brought suit against Mrs. Courtail to recover the money. The jury decided against the company and Mrs. Conrtail at once started a suit for damages for malicious prosecution which was, on May 12, decided against her.

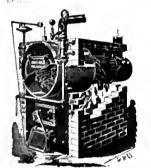

St. Path, Minn.-Prof. D. T. McDougal, of the botanical department of the University of Minnesota, leaves on May 28 for Flagstaff, Arizona, to devote the summer to the study of mountain and desert plant life, along which line he has made previous research.

ARE THE BEST

For Heating Greenhouses, Conservatories and Dwellings.

Our boilers consume ail gases from the fuel, therefore making it the most desirable holler for greenhouse heating on the market....

Send to day for Catalogoe and Price nformution on appliention

GORTON & LIDGERWOOD CO.

96 liberty Street, SIW YORK.

SEND FOR FLORISTS
PRICE LIST AND FREE UPON APPLICATION CATALOGUE 74 FRANKLIN ST BOSTON. MASS. NEW YORK CITY BR.

Thos. W. Weathered's Son

Horticultural Architect ....and Builder

Manufacturer of Greenhouse Heating and Ventilating Apparatus, Cypress Greenhouse Material of every description. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue.

141 Centre St., NEW YORK.

MACHINE. VENTILATING STANDARD

NONE EQUAL IT Strength

Durability Send for Catalogue.

HIPPARD. YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO,

NOTHING Flimsy Complicated about it.

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BY HAVING ME

BUILD AND HEAT YOUR GREENHOUSES

HENRY W. GIBBONS 134-136-138 LIBERTY STREET, NEW YORK

EXPERT ADVICE AND PLANS FURNISHED

ESTIMATES FREE.

when you write to an advertiser.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.

Greenhouse * Bo

Bollers made of the best of material, shell, firebox sheets and heads of steel, water space all around (front, sides and back). Write for information.

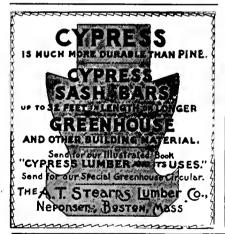

Always mention American Fiorist.

You can not get a GOOD THING tor nothing. But the price of this apparatus is next to nothing. Send for price and description to

J. D. CARMODY, Evansville, Ind.

Butted Glass.

This is no longer an experiment, it has come to stay. There are various ways of making Butted Roofs, but the best way is with the

Clipper Bar.

With this bar you can make a roof that is absolutely free from drip, and glass cannot be torn out by the wind. Butted glass makes a tight roof, a warm house and saves fuel. It lasts longer, looks betterand costs less than the old-fashioned roof. But do not think that this is the only bar we sell, for it is not; we furnish what people want and there is nothing in greenhouse material that you cannot get from us, and all of open-air-dried Cypress clear of bright sap, stained sap, knots and all other defects.

Lockland Lumber Co.

Write for Circulars or Estimates.

Lockland, Ohio,

SALESROOMS:

133 Centre Street, - NEW YORK CITY. 510 Arch Street, - PHILADELPHIA.

COTTAGE BOILER

WESTERN BRASS MFG. CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS: HOLBROOK, MERRILL & STETSON SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

> EUROPEAN AGENT: AUG. EGGERS, BREMEN.

THE H. B. SMITH CO., Westfield, Mass.

For Greenhouses, Gardens and Lawns in liberal quantities, every hour of the year, whether the wind & blows or not 💐 💐 💐 💐

Improved Rider Hot Air Pump Improved Ericsson Hot Air Pump

Can be run by any ignorant boy without danger - Explosion impossible. Prices greatly reduced. In use in every part of the world.

RIDER-ERICSSON ENGINE CO.

22 Cortlandl St., NEW YORK. 191-193 High St., BOSTON. 684 Craig St., MONTREAL, P. Q.

86 Lake St., CHICAGO. 29-31 N. 7th St., PHILADELPHIA Send for catalogue "A 3."

GREENHOUSE CONTRACTOR, STEAM AND HOT WATER ENGINEER 🥦 🛰 🥦

The Largest Builder

Of Gugumber Houses in

GENERAL OFFICE AND LEOMINSTER, MASS.

Plaus and estimates furnished for all kinds of Houses. "N.B." Will accept in pay-ment—Part Cash, Balance on Mortgage. A large stock of Greenbouse Equipment con-stantly on hand....

| Index to A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | dvertisers.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Allen J K. 1236 American Boib Co. 1235 American Road Ma- chine Co. 1237 American RoseCo. 1231 Amilios E C. 1232 Amos Nicholas 1235 Armatrong Luther. 1246 Baller F A. 1238 Bartlett Geo S. 1246 Bassett & Wasbburn 1252 Bayersdorfer H & Co. 1257 Betkert Theo. 1230                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Lonisville Tobacco Collini                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| American Bulb Co 1-05                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Lucas J & Co1310                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| American Road Mar                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Lyon Horticole                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| American BoseCo1301                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Manning Jacob W 128                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Amea. Nicholas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Maplewood Cut Flo Col: 02                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Armstrong Luther 126                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | May Jno N 1305                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Baller F A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | McBetti 1 208                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Bassett & Washburn 1292                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | McCullough J Chan 1218                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Retkert Theo 130                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | McDonald & McManus 1266                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Blanc A & Co 1300 1305                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | McDonald & Steele., 1303                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Bobbink L C                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Millang Frank 1288                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Boston Letter Co1256                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Moninger J C Co 1309                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Brunton F& Co., L36Budlone J A L32 INC                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Moon Samuel C . 1236 1302                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Burpes W Atlee & colfac-                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Moon Wm H Co1296                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Carmody J. D                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Moulder Geo B 1259                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Chadwick Chas1504                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Nat I Flo Board Trade 286                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Cheary & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | N Y Cut Flower Ex. 1296                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Cincas & Boddington 230                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | N Y Cut Flower Co1232                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Connell Beni 130                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Paddock E J1503                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Conley John & Son 1237                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Parker Theron 1306                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Craig Roht A Son1340                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Pennock Sam'l S1293                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Crowl Fern Co 125                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Phelps S W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Cunningham J H.,1805                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | Prince A G & Co1252                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Detroit Flo w Pot Miglion                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Quaker City Me'h Wkel3 ?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Dietach A & Co 1504Dillon J L 1502 1505                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Raynor J 1                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Donaghue A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Reed Glass & Paint Collin                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Dreer H A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Reinberg Br s 1292                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Elcho'z Henry1305                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Rice M & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Ellis & Pollworth 1294 1257                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Rider, Eriesson Co1309                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Ernest W H                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Rogers P's klora (4, 120)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Felthnusen J E 1305                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Rolker A & Sons 1306                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Ford Bros                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Sentiter J L                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| G dvin & Co 1293                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Scollay Jno A1306                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Giblin & Co 1310                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Shepherd Mrs T B., 1304                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Gorton & Lidgerwoodlike                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Lonisville Tobacco Collay Lones J & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Gutta Percha Rub Co. 1316                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Situations & Wants. 1230                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Haerens Aug 128                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Smith The H B Co 1306                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hancock Geo & Sons . 134                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | mith ABLL & 8041805                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Hartford H E120                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | South Side Floral Co.1301                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Hart M A 124                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Stearns Lumber Co 1809                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| lielkes W.F 13.2                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | St Louis Cot FlowerCot24                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Herr Albert M Co., 1310                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Struck J.N.& Bro1308                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Hillinger Bros 1345                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Sutherland Geo A126                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Hill E G & Co 1314                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | Taft L.R. 1256                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Hitchings & Co 1310                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Table Carl E1305                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Holton & Hunker Co. 1334Holker 11 M Co 1307                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Traendly & Schenek 123                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Horan Edw C 1245                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | U.S. Exotle Nurserles 1301                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Hant E H 1272                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Vance Boller W'ks, 1303                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Illinois Cut Flower Col222                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Van Zanten Bros1289                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Japanese Nursery125                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1100 1301 1395                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Kaating W.F                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Winterson 132 139                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Keller Bros 1905                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Vesey, W J & M S 1302                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Kelsey Harlan P125                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | Wabash R R125                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Bayersaorier II & Co. 120 Barca A Co. 120 Blanc A A Co. 120 Boerner Fred 120 Boston Letter Co. 125 Brunton F & Co. 125 Cambridge Tile Mk 126 Ca mody J D. 134 Ca mody J D. 134 Chadwick Chaa. 134 Chidago Wrecking Co 136 Cleary & Co. 126 Conned & Jones Co. 126 Connell, Ben). 124 Connell, Ben). 124 Connell, Ben). 126 Connell, Ben). 126 Connell, Ben). 126 Contage Gardenn. 136 Conley John & Son. 125 Cottage Gardenn. 136 Craig Bohd & Son. 125 Connell, Ben). 124 Crowl Fern Co. 125 Connell, Ben). 124 Crowl Fern Co. 125 Connell, Ben & Son. 125 Encell & A Son. 125 Encell & Son. 126 Connell, Ben & Son. 125 Connell, Ben & Son. 124 Connell, Ben & Son. 125 Connell, Ben & Son. 125 Connell, Ben & Son. 126 Connell, Ben & Son | Vaughan, McKellar & Wilterson . 1232 1239 Vesey, W. J. & M. S. 1232 Vincent R & Son . 1242 1240 Vesey, W. J. & M. S. 1242 Vincent R & Son . 1244 Value of the Company of th |
| 120 1 10                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Kidd J N 192King J M 122Kraft's Plant Toric 189                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Weber II & Son                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Kraft's Plant Tonic 180                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Welch Bros 128Wheeler Stenzel Co. 1307                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Kroeschell Brog Co., 148Kuehn C A 12 4                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Whilidin Pot Co1305Whitnall C.B1236                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Kuhl Geo A1302                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Whitnall C.B1286Williams&Crittenden.E86                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kuehn C A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Winter S B 1255Witthold Geo 1360                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Lattlefield H F 194                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Witthold Geo                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| LECKING OF CO                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Wo din J B                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Lonadate Edwin, 100 loc lan                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Wo din J B. 1395 Wors C W. 1284 Young Jno. 1283 Young Thos Jr. 1284                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Long D B                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | Young Thos Jr 1294                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| PERSON OF PRINCIPAL CO. THE                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

Boilers

OF HIGH

For GREENHOUSES.

See our Catalogue. . . . . .

Steam and Witter.

Giblin & Co., Utica, N. Y.

our hobby! Harmony of color, not of sound. Our sample cards are practical and will help you to pre-serve and beautify your home. Send for them. JOHN LUCAS & CO., Philadelphia, New York and Chicago.

Always ist when you order stock.

mention the American Flor

Hitchings

HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS

GREENHOUSE HEATING AND VENTILATING APPARATUS.

THE HIGHEST AWARDS RECEIVED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR FOR HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTURE, GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION AND HEATING APPARATUS.

Conservatories, Greenhouses, Paim Houses, etc., erected complete, with our patent lron Frame Construction. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue.

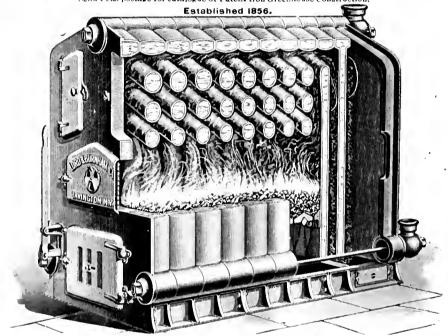

233 Mercer Street, NEW YORK.

LORD & BURNHAM

HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS AND MANUFACTURERS OF HEATING AND VENTILATING APPARATUS.

Plans and estimates furnished on application for heating and ventilating apparatus erected complete, or for material only. [37-Highest awards at the World's Fair.

Send 4 cts. postage for eatalogue of Patent Iron Greenhouse Construction.

NEW SECTIONAL HOT WATER HEATER. Specially adapted to large ranges. Will heat up to 16,500 ft. of glass. HICHEST ECONOMY.

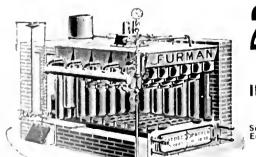

MODERATE COST. Also Heaters for smaller work. IF Send 5 cts. postage to New York Office for latest catalogue of heating and centilating apparatus.

Estimates furnished for Cypress Creenhouse Material.

EW YORK OFFICE,

ST JAMES BLDG, Broadway and 26th St.

GENERAL OFFICE AND WORKS, IRVINGTON-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.

On Your Coal Bills

If your Houses are Heated by a turman Boiler.

Send for large fillustrated Cataingue, Florists' Edition. Let us make you an estimate FREE.

THE HERENDEEN MFG. CO.

BRANCH OFFICES:

20 Vine Street, GENEVA, N. Y Physidelphia 1018 Betz Building.

51 DHIST ST

New York 30 Cortlandt St.

THE AMEUULUS FLORIST

America is "the Prow of the Vessel; there may be more comfort Amidships, but we are the first to touch Unknown Seas."

Vol. XIII.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK, JUNE 4, 1898.

No. 522.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

Copyright 1898, by American Florist Company. Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY,

324 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Eastern Office: 67 Broinfield St., Boston.

Subscription, $1.00 a year. To Europe, $2.00, Subscriptions accepted only from the trade.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

OFFICERS-WM. F. OUDE. Washington, D. C., president: A. DONAGHUE. Omaha, Neb., vice-president: W. J. STEWART, G. Bromfield St., Boston, Mass., secretary: H. B. BEATTY, Oll City, Pa., treasurer. The fourteenth annual meeting will be held at Omaha, Neb., Angust 16-19, 1885.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.
Annual Convention at Philadelphia, February, 1899.
ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster Pa., Secretary.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.
Annual meeting at Omaha, Neb., August, 1838.
ELMER D. SMITH, Adrian, Mich., secretary.

CONTENTS.

| Adherence to type in seed breeding                                                                                          | 1311 |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|
| Rust on chrysanthemums                                                                                                      | 1312 |
| Varnations                                                                                                                  | 1312 |
| Rust on chrysanthemums Varnations                                                                                           | 1312 |
| Herbaccous plant notes                                                                                                      | 1313 |
| Cluster of Bridesmaid roses (illus.).                                                                                       | 1313 |
| Herbaceous plant notesCluster of Bridesmaid roses (illus.). Sec.Notes and commentsClematis paniculata (illus.). | 1314 |
| Clematis paniculata (illus )                                                                                                | 1314 |
| Ornamental bedding (illus.)                                                                                                 | 1314 |
| New York                                                                                                                    | 1315 |
| New York                                                                                                                    | 1316 |
| Chicago                                                                                                                     | 1316 |
| Chicago                                                                                                                     | 1316 |
| Miscellaneous items                                                                                                         | 1317 |
| t Try santhenium notes                                                                                                      | 1318 |
| thrysanthemum notes                                                                                                         | 1318 |
| Steam and hot water heating.                                                                                                | 1318 |
| Ruffelo                                                                                                                     | 1322 |
| Wilmankoo                                                                                                                   | 1323 |
| Buffalo                                                                                                                     | 1321 |
| Cincinnati,                                                                                                                 | 1325 |
| Should think                                                                                                                | 1326 |
| Seed trade                                                                                                                  |      |
| Notes on new carnations                                                                                                     | 1329 |
| Notes on new carnations, , , , , , , ,                                                                                      | 1330 |
| Helpful reminders                                                                                                           | 1331 |
| Carried over American Beauty plants                                                                                         | 1332 |
| PittsburgRochester, N. Y                                                                                                | 1332 |
| Rochester, N. Y                                                                                                             |      |
| Nashville                                                                                                                   | 1332 |
| St. Louis,                                                                                                                  | 1334 |
| Dixon, Ill.                                                                                                                 | 1335 |
| St. Louis , Dixon, Ill                                                                                                      | 1336 |
| ·                                                                                                                           |      |

OUR NEW DIRECTORY will be mailed to subscribers as speedily as possible.

CHARLOTTE, MICH.—Mrs. E. T. Church, florist, has put out five ornamental beds at the waterworks grounds.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The Nashville, Chattanoogo & St. Louis Railway has bought the Centennial greenhouse and its contents. Other would-be purchasers awoke too late.

Adherence to Type in Seed Breeding.

The highest quality and most practically valuable seed of a variety is not that which from a large planting will produce a few superlative plants but that from which the largest proportion of the entire product will be of fine type. Uniformity of product is really the most important object of the seed breeding, and to secure it we must have, first, a clear conception of just what in every particular an ideal plant of the variety should be, and secondly, we must adhere rigidly to that ideal in our selection of breeders from year to year, and that we may do so it is essential that we have on record a full. minute and accurate description of the ideal plant we are working to produce, and select such plants, and such only, for breeders, rejecting those that differ from the ideal in any way, even if the difference is of itself an improvement.

Every living organism is the result of the balanced sum of hereditary influence inherited from its ancestors, that of one in a certain direction being modified by that of another in a slightly different or possibly directly opposite one. So that the more nearly alike all these influences are, the more certain and easily predicted is the result. If we introduce into the sum of heredity, through one or more ancestors, a more or less prepotent tendency in a certain direction, we disturb the balance and necessitate a new adjustment, and it is not certain that the resulting plant will be modified in the direction of the new influence in just the proportion that its numerical value bears to the whole, and in a majority of cases it will be found that some of the fruit will be greatly modified, others not at all, and still others will be changed in various directions, some possibly in one directly opposite to that of the new factor.

o illustrate, suppose we have a variety of corn which is generally ten rowed but occasionally showing an eight rowed ear and which would be more desirable if the ears were somewhat larger. We find a plant with a twelverowedear, larger, but in other respects like the type, and are tempted to use it as a breeder, hoping that the new twelve rowed tendency will overbalance that to produce eight rowed ears so that we would get rid of them entirely and increase the size of the ten rowed ears. It is possible that such might be the result, but I know by costly experience that there is greater probability that the outcome would be an occasional fourteen rowed ear, some twelve, some ten and more eight rowedears than ever before; and while some of the ears might be larger, many would be under-sized, and we should find all sorts of variation from the type, so that our product would be far less uniform and desirable than before.

My success in seed breeding has always been in direct proportion to the clearness of my conception of the ideal I was striving to produce and the persistency with which I adhered to that ideal in my annual selection of breeding stock. Over twenty five years ago I had a five-acre field of very fine corn in which I spent several hours in studying the variety and forming an idea of what a perfect plant of the sort should be, how tall, how many and how broad the leaves, color of the silk and tassel, length of husk, length and character of the ears, character of the grain, etc., etc. I then wrote a minute description of this ideal plant, with the limit of variation in each particular admissible in a brading class. missible in a breeding plant. I then went into the field and it took me many hours to find a hundred plants which did not vary beyond the limit in one or more particulars. I selected the best ten as breeddescription of the ideal plant in hand, made similar selections. The result of the work was that the sixth year I had on that same five-acre field a crop over 50% of which was within the limits of variation established for breeding stock six years before, when not one plant in a thousand came within the limit.

I am certain that my success in thus fixing the desirable qualities of the variety came from the persistent adherence to the clearly defined type. It may be argued that this course leaves no chance for improvement, and it does not as to type, nor should there be any. When we "improve" the type, we change it and in just so far are establishing a different variety, for by variety as used in relation to plants propagated by seed we mean all those plants which are of a certain type, and the very idea necessitates that type being a fixed one; but there is not a stock of any variety, either of vegetable or flower seed in existence in which there is not room for improvement in the proportion of the product which will come absolutely true to the type of the sort. An intimate acquaintance with most of the stocks of vegetable and flower seeds in common use convinces me that the greatest horticul-tural need of the age is clearly defined ideas of just what ideal plants of the different varieties propagated by seed should be, and a closer adherence by seed growers to such ideals in selecting seed stock. It seems to me that the defining and describing such ideal plants is work which can best be done by our national Department of Agriculture working in connection with our state experiment sta-tions. Such descriptions if well descriptions tions Such descriptions, if well done, would be accepted by all seed growers and the result would be the weeding out of a great many sub-varieties and a vast improvement in the quality and practical value of our common varieties because of their closer adherence to universally accepted types.

WILL W. TRACY.

The Rust of the Chrysanthemum.

Some days ago while on a visit to a large floral establishment my eye fell upon the chrysanthenium rust again, and it seems wise to give this new pest in America a notice. This fungus disease is closely related to some others that have proved very troublesome among

CHRYSANTHEMUM RUST

greenhouse and ornamental plants and it may spread and be as serious to chrysanthemum growers as the carnation rust has been to the propagators of the carnation

The accompanying engraving will give a fair idea of the appearance of the discased leaves. The two specimens are somewhat reduced in size and therefore the rust pimples are smaller than usually seen. Frequently the spots are in clusters, there being several arched ones around a common center. The color is a chestnut brown, and therefore much darker than the closely related rust that has brought ruin to the hollyhocks in many localities within the past few years.

The spore spots appear upon both sides of the leaves but as a rule are much more abundant upon the under side, and therefore the foliage needs to be lifted before the observer gets a full view of the spore formation. The writer has not as yet been able to find the last stage of spore formation and therefore there is doubt as to the botanical name of the rust. On this account those who have the rust will confer a favor by sending to the undersigned a leaf or two from a rusted chrysanthemmm. It will also help to give a knowledge of the range of the plant at the present time in the United States.

The rust is very likely an old weed and well known species and may have come in with imported stock or possibly infests wild plants in our own country and those growers of chrysantheminis who are suffering from it may have wild plants, even weeds, at their very doors that har bor and propagate the greenhouse pest. Those who have their chrysantheminis rusted should use all the precautions needed with a disease that is contagious and may be carried in the stock.

It is a good rule to propagate only from stock apparently free from the rust and be watchful in buying not to introduce the disease into a house that was before free from it. It would be interesting botanically and of value commercially to learn of some varieties of chrysanthemums that are more or less susceptible than others.

Byron D. Halsted.

New Brunswick, N. J.

Carnations.

Field culture is so simple an operation that it scarcely requires any consideration, so with a few general ideas given in this paper we will pass it by and for the balance of the summer season make a few plans for next winter. Do not imagine you can get good plants unless you keep them constantly cultivated. You may possibly get good plants by accident, but if you are in this business for a livelihood you had better not depend on luck. The ground in your carnation patch should never be allowed to get hard; whenever it rains enough to form a crust get in with your harrow and hoe and loosen it up. The loose ground acts as a mulch in dry weather and is far better than any other mulch that can be used, as it is not a harbor for insects and diseases.

Do not hoe deep around the plant; merely loosen up the soil, as it is better to encourage the formation of roots near the top of the soil than to cut them off with your hoe. With fibrous roots near the surface your plants will transplant into the houses better in the fall. Watering should not be done in the field unless you have enough of it and time enough to water thoroughly or by sub-irrigation. Top watering during a dry hot spell is far worse than the drought. If your soil is full of vegetable humus and is kept loosened on the top it will take a pretty severe drought to seriously affect your plants.

Topping should be attended to every week and if you want to keep in touch with your stock it is a good plan to attend to this yourself. With the spring rains and now the warm weather on hand the plants should be growing quite vigorously. As soon as there is any indi-cation of a bud forming the plant or shoot wants to be cut down so low that the first axillary bud below the cut will produce a growing branch and not a flowering stem. This varies with the different sorts and can only be learned by observing for yourself. Some may think once a week unnecessary, but it is far better to go over your plants oftener and top only such as really need it than to top them so very close and not go over them again for three or more weeks. This latter method robs the plant of too much growth and is a serious hinderance to root formation. Watch the growth of the plants carefully and you can tell best how late to top them and learn what room they will require next winter and if they will require much or little staking. It is wise to keep your eyes open all the summer and you can then learn much toward your success of next winter.

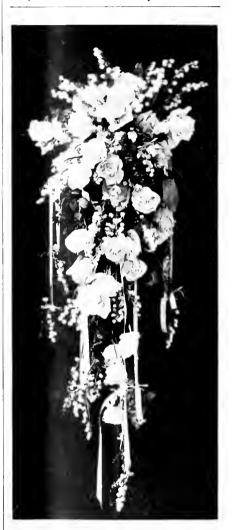

If you want good carnations next winter do not let the weeds grow at all. As soon as they show through go over the patch and hoe them out. Those around the plants especially want to be pulled as soon as you can get hold of them, for they take the nourishment from the soil that belongs to the carnations. The whole summer culture consists of keeping the soil loose, the weeds down and topping properly done; then you are reasonably sure of having good plants next fall,

Albert M. Herr.

A Shower Bouquet.

The accompanying engraving shows a cluster of Bride roses and lilies of the valley loosely arranged so that when held in the hand the flowers fall gracefully. This bouquet is about twenty-four inches long. The roses are not wired but wire is used to bind them together. All stems that can be spared are cut away so that the arrangement shall be as light as possible and the handle small, as without care it is apt to be heavy and clumsy. A florist some time ago receiving an order for a shower bouquet and making it up from the description given (never having seen one) was told on delivery that it had developed into a regular "cloud-burst." After the flowers are arranged, narrow white ribbons are tied to some of the roses to which are attached, by a narrower ribbon or silver cord, roses without stems, small buds and sprays of filly of the valley with a little sprig of maidenhair, sprays of which are also used to advantage in the body of the cluster.

A SHOWER BOUQUET.

Robert Kett.

BLOOMING 108, ILLS.—On June 1 and 2 this city was the scene of a Plower Pestival which in a measure rivaled the Mardi Gras of New Orleans and the carnival of the Veiled Prophets of St. Louis.

Herbaceous Plant Notes.

Ilyacinths and tulips, excepting a few late flowering sorts of the latter, are past some time ago, but the mixed border does not appear to have suffered on this account, perennials having taken their place. There is a wealth of gay colored blossoms to be found here now, backed up by the fresh young growth of the later blooming species. Only a few of the short lived spring flowering plants are entirely out of bloom, most of the early bloomers holding out until June. Aubretias, which flowered with the seillas and snowdrops are not past their best yet; the mossy phloxes are still perfect; arabis and the early candytuft are as attractive as ever and even the primulas hold their own and add materially to the graud late May show in the herbaceous border.

All the doronicums are well set with perfect bloom, though some of the first flowers on D. Austriacum and D. Caucasicum show signs of decay, but the younger blossoms are now only at their best. Tiarella cordifolia looks better than it did a month ago; Polemonium reptans, with its half drooping flowers, is graceful and effective as ever; Alyssum saxatile compactum is a solid mass of bloom, as is the dwarfer Erysimum pulchellum; Phlox amæna and P. divaricata also add greatly to the general effect. It is true that early in May we miss the bright scarlet and crimson colors in the herbaceous border, but as we have all shades of pink, yellow, blue. purple and white, we can well afford to be without the more dazzling colors for a while. By the 20th of that month we usually have the gay oriental poppies, the brilliant Pæonia tenuifolia and the bright Lychnis floscuculi fl. pl., soon to be followed by the glittering Lychnis viscaria fl. pl., and ever after there is enough diversity in color and forms to satisfy the most fastidious.

Several of the taller irises are now well out. I. Florentina, almost white, with a faint tinge of lilac in the large flowers, is the foremost with us and the deep velvety purple I. Germaniea atropurpurea is only two or three days later; of both we were able to cut quite a number of tall spikes on the 16th and again on the 20th without leaving the rows entirely destitute of flowers. Asphodelus luteus is now beginning to open out its tall racemes of fra-grant yellow flowers on the strongest specimens, while on the smaller plants, they are just beginning to elongate. This is a most desirable plant, not only when in flower but also on account of the graceful bending form of the numerous awl shaped leaves, which are green all winter. Asphodelus ramosus grows taller, the racemes reaching a height of four to five feet; the flowers are quite large, white with a brownish line in each little segement; the leaves are broad and sword like and the plant is highly esteemed for planting as an isolated specimen on the lawn, but a generous clump of at least six to eight growths should be used in such a position.

Anemone nemorosa in a shady nook has been in bloom for a month or more and none of the pretty flowers show any signs of decay. A. nemorosa fl. pl., is a pure white double form of great value; in keeping qualities it even surpasses the charming single form. A. Apennina alba, which came into bloom at about the same time also continues in fine shape and is a great favorite here. All these are dwarf plants, not over six inches high and should be planted in partial shade; they succeed in open spaces well enough but their flowers do not last near so long there. A. sylvestris, is considerably taller, twelve to eighteen inches, and not so early, but was well covered with bloom May 15, with many buds to come yet; it has large flowers on long wiry stems and is very useful for cutting. Globularia vulgaris with its round button-like flowers is called by many persons the blue double daisy, to which undoubtedly it bears a strong resemblance at a glance, in foliage and growth as well as in the shape and size of the flowers; it has been in flower for two weeks and will continue until July. G. trichosantha is about two weeks later, otherwise there is not much difference to be noticed.

The blue Centaurea montana and its white and so-called rose relations are all coming out rapidly; their large sized flowers are very acceptable for cutting, and being such remarkably free bloomers we may come again the next day. Recently divided plants are slow to start into growth; they do not flower quite so early but generally give us a succession of bloom throughout summer and fall, and therefore it is a good plan to divide part of the stock every spring. Lotus corniculatus, that charming little creeper, with its red and yellow pea shaped flowers is useful wherever we may introduce it; we can cover bare spots with it in a short time, plant it among or in front of shrubs along the front of borders; we can use it for edging or in the rockery where it will form lace work over the rocks and bloom freely for months. The double variety is freely for months.

Interesting and equally floriferous.
Among dicentras, I think D. formosa deserves mention; the free growth, somewhat taller than D. eximia, and much brighter color of the flowers are its chief recommendations; the finely divided foliage in itself would be an ornament alone throughout the season, without the additional charm of the curiously shaped, drooping flowers. Aquilegia flabellata is I think the first of the family to bloom and certainly a good thing; the flowers are white throughout, large, of remarkable texture, more substantial than any other of the many beautiful varieties, the plant dwarf and stout in growth with beautiful deep glaucous foliage. It is one of the comparatively newer introductions and still very scarce in this country, but the plant has a great future, apparently. A. glandulosa and A. cœrulea are a little later.

CLUSTER OF BRIDESMAID ROSES AND MIGNONETTE.

J. B. KELLER.

Notes and Comments.

Owing to the continuous unfavorable weather during May, the bedding out has been delayed. Zonal pelargoniums, or geraniums, as they are commonly called, are still among the leaders for this purpose. There was a time when General Grant was head and shoulders above all others in Philadelphia, as well as in many other cities as a bedder, but never counted on much as a market plant because it did not bloom sufficiently early for that purpose. Many people have to see a plant in bloom before they will buy it. Victor Millot was a good market variety, being dwarf, early and free-flowering, and a good bedder. The color was not so bright as that of Grant, having in it less yellow. La Pilote was the next favorite, being an early and free bloomer and bright scarlet in color with semi-double flowers. It has not seemed to make much headway so far as 1 have been able to observe in other cities. Its supremacy is now threatened by what I presume to be an American seedling, the S. A. Nutt, which is much darker in color than any of those above mentioned; and for that reason, by many it is more appreciated, being what its admirers declare "less glaring" than others that are suitable for ontdoor bedding. I imagine that S. A. Nutt was raised by John Thorpe, when the old firm of Hallock, Son & Thorpe was in existence at Queens, N. Y. Mr. Thorpe had a friend by that name who was in his company a great deal at the convention of the S. A. F. held in Philadelphia in 1886. If my surmise is correct it goes to show how long it takes some good things to become well known.

Mr. John Welsh Young belongs the credit for having brought this meritorious variety into Philadelphia, and as it is advertised by the ten thousand in some parts of the country it may be considered generally popular.

A public park is in course of construc-tion at Chestnut Hill, with most of the best features of the popular Willow Grove Park, with the added advantage of cheaper car fare to reach there. The elec-tric trolley cars run directly from Philadelphia right into the park, a distance of at least twelve miles, for a nickel, C. A. Knapp has the contract to furnish the bedding plants. A large United States flag will be one of the prominent features, though when on a visit there a few days ago, very few plants had been put out on account of the unfavorable weather; with better weather the planting will be put through with a rush.

1 notice what Mr. Wallace has to say in last week's Florist in defense of the report of the meeting of the American Carnation Society held in New York in 1891. He is in error when he states that I wish to reflect on his abilities as a stenographer. Nothing was further from my thoughts. Only a matter of history—that is all. It is to be regretted that he misunderstood what was expected of him, though it cannot now be helped. As a member of the executive committee, I expected a verbatim report of the meeting, or the engagement of a stenographer would not have been for a moment considered, nor would the consequent expense have been warranted. I complained about it at the time, and have regretted the fact ever since.

Mr. Scott makes the statement that though giving them all due praise for planting outdoors. Mr. H. H. Battles does not think they should be tabooed for that purpose, and he is an authority in such matters. He has produced some most telling effects with zinnias, notwithstanding the fact that they are "absolutely regular in form, stiff and formal." There is undoubtedly a place for the zinnia as a cut flower in the hands of an artist, though possibly at the present time, under the existing state of international affairs, it may not be in the best of taste to use the prevailing shades in the colors of the zinnia, namely, orange and yellow, on festive occasions. Mr. Scott will, of course, use his own judgment in this matter, but my advice is to modify the sweeping statements made, because if a flowering plant has a place outdoors the flowers from that plant ought to find a place on some occasions indoors.

By the by, the name of Mr. Battles reminds me that he is so far convalescent as to be able to take a trip to Albany, N. Y., to render advice and superintend the floral fleatures of the wedding to take place June 1, between one of Albany's belles, Miss Pruyn, and one of Philadelphia's prominent citizens, Mitchel Harrison, Esq. It is to be hoped that the trip will so far benefit Mr. Battles as to give him back his former health and strength.

Mr. Stephen Mortensen, Southampton, Pa., was married last week to Miss Annie Engard, Wyndmoor, Pa. Mr. Mortensen started in business for himself a little over two years ago. Prior to that time, for some years he was foreman for Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill. Congratulations are now in order and are herewith extended, and may their pathway through life be strewn with treble N roses. E. L.

Clematis Paniculata.

So rapidly has this beautiful and restful hardy climber been distributed, and so simple are its requirements, that little need be said in explanation of the illustration herewith presented excepting that it shows a portion of a space about 100 feet long which is planted as a hedge on the north side of the office at Waban Con-servatories, Natick, Mass., and to call attention to its desirability for clothing unsightly or waste places with a mantle which is beautiful the whole year through. Its rich green foliage during summer, its masses of fragrant white blossoms which throughout fall and winter become clouds of feathery seed vessels, should make it pre-eminently a favorite everywhere.

Ornamental Bedding.

PART VII.

Count the carpet and design beds all over the land, and you will find the Maltese crosses and stars to be the leaders. A star is easily laid out, yet an old florist told me, speaking of a five-pointed star, that it was an easy matter to get the four points, but the fifth one always gave him trouble and made him nervous; and another old gardener had to ask a carpenter to make a pattern of strips once, when he was requested to make a star.

CLEMATIS PANICULATA

For a five-pointed star draw a circle of the desired diameter, divide in five equal parts, set pegs, tie twine between alternate points until you return to the first one as per Fig. 26. Or if you do not want the points so narrow, especially if it is a small bed, draw a smaller concentric circle, mark the inside points on this by stretching the twine from the outside points past the center, and where the twine crosses the smaller circle, put in your pegs. Fig. 27 shows such a star; it also shows a little variation in the classification. planting. The rule given for the Maltese cross about distribution of colors holds good for stars; the points should not be planted in different colors.

The six-pointed star is laid out in much the same way as the cross, being divided in six parts. Here we can vary the planting, considering the design as two tri-angles, one laid on top of the other. The stars can be laid out in circular or other beds as part of the design. Fig. 28 put in a circular bed may be planted thus: Tri-augle a, Coleus Golden Bedder, bordered with achyranthes; points, b, Coleus Black Hero; c, Santolina incana, and a border of Alternanthera paronychioides major around the whole thing; make the bed altogether twelve feet in diameter, and you have quite an effective bed very easily

The crescent is another popular design from the astral regions, and easily laid out, as Fig. 29 shows; all you want is two centers and from them curves with suitable radius. If the radius from center b is five feet and you draw a five-pointed star as Fig. 27 with a radius of three feet six inches with b as center, you have a star and a crescent, which look nice when cut out in the lawn.

F1g. 30.

Fig. 30 is another easy bed to lay out, and even if only planted with scarlet geraniums, bordered with Mme. Salleroi, it is a welcome change from the circles and diamonds. It can also be planted with colcus, etc., and it can be improved a little by laying it, out as suggested on a little by laying it out as suggested on the two sides; no difficulty in doing it and it looks neat. Suppose the circle in which the center lies is drawn within a radius of ten feet six inches and the sides of the bed are drawn from the five centers with a radius of six feet six inches, it can be planted for about the same price as a tenfoot circle, and it makes more show.

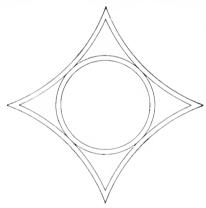

Fig. 31.

Fig. 31 is a design of similar construction. When laid out on a generous scale, say that the circular part is sixteen feet, planted with red French cannas, with a double border of John Good geraniums, the points filled with Coleus Verschaffeltii, bordered with C. Golden Bedder; spreading thirty-two feet from point to point, it makes a very bold and effective impression on a large lawn. H. Hansen.

New York.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE AMOUNTED TO LIT-TLE. - REDUCED RECEIPTS FOLLOW. -MILDEWED ROSES RESULTANT FROM DAMP WEATHER. PEONIES ARE POPU-LAR -TWO NEW FLORAL COMPANIES.-LOUIS SCHMUTZ, CLEARY & CO. AND THE WEATHER DIVIDE THE HONORS.—DEATH OF DENNIS M'CARTHY. -OFF FOR EUROPE. -INTERESTING JOTTINGS OF THE ME-

The features of Memorial Day in this market were entire indifference on the part of the public, dullness in the retail trade, almost complete stagnation in wholesale centers, heavy receipts of stock in all lines of cut flowers and low prices as a result. Roses were decidedly poor in quality, but there were lots of them. Carnations were good and also plenty. Sweet peas showed the effects of the damp weather almost as much as did the outdoor stock. Lily of the valley, lilac and other garden products were in the worst kind of shape from the effects of rain and fog and if not sold at once quickly assumed an appearance that finished their usefulness. There was a finished their usefulness. There was a small amount of shipping done, chiefly too New England points, where the local demand in response to local patriotism had forced local prices to such a limit that there was money in buying from New York at New York prices.

The present week sees a substantial reduction in receipts of cut flowers, roses especially, which, if the demand assumes normal proportions, will quickly bring values back to reasonable limits, but mildew has been at work and the quality has sustained a severe blow that seriously affects net returns. Lilacs and outdoor lilies of the valley are about at an end, but pæonies and snowballs follow them, and the avalanche of garden grown stock will continue until outdoor roses have passed. Pæonies seem to be popular and now bring good prices, but the bulk of the bloom is not yet ready for market, and final results on pæonies cannot yet be given. It may be safely stated, however, that their position as a florists' product is strengthêned each year.

Dennis McCarthy, who for some time has been foreman for T. W. Stemmler, at his large establishment at Madison, N. J., died on Saturday, May 28, of heart disease. He was well known to the trade, having been previously employed by Jas. Weir & Sons, of Brooklyn, John Henderson Co., of Flushing, N. Y., and O. A. Slaughter, of Madison. He leaves a wife and several children.

Reed & Keller's wire design factory was burglarized on the night of May 26, but little of value was found by the thieves.

Thomas E. Weathered sails for Europe on the Lucania on June 4. T. W. E. Ebbinger, of the Boskoop Horticultural Company, sails for Holland on the Apaardum on the same day.

J. L. Schiller and Miss Mary E. Chadwick were married at Haccorn.

wick were married at Hagerstown, Md., June 1.

Ernst Asmus is up in Sullivan county upon a piscatorial expedition.

The establishment formerly conducted by Ed. Littlejolm, at Chatham, N. J., has passed into the hands of the Chatham Rose Company, under which title it will be run hereafter.

John Smith, who was for many years foreman for J. H. Taylor, of Bayside, has bought half of the Lancy business at Woodhaven. The new firm is known as

Thursday evening, notwithstanding the spring rush, and bowling scores are ascending. Last Thursday Louis Schmutz

"ketched the pot."

Cleary & Co. have been compelled to lease the opposite building, 57 Vesey street, to accommodate the tremendous stock of plants sent in for Tuesday and Friday auctions.

Manda Brothers have opened a retail store at 768 Lexington avenue.

GREATLY INCREASED BUSINESS MARKS THE CLOSE OF MAY IN THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE .- STOCK WAS NOT OF THE BEST. PRICES SHOW LITTLE ADVANCE.-GROW-ERS PLANTING ROSES.—P.EONY NIGHT IS NEAR. - OTHER FLORISTS' CLUB MAT-

Philadelphia.

TERS.

May left us smiling, the thirtieth and thirty-first being beautiful days, which, after the month of almost continuous rains, was a most welcome change. When Memorial Day is fine it means greatly increased business for those of the craft who depend mainly on cemetery trade. This season all hands seemed to have fared better than usual. Westcott Bro-thers and Philip Alburger, at Laurel Hill, sold quantities of plants and cut flowers, and were rushed for a week previous getting out vases and baskets of plants to fill orders for the decoration of various cemetery lots. John P. Habermehl & Brother were also very busy; in fact all the suburban florists had all they could The stores also seemed to have an extra demand and did very well. The commission men could hardly handle their trade. It was not that flowers were so scarce, but that the grading of stock took so long. The continued wet weather had been very hard on roses, and first grade and extras were scarce, and it required time to get them assorted. There was considerable shipping to out of town florists, and that, together with the extra demand of the home trade, cleared up everything salable. There was considerable immortelle work, some of the stores making a specialty of large designs for the soldiers' graves. These are ordered by business firms who present them to the various Grand Army posts after they have been used for a few days to decorate their show windows. Messrs. Wolf, Habermehl & Brother and Hugh Graham had some elaborate pieces.

Considering the demand prices for cut flowers advanced very little. Roses sold at from $4 to $6 per hundred for first grade stock. There were very few extras. Beautics sold at from $1 to $3 per dozen for good flowers. Carnations of ordinary quality brought $1.50 per hundred. The extras sold for $2 and the culls for $1 per hundred. Sweet peas sold for from 35 cents to 75 cents per hundred, and there were quantities for the demand. Longiflorums brought $5 to $8 per hundred. Paonies are to be had by the wagon load at from $2 to $4 per hundred. Smilax is a bit scarce at from 15 cents to 20 cents per string. Lily of the valley sells well at from $3 to $4 per hundred, and corn-flower commands from 10 cents to 25 cents per hundred.

The growers are now busy planting their rose bouses for next season's cut-ting. They have been delayed in getting the soil, the continuous rains keeping it too wet to handle. As far as we can see the varieties selected for next season's bread winners are: Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Meteor, Kaiserin Carnot, planted in quantity in the order named. The fancies will mostly be let nlone, as the money, after all, is in the staple kinds

The next meeting of the Florists' Club should be an interesting one as there is to be quite an exhibit of pæonies, and Joseph Heacock is to lead a discussion among the members as to what they know about this showy flower. The cases for the trophies and books belonging to the club are now finished and John Westcott, who had charge of their construction, says be intentionally made them larger than is now necessary so that the boys will hustle to win some more prizes to fill the empty spaces. That Spaulding cup would be at home here now; it seems to us that it must feel very lonely all by itself at Buffalo.

Chicago.

LARGER STOCKS THAN EVER IN THE HIS-TORY OF THE TRADE. — LOW PRICES WERE THE RULE.—STOCK FROM COLD STORAGE DEMORALIZED THE MARKET .-COLORED FLOWERS HAD THE CALL.-KENNICOTT'S THIRTY-FIVE CENT BURG-

Never in the history of the trade was there such an abundance of cut flowers as last week. Every grower seemed to have made a special effort to send to market every available bloom and pickling was resorted to far more than ever; roses that should have been sent in on Monday were held back until Wednesday or Thursday.

Carnations suffered more from the pickling process than did any other flower, as one-third of all the carnations in the market Memorial week had been held on the plants from one to two weeks too long before being cut. They were utterly useless except to depress the market and spoil the sale of better stock. Narcissus Poeticus which were cut in the first or second week of May and kept in cold storage for Memorial Day looked quite fresh after their long chill, but their keeping qualities were about exhausted. process was tried with tulips, but without success. For several years growers of large numbers of pæonies have cut these blooms just as the buds commenced to show color, keeping them in cold storage until there was a demand for them. They have been held in fairly good condition for a month or more. A large lot of preonies grown in the south was held in this way for Memorial Day and kept well but the great quantity of home grown bloom cut off the demand for pickled stock. Any one who watched the market closely during the past week was certainly convinced that to the pernicious practice of pickling, more than to any other cause, was due the great abundance of stock and accompanying ruinously low prices at a time when good prices should have prevailed.

Good roses were sold out closer than any other flowers, only a few Brides and extra long stemmed Beauties being left over. A large proportion of the roses in market were of inferior quality. Teas brought from $1 to $5 per 100, the bet-ter price being for extra fine stock. The market was swamped with earnations; as with roses, those of inferior quality largely predominating. They brought from 25 cents to $2 per 100, with a few particularly fine blooms at $4. The stock of first quality sold out fairly well, while the poor grades would not sell at any price. The colored flowers had the call, very few white flowers being wanted. There were several fine lots of longiflorum in the market, but they found slow sale at lower prices than they have brought at any time this season, $2 to $4 per 100, many being jobbed at even less. About the same amount of this stock was in the market last season and sold readily for

$1 per dozen.

The wholesalers report the amount of stock received at from 50% to 100% larger than ever before. The retailers generally found business for Memorial Day not up to what was expected, despite the fact that there was a larger stock of flowers handled during the week than ever before in the same length of time, but lower prices prevailed for the week than in any other week in the past year. Since Memorial Day the market has been steady, with prices somewhat higher. Good stock sells fairly well, very little being held over. Nearly all spring flowers are out of the market now except pæonies. Kennicott Bros.' place was burglarized last Monday night, the robbers cutting a hole in the glass, reaching through and unbolting the door. The only thing missed was thirty-five cents from the cash I. T. A.

drawer.

Boston.

UNPRECEDENTED MEMORIAL DAY TRADE RIVALED EASTER AND CHRISTMAS.-OUT-DOOR FLOWERS SCARCE .- RHODODEN-DRON SHOW POSTPONED ONE WEEK.

By unanimous consent Memorial Day, 1898, is pronounced to have been the best on record for the New England florists' trade. Many, indeed, there are who claim that as an all-round, profitable, and in every way satisfactory occasion it takes the palm over both Easter and Christmas. The prices quoted in advance by the Boston wholesalers looked out of proportion in comparison with the quotations in other cities but, they held good on Friday, Saturday and Sunday and everything was cleared out. Of outdoor bloom but little was available, the same cold, rainy weather that prevented snowballs and rhododendrons from opening having a disastrous effect on tulips, lilacs and other plants that were already in bloom. This condition was fortunate for the growers of the greenhouse product as they had a very heavy crop and the scarcity of outdoor bloom raised its value. There was a disposition noted, too, on the part of buyers to prefer the choicer flowers and there was a willingness to pay for them that was exceedingly gratifying. Those who had made big preparations for a demand for dried and artificial stock were doomed to disappointment and had much of the made up goods left on hand for next year. Altogether the florists, growers, wholesalers and retailers, including the street fakirs of Boston have every reason to be thankful for their experience of Memorial Day. New England is paved with little com-munities in which the same spirit prevails and the tremendous shipping trade to these places which the wholesalers were called upon to supply, was the very best kind of proof that all through this section the florists enjoyed the same good fortune as their Boston brothers.
Outdoor vegetation is considerably behind the average this year, as to time of blooming. Mollis azaleas are just popping open and the first of June ands wis-tarias, those that survived the late freezes, just at their best. Snowballs are still green and no bigger than walnuts; buds on rose bushes are searcely apparent.

The rhododendron show of the Massa-chusetts Horticultural Society, which was scheduled for this week, has been postponed until June 7 and 8, and unless warmer weather should come quickly the preony show which should take place on Saturday, the 11th, will also have to be set back one week.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

Subscription $1.00 a Year. To Europe, $2.00. Subscriptions accepted only from those in the trade.

Advertisements, 10 Cents a Line, Agate; $1.00 per inch. Cash with Order.

No Special Position Guaranteed.

Discounts, 6 times, 5 per cent; 13 times, 10 per cent; 26 times, 20 per cent; 52 times, 30 per cent.

The Advertising Department of the AMERICAN FLORIST is for Florists, Seedsmen, and dealers in wares pertaining to those lines ONLY.

Orders for less than one-half inch space not accepted. Advertisements must reach us by Wednesday to secure insertion in the issue for the following Saturday.

Address THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO., Chicago,

Francis Supior, the well known Philadelphia violet grower, sails for France June 11.

K. GSOSEMET is the name used by a Greek street fakir to advertise his Cape iasmine flowers.

Ax English paper reports a case of freesia bulbs forming new bulbs after planting without producing any foliage.

THE Royal Horticultural Society of England has awarded Messrs. Paul & Son, Cheshunt, a certificate for a double flowered form of the well known hardy perennial, Alyssum saxatile.

WE are in receipt of the third annual park report of Indianapolis, Ind., from which it appears that considerable improvement has been made in the park system of that city during the past year. J. Clyde Power is superintendent and engineer.

THE Royal Botanic Garden at Berlin is to be transferred to a new location. The present site, which has been devoted to the same purpose during the past two hundred years, has become too small, and it is surrounded by large houses injurious to vegetation.

The fortieth annual report of the Missouri State Horticultural Society has come to hand. The book of some 400 pages contains a large amount of useful information on horticulture in general and is well illustrated. The summer meeting of this society will be held at West Plains, Mo., June 7, 8 and 9. The secretary is L. A. Goodman, Westport, Mo.

THERE is now pending in congress a bill to authorize and encourage the holding of a National Exposition of American Products and Manufactures, especially suited for export, at Philadelphia in 1899. The exposition is to be held under the auspices of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, a public institution, and is a matter of deep interest to manufacturers, agriculturists, horticulturists and florists, as it will teach American producers the requirements of the markets of the world and at the same time do much to acquaint foreign buyers with the superiority of American products.

THE National Florists' Board of Trade calls attention to an act of the Ohio legislature which relates to insolvent debtors. The law provides, in substance, that every conveyance, transfer mortgage or confession of judgment made by a debtor in contemplation of insolvency or with intent to prefer a creditor, shall be void, and that every such conveyance, transfer, mortgage or judgment made while the debtor is insolvent, within ninety days next preceding a general assignment, shall be void, whatever the intent with which it is made. This applies whether the debtorknew of his insolvency or not. The law will not go into effect until November 1.

Cut Flower Price Lists Received.

Louisville Florists' Supply and Exchange, Louisville; H. L. Sunderbruch Co., Cincinnati; Wm. F. Kastings, Buf-

Red Ants in Greenhouses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Please tell me what to do to rid my greenhouses of the little red ant. My houses are built on sandy soil and the ants bore in the pots and kill the plants. They bore in all the pots alike. A. A. II.

Novelties Registered.

The Conard & Jones Company, of West Grove, Pa., have registered at the secretary's office of the Society of American Florists, a new canna, "Admiral Dewey," to be introduced in 1898, and a new rose of climbing habit, "Royal Cluster."

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

Catalogues Received.

American Road Machine Co., Kennett Square, Pa., ventilating apparatus; The Walker Fertilizer Co., Clifton Springs, N. Y., fertilizers; Knight, Clark & Co., West-A., fertilizers; Kingnt, Clark & Co., Westham Nursery, Langley, Eastbourne, England, plants: Fairmount Tree Protector Co., Philadelphia, Pa., insecticide; J. H. H. Boyd, Gage, Tenn., tree seeds; Greening Bros., Greening P. O., Mich., nursery stock; J. Lambert & Son., Trier, Germany, seeds and plants.

Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture.

The yearbook of the Department of Agriculture is a mine of information on agriculture and related sciences. In addition to the usual reports of the various divisions, many papers and special reports by experts are spread through its pages, and in most cases these are freely illustrated. The more important of these papers from The more important of these papers from a purely horticultural standpoint are as follows: "Lawns and Lawn Making," by F. Lamson-Scribner; "Hybrids and their Utilization in Plant Breeding," by Walter T. Swingle and Herbert J. Webber; "Some Interesting Soil Problems," by Milton Whitney; "Additional Notes on Seed Testing," by Gilbert L. Hicks and Sothoron Key; and "Danger of Importing Insect Pests," by L. C. Howard.

Greenhouse Building.

Buffalo, N. Y.-C. D. Zimmerman, one greenhouse 18x30, hollow brick sides, cement floor, steam heat, angle iron frame.

East Greenwich, R. I.-M. B. I. Goddard, one conservatory.

Lewiston, Me.-E. Saunders, one greenhouse.

Holbrook, Mass.-A. Belcher, one commercial house, 20x100.

Newtonville, Mass.-Mr. Wheeler, one conservatory.

Cleveland, O.—J. M. Gasser, seven greenhouses, each 21x120, short-span-tosouth.

Madison, N. J.—Gustave Besanceny, range of thoroughly modern, steam heated rosehouses by Henry W. Gibbons.

Soil for Rose Growing.

There is a well-grounded belief among rose growers in general that they must make use of what they term maiden loam, it being understood that loam that has never before been used for rose growing purposes is indispensable, especially to rose growing under glass for cut flowers. Are rose growers justified in this belief?

I would say that in my judgment it is useless to attempt to grow roses and expect what might be considered success with anything but virgin soil. I like sod from grass land that has been mowed or pastured a year or two, plowed three or four inches deep, the soil to be what is generally called a strong loam. Compost this with one-third cow manure and with proper treatment after planting, the plants should flourish. Soil in which roses have been grown for a season becomes loose and friable by the action of the roots and continual watering, and even though composted again would not, in my opinion, prove satisfactory, although I confess I have not tried it, thinking the risk too great. It would, no doubt, be all right again if spread on the ground and another crop of grass raised for three or four years, but then I suppose it would be restored to its original consistency by the action of the elements and the decayed vegetable matter from the grass.

Sea Bright, N. J. FRANK McMahon.

It seems to be customary in this section to select a piece of ground that has never been turned by the plow, and to use only the tough sod in making up the soil heap. I was of the same mind and for three years used maiden loam, the only perceptible advantage being a saving in fertilizers. The root fiber when rotted in the bench gives nourishment to the plants, consequently I used less fer-tilizers in the soil heap. But last year's experience taught me that I could do without maiden loam and grow good roses. I filled a house with a compost of sand and soil from a plowed field in equal parts, and therein planted Brides from 212 inch pots July 10. During the whole season this house produced more roses of a better quality than my other houses given the same treatment except that the benches were filled with maiden loam. I cannot see where rose growers are justified in their belief that maiden loam is indispensable, for three months after planting the soil loses its vitality to a certain extent, and the plants have then to rely on mulching for their support. From my experience I claim that sod of three years growth, from a sandy From my experience I claim that loam, will produce as good results, both in plants and buds, as maiden loam under the same treatment. R. M. S.

Madison, N. J.

It is stated by scientific agricultural chemists, I believe, that there are bacteria at work in soil which exert an influence over it, "in changing otherwise inert substances into matter suitable for the food of plants, converting the nitrogenous matter of organic origin into soluble nitrates." Such being the fact, if by actual experiment there has been found a difference in rose growing operations, in a comparative test, in favor of soil that has never been used inside a greenhouse before, it is just possible that by this unnatural and artificial treatment of the soil the bacteria exhaust themselves, and eannot increase and multiply through lack of congenial conditions. If this is the root of the trouble, what do scientific men advise as a remedy? In farming operations the bacteria peculiar to the successful growing of clover, under certain conditions become exhausted or are inoperative, and in that event, if I mistake not, our friends, the scientific operators at the experiment stations, recommend the use of soil that is known to possess the desired bacteria, and to apply it as a dressing to the soil on which it is expected to sow clover, and in that way impregnate it—if that is not the proper term, I hope I have conveyed the correct idea. Whether this is practical and can be applied to our soil that may be defi-cient in a friendly bacteria, can only be known by intelligent experiment by florists, or better still, scientific men who have made this branch of agricultural chemistry a study. One way could be tried-but whether with any hope of success our friends at the experiment stations can advise us—and that is to apply some new soil to that which has been taken out of the greenhouses wherein roses had been grown; in that way if friendly bacteria were lacking they would be re-introduced, and thus in a given time they might bring back our soil to the same condition in which it was before it had been used for roses. There may come a time when the renewal of soil into its pristine usefulness may be a serious item in the florists' business, especially in rose growing. A little light at this time would be opportune, and most of our friends at the experiment stations, who are more or less directly interested in these matters, would be only too glad to help us if the question as above was submitted to them. EDWIN LONSDALE.

Chrysanthemum Notes.

In selecting the varieties that are intended for exhibition, we have to consult the scale of points under which they are to be judged and figure principally on varieties of good even color and fine form, with well clothed stems sufficiently strong to hold the flowers erect. A great many of the best exhibition varieties are of tall growth and must therefore be given plenty of head room in which to properly develop. Among such varieties are Golden Wedding, Modesto, Maytlower, Mrs. S. T. Murdock, Eugene Dailledouze, Evangelme. Maud Dean, Viviand Morel, and Chas. Davis, which, from plants set out next week, will attain a height of about five to six feet and should therefore have not less than seven leet of head room, while such favorites as Mrs Jerome Jones, Major Bonnaffon, Ivory, Mrs. H. Robin-son, Geo. W. Childs, W. H. Lincoln, Mrs. Perrin, Western King and Defender will get along very well with five feet of head Prant all red varieties by themselves and in a place where they can be shaded when in bloom it necessary, and also that they may be treated separately from the other colors, as most of the reds dislike much begin amount. We plant all our exhibition varieties from eight to ten inches apart, according to their growth and ray them to single stem. In this way we tool at possible to get a greater number of high grade blooms from a bench team from plants with two stems, and partle git hefter returns.

There were a number of new varieties of 1807 exhibited at the shows last year that had none promising points, and no don receive of these will be more in evidence that coung cason, among them long Mrs. [E. ]. Ole sner, yellow, Evangeline white, of this form. Mrs. C. H. Weens, white praid Western Eing white has if we can only get it to grow Mrs. [E. V. Persson, white Detender, red. [E. V. Persson, white Detender, red. [E. V. Persson, white Style of Major Bonnaffon; J. H. Woodford, white; and Sunstone, a light bronze of fine form and growth.

Among the novelties of 1898 that came under our notice and with which we were very favorably impressed are Solar Queen, light yellow; Frank Hardy, white, of good form; Wm. H. Chadwick, incurved white, resembling Mrs. J. Jones; Autumn Glory, pink, after the style of Viviand Morel, but of an even shade of light pink; Pennsylvania, light yellow; Snow Queen, white, of good form; and Mrs. C. H. Peirce, a fine yellow, not extra large but of fine form and good substance. All of the above are making fine clean growth up to this date.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Killing Aphides by Vaporizing Tobacco.

As many do not appreciate the difference between this and the old method of fumigating by smoke, a description of the method which we have followed here for some years may be of interest to some of your readers, as I have no doubt many of them have found out to their cost that to burn the stems not only destroys the color of the fully developed buds, but is very apt to injure those in a partially developed stage. This was our own case many years ago and compelled us to quit fumigation in the regular form in all blooming houses; then we tried spreading stems cut short over the surface of the soil, distributing very thinly; this destroved the aphides and soon killed some of the plants also, which compelled us to seek other means to accomplish the same end. We tried stems on the walks of the houses; these had to be changed very frequently, which increased the expense materially, so finally we adopted present method. We have found it effectual, and also a great saving in each year's expenses for tobacco stems.

The first thing required is a steam boiler (if one is not already on the place); the size must be governed by the size of the greenhouse plant. For say 50,000 feet of glass a boiler of eight or ten horse power will do the work very well; place it in the boiler pit, the nearer central to the work required of it the better, and it should be so placed that the steam has considerable rise before entering the pipes in the greenhouse; we carry a 112-inch main part of the way and 1-inch the balance; from this half-inch branches are taken out with tees at each greenhouse and a half-inch pipe run along under the front bench with half-inch valves and nipples placed at about fifty feet apart; no matter what length the house is, at the last valve an elbow can be used into which the valve can be serewed with a short nipple, as it is not necessary to run a return pipe to the boiler. All the piping should have a fall from the highest point near the boiler, so that when the steam is turned into the pipes all condensed water can be forced out at the different openings. Where the houses are already heated by steam all that is necessary is to make openings at about every fifty feet in one of your flow pipes, prelerably this should not be over one meh, otherwise it may raise the temperature too high at times. In these openings place half inch valves as described Presuming that this arrangement is all leady, the next thing to consider is tobacco liquid. This we make by having me or more barrels prepared by placing them on end high enough to place a pail a tratering pot under the faucet, make a reconstraint by making strips about 114 in thick cross ways to form a kind of a This should nearly bit the end of 4 the carrel and be placed in the bottom; then lay some stems across these to prevent the refuse falling in between the slats; next fill the barrel as full as possible with stems, pressing them as tight as possible, covering with a broad board and heavy weight to keep them down; then fill the barrel with cold rain water; let stand in a cool place for about forty-eight hours and it will be ready for use.

To apply this effectively, take a piece of steam hose about two feet long with a half inch female coupling secured fast to one end to attach easily to the valve; at the other end a piece of ordinary 4-inch gas pipe about eighteen inches long should be firmly secured; then take ordinary butter tubs, or any large pail will do, draw off about three pints of the liquid from the barrel, put in the tub, place the piece of gas pipe so that it almost touches the bottom of the tub. put a bundle of stems into the tub to prevent the liquid boiling over, turn on the steam with from ten to fifteen pounds pressure, open the valve in the greenhouse to allow the condensed water to escape as soon as live steam comes freely, attach the hose and turn the steam into the tub, or rather tubs, as there should be one for every valve in the house and they must all be opened at the same time or as soon as the operator can get from one to the other, commencing always at the one farthest from the boiler; let the steam remain on long enough to fill the house quite full of vapor, then turn off and allow to settle down quietly; it usually takes from ten to twelve minutes to fill an ordinary sized greenhouse. For a plant of any size it is better to have two sets of tubs and hose connections so that while one house is cooling off the other set can be put in use in the next house, and so on till the whole is completed.

It will be found when taking the tubs out of the houses that there is fully as much liquid in them as there was before turning the steam into them, and it looks as black as the original; this should be drained out from the stems as much as possible placed in tubs or pails and allowed to get quite cold, when it can be used for making the next lot of juice, instead of clear water, which will make the next lot much stronger than the first. Should it be found that the first lot is not strong enough to be effective, it would be better to draw it all off from the first harrel and have a second barrel prepared in the same way, putting the liquid into the latter; thus it will be much stronger after going through the second barrel. The heavier the pressure on these barrels the stronger the liquid will be, and the amount required must be governed by its strength; after a few times the matter can be easily adjusted by the operator. In conclusion, always choose a shall day and a cool one if possible, so that the ventilators can be kept closed tight for an hour after vaporizing, if possible. A little practice will make this a very simple, though like the ordinary fumigating, not a particularly pleasant operation, yet necessary at least it has been found so IOHS N. MAY. by the writer.

Steam and Hot Water Heating.

PART VI NECESSITY OF RAPID CIRCULA-

TION IN HOT WATER HEATING SYSTEMS.

When hot water boilers are set with sufficient capacity to properly carry the radiating surface with which they are connected, it will depend largely upon the construction of the pipe system whether or not there will be a waste of fuel. When a boiler has sufficient capacity to heat any certain number of square for of radiation, it means that a certain number of gallons of hot water must pass out from the boiler through the flow-pipe and return again to the boiler every few minutes, and unless there is proper provision in the pipe system to allow the water to flow freely to and from the boiler, so that as many heat units as possible may be extracted from the products of combustion, the boiler will not be able to do its full duty, and a waste of fuel is the result.

The more rapidly the water circulates from the pipe system through the boiler the more heat from the fire will it absorb. While water is a very poor conductor under certain conditions, it is a very good absorbant and conductor of heat under certain other conditions. Water cannot heat without being put in motion, therefore the more rapid the motion the quicker it will become hot. Heat must be properly applied in order to accomplish its purpose rapidly and economically. It will never do to apply the heat on the top of the water surface.

Unnecessary friction in pipes, heating coils and fittings should be avoided. Long sweep elbows, long return bends and long branch tees should be used in hot water heating in greenhouses, and the ends of wrought iron pipe should be carefully reamed out so as to give as little resistance to the flow of water as possible.

These are special points upon which the successful operation of a hot water heating plant depends. In steam heating plants there is a pressure of pounds to cause circulation through the system, but with water there is scarcely ounces of pressure to cause circulation, hence the necessity for removing every obstruction to the free flow of water through the pipes. A properly fitted hot water heating plant, as per the above suggestions, is worth a great deal more money, is more economical in fuel, and is cheaper in the end than is the usual slipshod methods of con-structing such work. It is often surprising to some persons that there is so much difference in bids submitted for the construction of hot water heating plants, but this is not surprising to the experienced heating engineer, and the difference will be found in the plant after it has been constructed. In accepting low bids from inexperienced persons on such work we never get more than the worth of our money, and often get much less, so that for hot water heating plants the most experienced workers are none too good to employ.

TO INCREASE CIRCULATION.

There are two ways of increasing the effective or motive power, viz., by causing water to cool a greater number of degrees by transit through a greater length of pipe, or by exposing it to more surface in proportion to water contained in the pipes, and, second, by increasing the vertical height. This last is principally depended upon when additional power is required. If the circulation be doubled in velocity the water will pass through the same length in half the time and lose only one-half as much heat, because the rate of cooling is not proportioned to the distance through which water circulates, but to the time of transit. Increased velocity is indicative of increased power, and in hot water apparatus it is increased velocity which overcomes unusual obstructions. Care must be taken in arranging pipes so that water in its descent may not be obstructed by differences of level or angles where air might accumulate. For this effectually prevents circulation by dividing the streams. In running long heating coils it is, of course, necessary to give some fall to the lines in the direction of the water, and for this purpose one inch in twenty feet will answer.

PRESSURE NO AID TO CIRCULATION.

A false impression, quite generally existing, is that an increase of pressure in pipes increases circulation of the water. How-ever, such is not the case, for the reason that the back pressure always equals the pressure ahead. Since difference in the temperatures of the two columns is essential, the water should rise as much as possible directly it leaves the boiler, while it is hottest and lightest, and do most of its falling just before entering the boiler. When coldest and heaviest, and the motive power at best is small, every advantage should be taken of it. Flow pipes should be covered, as stated on other occasions in these articles, to retain the heat at the point where it is to be used. With the return pipe of a hot water heating apparatus covering is not important, as any loss of heat is compensated for by increased circulation. The advantage of conveying the water through ascending pipes from boilers is two-fold. It allows the most free escape for the air and steam, which prevents circulation, and also facilitates the circulation by increasing the actual and relative weight of the descending column.

DISTANCE HOT WATER CIRCULATES.

The distance through which water will circulate in a heating apparatus is very considerable. The limit has not been ascertained, as the higher it rises above the boiler the greater distance it will circulate. Generally it is best to shorten circulations, and an apparatus will be more efficient if run through two or more short circuits than if run through one long one. While impediments are overcome by considerable differences in temperature, the apparatus is most satisfactory when they do not differ widely. a hot water boiler is placed considerably below the pipes and other surfaces the circulation is sure to be rapid, and the circulation should be as short as possible to have but little difference in possible to have out fittle difference in temperature of flow and return pipes. But when the boiler is placed nearly on a level with the pipes it is often necessary to have greater differences in the temperatures, so as to secure a good circulation. Horizontal leading pipes require to be much larger in proportion to their branches than is necessary with vertical leading, or main flow, pipes, for the reason that the friction in an upright pipe is exceedingly small. JAMES J. LAWLER.

DANBURY, CONN.-The wife of Herbert Cocking, one of the oldest florists in Danbury, died on May 18.

SITUATIONS, WANTS, FOR SALE.

Advertisements under this head will be inserted at the rate of 10 cents a line (seven words) each insertion. Cash must accompany order. Plant advs. not admitted under this head.

Every paid subscriber to the AMERICAN FLORIST for the year 1898 is entitled to a five-line want adv. free to be used at any time during the year.

NITUATION WANTED-By a first-class gardener and florist. Private place preferred. Sate wages H H. HUNT. Evanston, Ill

SITUATION WANTED—By man of 20 years experience in orchids, paims and all-round growing. Good references. Address
A. R. care American Florist.

SITUATION WANTED-By first-class florist, good or will t-ke p ace on shares Good reterences, If care Am. Florist. 57 Bromfield St., Boston.

OlTUATION WANTED—By a married man, middle age, as special beiner by the day or week in private or commercial place; 15 years' experience in outside work. Ref-rences.

WM HELLMANN, Box 81, Onk Park, III.

SITUATION WANTED—As working foreman or otherwise by a good rose grower, also carnations, chrysanthemums, etc: English, single, age 25, steady and suber. State wages. Geo. SPENCER, care C. L. Brunson, Grosse Isle, Mich.

WANTED-A good rose grower. Add ess MULFORD, Jefferson Park, Ill.

WANTED—A single young man for general green-house work. Steady place if satisfactory. 160 43d St., Chicago.

WANTED-A florist and gardener. Must be thoroughly competent Address OXFORD RETREAT, OXFORD, O.

WANTED-To rent 1500° to 20,000 feet of glass in good repair, near Chicago.
H. C. BLEWITT, Des Plaines, III.

WANTED-As foreman, an experienced rose grower for Villa Lorraine Roseries Apply T. W. STEMMLER. 36 East 14th St. New York.

WANTED-First-class florists' wire design worker. Steady work the year round. Apply with refs. HOLTON & HUNKEL CO., Box 103, Milwaukee, Wis.

WANTED-A competent florist and gardener, as partner; have two places. Very little money required to take half interest in either one or both places. For further information address BB, care American Florist.

WANTED AT ONCE-All-round good florist for roses carnations, muma and general atock. State wages, with references; board, good home, good treatment, steady place.

REX. care American Florist.

WANTED-To rent or lease with privilege of purchase, greenhouses, 8000 to 15000 teet of glass.

Must be in good repair and running order. Address with full partion ars

W.R. care American Florist.

FOR SALE-First-class retail stand, about 5000 feet of glass; new. Has never paid less than $1300 per year net. Will require $1000 cash, balance time at 6 per cent. Reason for selling, falling bealth. Address ILLINOIS, care American Florist.

FOR SALE—Four greenhouses, nearly new, aplended retail stand, near business center in residence district, on road to cemetery, paved street. Terms easy, Must retire on account of poor health A CLAUS, 503 N. 4th St., Springfield, Ill.

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN.

Florist establishment of over 10,000 square feet of glass; splendid situation, 8 lots 35 ft. iront: water, gas and electric light on atreet; greenbousea, office and barn all newly built with all conveniences; heated by ateam. Centrally located in city of 18 (00) population in State of Indiana. Competition none to speak of Leading establishment in the city. Sickness cause of selling. Address Indiana, care American Fiorist.

For Sale!

Store and established business on West Madison street, Chicago. Reason for selling owner cannot give it his personal attention. C J, care American Florist. Address

CHICAGO LOTS FOR SALE.

One block from corner Lincoln avenue and Wellington street, a bunch of lots at $25 per front foot; sewer and water. Suitable for greenhouse purposes.

P. F. HAYNES & CO.. Telephone L. V. 247. 1004 Wellington St., Chicago.

NOW READY

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

DIRECTORY

Of Florists, Nurserymen and Seedsmen of the United States and Canada arranged both by States and Post Offices and All. Names ALPHABETICALLY.

FULLY REVISED TO DATE WITH UPWARDS OF

3,000 New Names

Price Two Dollars. In Flexible Leather Binding, Three Dollars.

American Florist Company 🛰 🛰

324 Dearborn Street. Chicago, III., U. S. A.

THE "OLO RELIABLE" FOR

WHOLESALE

Hunt's Flowers Go Everywhere

76 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

WHOLESALE CUT FLOWERS AND FLORISTS SUPPLIES. WIRE WORK 88 WABASHAVE CHICAGO.

E. C. AMLING Wholesale Cut Flowers

51 Wabash Avenue,

W. S. HEFFRON, Mgr.

....CHICAGO.

A. G. PRINCE & CO. Wholesale Gut

AND FLORISTS' SUPPLIES.

Agents for the Hinsdale Rose Co. Special attention paid to shipping orders.

88 & 90 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO. Telephone Main 320B.

It is not much trouble to mention the AMERICAN FLORIST when corresponding with an advertiser.

S. B. WINTER,

(Successor to WINTER & GLOVER,)

21 Randolph St., Chicago.

HIGH BRADE

PACKED RIGHT.

so they will reach you in just as good condition as they reach us.

WIRE DESIGNS: A Full Line. Write ue for our Illustrated Catalogue.

FORCING BL

We have closed contracts with some of the best and most reliable producers for our stock of Roman Hyacinths, Tulips, Dutch Hyacinths, Von Sion Narcissus, Paper White Narcissus, Valley, Harrisii, Longiflorum, Azaleas, and all leading Forcing Stock.

Give us a list of your wants and we will quote same. Don't forget that we are strictly in it on SUPPLIES OF ALL KINDS.

SEEDS, BULBS AND CUT FLOWERS.

45, 47 and 49 Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson, Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

Wholesale Flower Markets

| CHICAGO, June 3.                   |
|------------------------------------|
| Roses, Beauties per doz. 1.00@3.03 |
| " Bridea 1 00@ 4.00                |
| " Meteors, Kalserins 1.00@ 4.00    |
| " Bridesmalds 1 00 a 4 00          |
| " Gontiers. Perles 1.00@ 3.00      |
| Carnations, common                 |
| " fancy 2.00@ 3.00                 |
| Marguerites50                      |
| Narelsaua Poeticus                 |
| Harrisli, Callas 2.00@ 5.00        |
| Lily of the valley                 |
| Sweet peas                         |
| GladioII 6.00@ 8.00                |
| Adlantum                           |
| Smilax                             |
| Asparagus40.00@75.00               |
| Pansles                            |
| Pieonles per dozen. ,25@ ,50       |
|                                    |

J. A. BUDLONG

WHOLESALE GROWER OF

ROSES

AND DEALER IN CUT FLOWERS 37-39 Randolph St., - CHICAGO.

88 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

Wholesale Dealers and Gut Flowers

CREENHOUSES: HINSDALE, ILL.

A. L. RANDAI

Wholesale Florist

Don't Forget that we are at 4 Washington St., Chicago.

Write for special quotations on large orders.

ROGERS PARK FLORAL CO..

Wholesale Growers of

FLOWERS

51 WABASH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

HEADOUARTERS FOR AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

Cood Money for your Flowers. Good Flowers for your Money 49 WEST 29TH ST., NEW

Y. CUT FLOWER EXCHANGE

404-412 E. 34th St. Near Ferry. Open for Cut Flower Sales at 6 o'clock Every Morning.....

DESIRABLE WALL SPACE TO RENT FOR ADVERTISING.

JOHN DONALDSON, Secretary.

Strings 8 to 10 feet long, 50 CENTS.

W. H. ELLIOTT, Brighton, Mass.

G BROS

600,000 FEET OF GLASS.

hort notice with all leading varieties

From Sand:

stitutions. We are headquarters Inc Fine American sus a true and convice yourself. s us a trail and convice Per 100 Per 1000

∦3.00 1 00 1 00 r Hill ... at plant rates.

attention to our choice F. out-ait #2.00 per 300 and $15.00 per 1000

ROSE PLANTS

American Beauty Plants out of 3-inch pots. $6 00 per 100.

Out of 212-inch pots. Per 100 Per 1000 $45.00 American Beauty.....$5.00 22.50 Meteor..... 2.50 Bride..... 2.50 22.50 Testout...... 2.50 22 50 22 50 Belle Siehrecht...... 2.50 Pres. Carnot ...... 2.50 22 50 Bridesmaid ...... 2 59 20.00 La France ...... 2.50 20 00

REINBERG BROS., 51 Wabash Avenue, Chicago. . 4

... SUPPLY ...

ONLY HOUSE IN NEW YORK HANDLING

EXTRA FANCY STOCK FOR SPECIAL OCCASIONS.

TELEPHONE 2778 38TH STREET.

50 West 30th Street, NEW YORK CITY.

TRAENDLY & SCHENCK. Wholesale Florists.

Control the slock of many celebrated growers and are prepared to quote prices on First Grade Cut Flowers. All varieties.

38 West 28th St., and Cut Flower Exchange, Tel. 961 18th Street. NEW YORK CITY.

Vou Want ORCHIDS AND LILY OF THE VALLEY for June Weddings and Graduatious. I can supply you. Order in time..... JOHN YOUNG, 51 W. 28th St., NEW YORK.

THE NEW YORK GUT FLOWER CO.

II9 and I2I West 23d Street. II2 and II4 West 24th Street.

Telephone 733-18th.

CONSIGNMENTS SOLICITED.

Special Attention Given to Shipping Orders.

M. A. HART. Commission Dealer Cut Flowers. 44 WEST 29TH STREET. NEW YORK CITY.

THE BEST MARKET IN NEW YORK. 'Phone 1307 38th St.

Wholesale Flower Markets

| NEW YORK, June 1.                                                   |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Roses, Beautles. Rybrid 2.00@16 00                                  |
| Bridesmaids, Testouts, Brides 50@ 4 00Morgans, Meteors 50@ 2 00 |
| Carnations                                                          |
| Lily of the valley 1 00@ 3.00                                       |
| Sweet peas, per 100 bunches. 4.00@6.00Harrisll. 4.00@6.00       |
| Smtlax                                                              |
| Asparagus                                                           |
| Cattleyas                                                           |
|                                                                     |

| Boston, June 1.                           |
|-------------------------------------------|
| Roses Beauties, Brunners 3.00@10.00       |
| " Morgans, Meteors 1 00@ 4.00             |
| " Brides, Bridesmaids, Carnots 2 00@ 6.00 |
| Carnations 1 00@ 2 00                     |
| Lily of the valley                        |
| Sniræas, Stocks 1 00@ 2 00                |
| Harristi 4 00@ 6 00                       |
| Sweet peas                                |
| Smllax,                                   |

| PHILADELPHIA, June 1.              |
|------------------------------------|
| Roses, Beautiesper dozen 1.00@3 00 |
| Carnations                         |
| extra                              |
| Harrisii 8.00@10 00                |
| Sweet peas                         |
| Smilax 15.00@20.00                 |
| 1.ong/ftorums 5.00@.8.00           |

1612-14-16 LUDLOW ST.

John I. Raynor,

49 WEST 28th STREET.

NEW YORK.

SPECIAL EXTRA STOCK OF

AM. BEAUTY, METEOR, BRIDESMAID, BRIDE.

Record Breaking Carnations ALL THE YEAR ROUND.

THOS. YOUNG, JR.

* * Wholesale Florist

43 West 28th Street, New York.

WALTER F. SHERIDAN. WHOLESALE

ORIST.

39 West 28th Street, NEW YORK.

Roses shipped to all points. Price list on application.

ose Growers

Will find a good market and good returns for their stock at....

JULIUS LANG'S 53 W. 30th Street. - NEW YORK.

Edward C. Horan, 34 W. 29th Street, NEW YORK,

WHOLESALE • FLORIST.

Careful Shipping to all parts of the country.

Price list on application.

WM. C. SMITH. Wholesale Florist

40 So. 16th St., PHILADELPHIA.

Consignments Solicited. Special attention given to shipping orders. Long Distance Telephone 5003 A.

9 Chapman Place, 15 Province Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Consignments from regular growers assigned separate space in our market. We guarantee payment for all Flowers sold. Sales reported weekly; payments monthly, or oftener if required.

THE NEW ENGLAND HEADQUARTERS FOR THE BEST GRADE OF FLOWERS AT ALL SEASONS OF THE YEAR.

FLOWERS, ALL KINDS.* PLENTY OF THEM AT

57 WEST 28th STREET. NEW YORK.

TELEPHONE 382 38th St.

GALVIN&CO.

Wholesale Florists AND DEALERS IN ALL

FLORISTS' SUPPLIES, 4 Ordway Place, BOSTON, MASS.

Cut Flower Consignments Solicited. Best market.

GEORGE A. SUTHERLAND, Cut Flowers # Florists' Supplies WHOLESALE.

67 Bromfield St.,

BOSTON, MASS.

wnotesate Florists ALWAYS ON HAND CARNATIONS.

JOBBERS IN

Horticultural Auctioneers. WLEY STREET. - BOSTON.

Wholesale Florists بعيد

111 West 30th Street, NEW YORK.

Consignments Solicited. Telephone, 260 38th St.

FRANK MILLANG,

WHOLESALE COMMISSION,

408 E. 34th Street,

Cut Flower Exchange.

NEW YORK.

Buffalo.

MEMORIAL WEEK BROUGHT LITTLE BUT FUNERAL WORK TO BISON CITY FLORISTS -NEWS NOTES AND JOTTINGS OF INTER-

The past week was very quiet with the exception of funeral work. On Tuesday a prominent wholesale liquor dealer was buried. The flowers were fine, both designs and bunches. One design in particular, an elk's head of violets and pansies, being most attractive. It was furnished by Wm. Scott. On Friday a leading insurance man and an ex-member of the National Guard was buried and among the many floral tokens was a Rock of Ages six feet high made by W. J. Palmer & Son.

Lily of the valley has been the prevailing flower this week but the quality to-day was inferior to that of the early part of the week.

brought forth more Memorial Day demand for cut flowers and plants than for designs. The supply of outdoor stock was not over abundant. Narcissi have virtually ceased blooming and pæonies were not very good. Tulips are passed, except the pickled ones held in cellars for a week. Beauties were better this week than last and found ready sale. Bridesmaid and Bride were not so good, while Meteor is still fine.

George Fancourt is sending some fine adiantum plants to W. F. Kasting and they are selling fast.

Window decorations are very fine at present, each one trying to eclipse his neighbors. Palmer's Daybreak and Meteor are his principal show, while Anderson has a pretty window with Beauties and adiantum. Scott alternated between his famous Genesee, Jubilee and Pingree carnations and a pretty flower bed made in his window with green moss for a lawn. Rebstock is showing some line hydrangeas and Adams had a pretty window of assorted flowers

Carnations were sold in one store for 10 cents per dozen for one day, which hurt the sale with others when the price at wholesale was from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. The board of park commissioners appointed Gen. John C. Graves superintendent of the parks to succeed Wm. Me-Millan. Gen. Graves was a park commissioner for lifteen years.

The Chippewa Market presented a gay appearance last Saturday. Flowers and plants of all kinds and quality were to be had and at all prices and were eagerly sought after by buyers for Memorial Day C. D. Zimmerman, of the Pine Hill Nurseries, has secured the contract for the landscape gardening at the beautiful Italian villa of George K. Birge. W

Wholesale Flower Markets

| CINCINNATI, June 2.                              |
|--------------------------------------------------|
| Roses, Beauties, select                          |
| Roses, Beauties, Select                          |
| " Brides, Bridesmalds                            |
| Meteors                                          |
| Meteors                                          |
| Carnations .50 a 1 00                            |
| Carnations 1.50                                  |
| Marguerites. Sweet peas                          |
| Lily of the valley                               |
| Callas                                           |
|                                                  |
| Stocks                                           |
|                                                  |
| Adiantum. 50.00                                  |
|                                                  |
| ST. LOUIS, June 2. 2 00@20 00                    |
|                                                  |
| " Moteors                                        |
|                                                  |
|                                                  |
|                                                  |
| 18008                                            |
|                                                  |
| Violata California                               |
| " (10 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 11 1      |
|                                                  |
|                                                  |
| Callas                                           |
| Callas                                           |
| MILWAUKEE, June 2.                               |
| Roses. Beautles per dozen 1.50 @ 3.50            |
|                                                  |
| 1 Horles 511008111111111111111111111111111111111 |

|                |          | 3111  | WA   | UK      | EE,       | Jui     | ne 2.  |                              |
|----------------|----------|-------|------|---------|-----------|---------|--------|------------------------------|
| Roses.         | Brider   | 4. Br | ides | mal     | aв.       |         | (6.3.5 | 1 0000 0 00                  |
|              | Perles   |       |      |         | • • • • • | • • • • |        | . 4 UU(a) ti UU              |
|                | tions    |       |      | • • • • |           | • • • • |        | , 1.50@ 3.00, 3.10@ 5.00 |
| Harris         |          |       |      |         |           |         |        | . S 00m 10 00                |
| Parent         | PB       |       |      |         |           |         |        | . 4 0000                     |
|                |          | veth  | υw.  |         |           |         |        | 00@ .7                       |
| SmilaAdlar | xtum |       |      |         | • • • •   |         |        |  - 1 OV                    |
|                |          |       | ви   | FFA     | LO,       | Ju      | ne 2.  |                              |

| Smtlax                       | .75@ 1.00    |
|------------------------------|--------------|
| Adlantum                     | . (300) 1.00 |
|                              |              |
| BUFFALO, June 2.             |              |
| Roses, Beantles              | 5,00@35 00   |
| Brides. Bridesmalds          | 3 000@ 6 00  |
| " Meteors                    | 3.00 26 6 00 |
| Meteors                      |              |
| " Perles Niphetos            | 2.000 8.00   |
| tt Peleories                 | 0.000 U.00   |
| Competions white and colored | 11309 # 00   |
| b Duchtenk und Iaucies       | 2,11/0 0.00  |
| 1.lly of the valley          | 3 00(6 4 0)  |
| Tally of the valley          | 6 00@ 10 00  |
| Harriell                     | 256 50       |
| Sweet peas                   | 10 10 215 00 |
|                              |              |
|                              |              |
| Asparagus                    | 50 U0@75.00  |
| Аврагакив                    |              |
|                              |              |

| Louisville, June 2.                |             |
|------------------------------------|-------------|
| Roses, Beauties per dozen1.00@2 00 |             |
| Metitos Reldosmulds                | 4.0006 0.00 |
| . Moteora Kalaerina,               | 4.10% 1.19  |
| · Parlos                           | S CHAS F GO |
| Cusputtons Inpey                   | 2 0000 5.10 |
| " COMMON                           | 95 cm 5.0   |
| Lily of the Valley                 | , with the  |
| Calles per duzen                   | ,           |
| Sweet pan                          | , 400       |
| Mignonettes                        | 0           |
| Marenerites                        |             |
| Smelax, per dozen                  | .75         |
| Adduction                          | . (4)       |
| According to surge string          |             |

C. A. KUEHN, Wholesale Florist,

1122 PINE STREET, ST. LOUIS, MO.

A complete line of Wire Designs.

C. W. WORS 2740 Offive Street, ST. LOUIS, MO. FLOWERS ....wholesale....

.....ROSES, and a full line Headquarters for the South West.....

ST. LOUIS GUT FLOWER CO. Wholesale Florists

E. H. MICHEL & & &

1620 Olive St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

HOLTON & HUNKEL CO.

SUCCESSORS TO

The Wisconsin Flower Exchange. Fresh Cut Flowers, Florists' Supplies Manufacturers of WIRE DESIGNS

Consignments Solicited.

Phone Main 974

457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE.

ROSES, CARNATIONS, AND ALL KINDS OF SEASONABLE FLOWERS IN STOCK.

F, KASTING COMMISSION FLORIST....

495 Washington St., Buffalo, N. Y. Also Dealer in Florists' Supplies and Wire Oesigns

Milwaukee.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE WAS A DISAPPOINT-MENT. - SECOND CLASS CARNATIONS. -PARK MATTERS.

Memorial Day business was not all that florists desired. While many flowers and plants were used and a visit to the cemeteries would almost convince one that a big business had been done, each florist seemed to feel that trade should have been better. A very large quantity of second class carnations came in, but many were unsold. There is a good supply of excellent outdoor lily of the valley here now, but it is all grown by amateurs. White lilac sold out well, but purple lilac is not wanted.

There has been a large increase in the planting of shrubbery. Perennials and clematis, candidum and longiflorum, outside grown, promise well. A good rain is needed.

The park commission has several greenhouses on the Green Bay road leased in which they have prepared quite a stock of plants for bedding. John Dunlop is supplying plants for Juneau Park. The supplying plants for Juneau Park. The Forest Home Cometery Association has donated several thousand geraniums to the park commission.

LEBANON, IND.—Henry L. Moore, to whom W. A. Bilger assigned, has sold the greenhouse to Gustave Minx for $2,000. Mr. Minx is a young, practical florist. He came from Germany four years ago, and has had charge of the Longcliff greenhouses at the northern hospital for the insane at Logansport.

GREENHOUSE BUILDING

Full information regarding building and heating Greenhouses is given in "GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION," by L. R. TAFF, Professor of Horticulture, Michigan Agricultural College.

PRICE, POSTPAID, $1.50.

"Greenhouse Management"

by the same author, treats of the forcing of flowers, fruits and vegetables under glass; also the propagation and care of house plants; insects, diseases and remedies. 400 pages. Just out. PRICE, POSTPAID, $1.50.

(See review in American Florist, page 1173, April 30, 1898.)

L. R. TAFT,

Agricultural College (P. O.), - Michigan.

FIRST EXCURSION OF THE SEA-SON TO CLEVELAND

via Nickel Plate Road, June 3 to 6 inclusive. $11 35 for the round trip on certificate plan. Tickets good returning until June 13 inclu-Three through trains daily from Van sive. Buren Street Passenger Station, Chicago. For further information address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chi-Telephone Main 3389. (22) cago.

CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

meeting will be held in Cleveland, O., June 7 to 9 inclusive, account of which Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets at $11.35 for the round trip on certificate plan. Dates of sale June 3, 4, 5 and 6 inclusive. Tickets good June 3, 4, 5 and 6 inclusive. Tickets returning until and including June 13. further particulars address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389. (23)

Going, Going, Gone!

and it's your own failt if you don't get the bargains. Auction Sales of Plants every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 9 A. M. at . . . . .

you want to buy, send for Catalogues. & you want to sell, write for terms. & & &

IT PAYS!

is his name and he draws the crowd. Go and see him—and hear him—at

60 Vesey Street

NEW YORK CITY.

You will run up against a lot of your brother florists and you will find plenty of stock there that you can buy and make money on, thus combining business and pleasure, and you will resolve to go

> Every Tuesday and Friday while the Plant Auctions Last ....

SIGN OF THE RED FLAG.

Your Spring Plant Trade

will come easier, and be more profitable if solicited in the nice way you can do such things by means of

LONG'S

Samples for 20 ets, in stamps

DAN'L B. LONG, Publisher

BUFFALO.

EXCURSION TO CLEVELAND.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets from Chicago to Cleveland and return at a fare and one third for the round trip on certificate plan, good going June 3, 4, 5 and 6, and good returning until June 13, inclusive, on occasion of the annual meeting of the Congregational Home Missionary Society congregational from Missionary Society in that city. This rate will be $11.35 for the round trip, which is somewhat lower than via other lines. Those desiring space in sleeping cars should make early application in order to secure the best accommodations.

Any further information cheerfully given by addressing J Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. Telephone Main 3389, (2t)

TELEGRAPH CODE OF THE

TRADE ASSOCIATION

$2.00, in either stiff or flexible cover. ADDRESS ORDERS TO

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

For Insurance against damage by hail, Address

JOHN G. ESLER, Sec'y, F. H. A., Saddle River, N. J.

THIS IMPRINT ON AN ENGRAVING

IS A CUARANTEE OF SATISFACTORY QUALITY....

Manz makes illustrations for this paper.

THE Regan Printing House NURSERY SEED FLORISTS

87-91 Plymouth Place, ***CHICAGO***

A LL Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists wishing to do business with Europe should send for the . . . .

"Horticultural Advertiser"

This is the British Trade Paper, being read weekly by all Horticultural traders; it is also taken by over 1000 of the hest Continental houses. Address EDITORS OF THE "H. A."

Chilwell Nurseries. - Notts, England.

...THE ...

"Lyon=Horticole"

is an interesting review of French horticulture. Issued semi-monthly. 20 8-vo. pages illustrated. Subscriptions to the United States, 1 year, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00. Address

DIRECTEUR LYON-HORTICOLE. Lyon-Villeurbanne, France.

FLORISTS' MUTUAL

INSURANCE ASS'N

Application Blanks and Prospectus Raady....
Write now. Delays are daugerous.

W. J. VESEY, Sec'y, - Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE NATIONAL Florists Board of Trade

C. S. LODER, Sec'y, 271 Broadway, New York

THE WABASH R. R. COMPANY

The Short and Quick Line between the East and West connecting Buffalo. Detroit and Toledo with Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha.

The Wabash is the Only Line running sleeping cars and chair cars (free) between Buffalo and St. Louis and Kansas City.

Through sleeping cars between New York and Boston and St. Louis and Chicago run every day.

For further information apply to the nearest Railroad Ticket Agent, or to

H. B. McCLELLAN, G. E. A.,

387 Broadway, New York City.

J. O. McBEATH, N. E. P. A., 5 State Street, Boston, Mass.

C. S. CRANE, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Act., St. Louis, Mo.

Now Ready! The American Florist Company's Dire clory of Florists, Nurserymen and Seedsmen of the United States and Canada arranged both by States and Post Offices and all names Alphsbetically. Price $2.00. In Flexible Leather Binding, $3.00 Fully cally. Price $2.00. In Flexible Leather Binding, $3.00. Fully revised to 3,000 New Names upwards of American Florist Company, 224 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. IRVING ROUSE, Pres.: E. ALBERTSON VICe-Pres.; GEORGE C SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y. Sec'y and Treas.

EXPORTS of scale-infested fruit are refused on the German frontier.

MR. P. S. PETERSON, of Chicago, the well known nurseryman, is now at a sanatorium for his health.

THE twenty-third annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held next week. June 8 and 9, EAGLE GROVE, IOWA.-W. E. Garrat contemplates engaging in the nursery business here upon a large scale. He was formerly in business at Belmond.

An open competitive examination will be held at various cities in New York on June 15 for candidates for the position of inspector of nurseries and orehards. Three officers are to be appointed at $100 a month, their duty being the suppression of vellows, black knot. San Jose scale and other diseases and pests. Applicants are to be examined as to experience, practical and scientific knowledge.

Heikes' Healthy Huntsville House.

The Huntsville Wholesale Nurseries, of Huntsville, Alabama, of which W. F. Heikes is manager, with offices in the Unity Building in Chicago, has obtained by contract and purchase a large acreage at Benton Harbor, Mich., where they are now planting 50,000 surplus rose bushes. It is the intention of the firm to organize at the Michigan town as extensive an institution as that which has long been maintained in the south, the new nursery being devoted almost exclusively to the growing of roses and peach and European plum trees.

Mr. Heikes has been in the south for four weeks preparing to make the new establishment as large a producer of rose bushes as the southern one is of various trees, but he will return in season to reach Omaha for the nurserymen's annual convention, June 8 and 9, after which he will proceed to install in Chicago a store from which his company will distribute every requisite for a well equipped nursery, even to bicycles, carriages and warrons.

Connecticut Pomological Society.

The first field meeting of the Connecticut l'omological Society for the season of 1898 will be held at South Glastonbury on the farm of the society's president, Mr. J. H. Hale, in the height of the strawberry season, about the 20th of June. The oig Maximus strawberry and many other new varieties multing in the test plot alongside of many standard varieties under spe in methods of culture, will be the leading feature of interest. although the large helds of berries, chest unt on hards, Japanese plum orchards and the great peach orchards, of which there are note than 200 acres of culti-vated field on President Hale's home farm will be potentially the day's 111-1718 '1 ()

Instruction.

Eindred scattes are invited to send delegates to the adult the field meetings of the Connections solicity and lovers of horizontal and exercise representation this function of the react date of which, programme, even any technical of the secretary H. C. C.M. = Militard Connections.

NEWARK, N. J.—Fernando Assloe has been sent to jail for twenty-five days for stealing bedding plants from East Side park.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Contrary to the wishes of the politicians Wencel L. Cukierski, who has had charge of the city greenhouses, has been named as park superintendent. Mr. Cukierski knows his business.

Armstrong's

Everblooming

Tuberose & &

A NEW departure in Tuberose growth.

Flower bearing bads continue to form around the old flower stock indefinitely.

Flowers greatly superior to those of all other single Tuberoses. Awarded Certificate of Merit by the S. A. F. at Providence last August, and the Shaw Gold Medal at St. Louis in November.

For Prices and Particulars ... Address...

LUTHER ARMSTRONG,

3720 Olive St., ST. LOUIS MO.

OUR SPECIALTIES

~~~~~

AZALEAS, ROSES, RHODODENDRONS

New and rare hardy plants for forcing. Noveltles in Ferna (raised by the largest London grower). The newest and best varieties of roses; if P. and Tea scented, from a French raiser. Write us and ask for quotations. We import direct to Boston to meet the demand from Canada and New Englard States.

F. Brunton & Co.

IMPORTERS AND EMPORTERS OF NEW AND RARE PLANTS,

136 Boylston Street, - BOSTON, MASS.

HARDY

Herbaceous Perennials

THE MOST COMPLETE STOCK IN AMERICA. PÆONIES, PHLOX, IRIS, DELPHINIUMS, ETC., ETC.

JACOB W. MANNING, The Reading Nursery, READING, MASS. ESTABLISHED 1854.

My selection $50 per 1000. Descriptive catalogue and price lists for the trade.

SAMUEL C. MOON,

Bucks Co., PA.

Mention the American Florist when corresponding with an advertiser.

Notice!

The extensive collection of Foreign Grape Vines of our manager, Mr. John

G. Gardner, has been transferred from Jobstown, N. J, to our Nurseries at Stoke-Pogis, Pa., and all orders can now be premptly filled by addressing the undersigned. Descriptive catalogue mailed on application. Those in the trade having wealthy clients, with hot or cold graperies can procure for them, from this collection, the latest and best acquisitions, as well as the standard sorts. On and after JUNE 15th the plants will be ready to ship in pots, well-established, and in first-class condition.

Stoke-Pogis Nurseries,

Juniper and Walnut Streets. - PHILADELPHIA.

G. C. WATSON.

Sus General Agent.

EVERGREENS, Etc.

20,000 American Arbor Vitas, 2 to 8 feet specimens

20,000 American Arbor Vitas, 2 to 8 feet specimens and hedging plants.
5,000 Pyramidal Arbor Vita, 2 to 4 feet.
20,000 Compacts, Globe and other dwarf Arbor Vitas, all sizes.
3,000 Nordman's Silver Fir, 1 to 2½ feet.
2,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
5,000 Hembeck Spruce, 1 to 4 feet.
10,000 Norway Spruce, 3 to 8 feet.
10,000 Retinosporas, Squarrosa, Plumosa, Plumosa aurea and other sorts, 1 to 5 feet.
5,000 Irish Junipers, 1 to 2½ feet.
5,000 Irish Junipers, 1 to 5½ feet.
1,000 Pines, Austrian, Scotch, Excelsa, White and dwarf varieties, all sizes.
1,000 Euronymous Japonica, 48 to 36 inches.
2,000 Euronymous radicans variegata.
1,000 Euroish Holly, 1 to 4 feet.
3,000 Maltonias aquifolia and Japonica.
3,000 English Ivy, strong plants,
Prices low, Uorrespondence solicited.
THE WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

THE WM. H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

TOKYO... NURSERIES CO.

Ileadquarters for Japan Lilles. Cycas Revoluta, Morning Glory, all k nds of Japanese plant, seeds etc., etc. Large assortment at Aways in stock. Orders promptly executed. Write for catalogue. The Tokyo Nurseries Co.

Komagome, Tokyo, (JAPAN)

Cuble Address
"Nurserles" Tokyo.

36 First Prizes out of 39 entries in 1896 and 1897. Peacock's Prize Winning Dahlias Send for 1898 illustrated wholesale cata-ogue before placing orders elsewhere.

W. P. PEACOCK, - Atco, N. J.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST'S COLOR CHART

is now accepted as the standard in preparing color descriptions, by many foreign houses as well as in America.

PRICE IS CENTS POSTPAID.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 322 Dearhorn St. Chicago A LIVE AND RELIABLE CORRESPONDENT

WANTED in every live city in the world. We enable you to deliver flowers by telegraph. A profitable convenience. For particulars, write

C. B. WHITNALL, MILWAUKEE, WIS. 438 Milwaukee St.,

Cincinnati.

FIRST RECEPTION AND BANQUET OF THE FLORISTS' SOCIETY WAS A CULINARY AND SOCIAL SUCCESS.—BUSINESS FAIR.— RUDOLPH GOES TO EUROPE.

Business was very dull during the early part of last week but was revived by several large funerals, and orders for Memorial Day used up all available stock and by Saturday all commission houses were cleared out once more. Memorial Day is now past and both growers and dealers report a small decrease in demand.

Max Rudolph, of 71 Twelfth street, will leave next week for Germany to visit his parents.

One cannot but agree with Charles Dudley Warner when he said that the world can not get on without receptions, and the Cincinnati Florists' Society made no exception to this rule. On May 25 at 8 p. m. fifty-two florists with their wives and daughters gathered at the society's club rooms to enjoy the first banquet and reception. The menu of several courses was served at tete-a-tete tables with Pres. Witterstaetter and ex-Pres. Gillett presiding. Mr. Gillett extended a welcome to the guests and Pres. Witterstaetter, in a brief speech, presented the medals to exhibitors scoring the highest number of points during the season, as follows: A. Sunderbruch's Sons, first; City Greenhouses, G. Scheibely, gardener, second; George & Allen, third. In addition to the above prizes Geo. S. Bartlett, of the Cincinnati Desicenting Co., offered one ton of his bone flour divided into four prizes, Wm. Murphy, 400 rooted carnation cuttings of 1897 400 rooted carnation cuttings of 1897 introduction, R. Witterstaetter, 250 Evelinas and Theodore Bock, 300 new chrysanthemums. E. G. Gillett, as toast-master, called upon Wm. Murphy to toast the Cincinnati Florists' Society. Judge Theodore Bock was presented with a handsome gold headed umbrella and was completely surprised. He thanked the boys and advised them to keep on with their good work. Geo. Bartlett with their good work. Geo. Bartlett answered to the toast of America. The mandolin club played several patriotic selections. Frank Ball reported that we will have an outing on July 21, at Shady Cooney Island. Edward Hoffmeister spoke entertainingly of the history of the Queen City. Ben George related some of his cabbage stories. Henry Schwarz read a comic paper entitled, "Gardner Wanted," and Charles Jones retaliated because he thought the humor of the effort was too broad. It was a late hour before the festivities ceased.

H. SCHWARZ.

COBDEN, ILLS.-A. M. Lawver, whose death occurred in San Francisco on May 12, years ago established here the most extensive orchards in Illinois. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1846 and was educated at the Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y., and at the University of Albany. He was a recognized authority on apple culture.

Los Gatos, Cal.—The Los Gatos Floral Society met May 25. There were discussions and excellent displays of roses and carnations.

August Rölker & Sons Cape Flowers, Cycas Leaves, Florist Baskets,

Send for trade list; also for prices on fall bulbs azaleas, etc., imported to order. Addres

52 Dey Street,

NEW YORK.

We Don't Quit Work

BECAUSE WE HAVE YOU ALL SUPPLIED WITH DECORATION DAY GDODS.....

We are now ready for June with its weddings, school graduations and college commencements. To the wide-awake, "get there" florist this is one of the most profitable months of the year.

You need fresh baskets, in fashionable designs and modern effects. These we are now opening in new materials and combinations. There is money in these goods at the prices we shall quote you.

Consignments of New Cape Flowers just received. Ribbon letters, Inscriptions, Cycas Leaves, Cycas Wreaths, Doves and Sheaves.

A Big Assortment. Send for Catalogue.

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO.,

50-52-54-56 North Fourth St.,

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Doves

The largest and finest stock of white doves on earth. 🚜 Write for prices. * * * *

S. J. RUSSELL, 203 Summit Ave., JERSEY CITY, N. J.

See that my signature is stamped on every dove.

Boston Florist Letter Co.

FLORISTS' LETTERS. 11/2 IN. LETTERS

This wooden box picely stained and var-nished, 18x30x12 made in two sections, one for each size letter, given away with first order of 500 letters.

Block Letters, 14 or 2-inch size, per 100, $2.00. Script Letters, $4. Fastener with each letter or word. Used by leading fiorists everywhere and for sale by all wholesale florists and supply dealers.

N. F. McCARTHY, Treas. and Manager, 84 Hawley St., BOSTON, MASS.

SMALL GREEN For use with.... VIOLETS

Stiff, wiry stems. Work up beauutifily. Are all the rage.

Box of 5000, $5.00. Less quantity at $1.25 per 1000. ....ADDRESS....

HARLAN P. KELSEY, 1150 Tremont Bldg., - BOSTON, MASS.

Galay Leaves, Cut Palm Leaves, bouquet green, Moss (sphagnum and green), Laurel Roping, Xmas Trees; overything in the green line always in stock at

H. E. HARTFORD'S, 18 Chapman Place.

BRILLIANT GREEN AND BRONZE

GALAX LEAVES.

For Decorating and all Florists' Designs. CHAS. H. RICKSECKER, Linville, Mitchell Co., N. C.

HARDY CUT FERNS

NEW CROP arriving daily, $1.50 per 1000. Discount to wholesale jobbers. Prince's Pine, 6c per lb. Headquarters for Gaiax Leaves. Laurel festooning, 4 to 8c per yd; Laurel and Prince's Pine Wreaths for Decoration Day, made to order. Fine green Moss in bile, $1.00; in sacks, 75c. Our goods are always the best to be obtained for the money. Prompt attention to all orders. Sead in your orders new for Ferna for Decoration Day and you will be sure to have them

Crowl Fern Co.

27 Beacon Street, - BOSTON, MASS.

Rice & Co.

Exclusive Importers and Manufacturers of....

Florists' Supplies

25 N. 4th Street, -

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Have You Seen Our Agent? A Complete Catalogue for Florists. Send for One.

ELLIS & POLLWORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.

REED & KELLER ..... Florists' Supplies

122 W. 25th St.,

NEW YORK CITY.

John Conley & Son,

Manufacturers of

TIN FOIL

2 AND 4 DOMINICK STREET,

__New York.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION. JEROME B RICE Pres: E B. CLARK, 1st Vice Pres: S F WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secy and Treas.

MR LEM BOWEN, of D. M. Ferry & Co., is in California.

ONION seed prices in California are reported firmer.

FIRES in northern Wisconsin have destroved some valuable lots of dry sphagnum moss.

M. THORNBURN & Co., New York, will remove to 32 Cortlandt street about the middle of June.

Dallas City, Ill.-Heisler & Maxwell are putting up a large building for an agricultural and seed store.

FREIGHT rates from southern French ports have advanced 10%. This will affect the cost of French forcing bulbs.

CHICAGO.-Chas. P. Braslan's connection with Joseph Breek & Son, expired by limitation June 1. Mr. Braslan retains part of former office, while Messrs. Breck & Son have a temporary office in the same building. Mr. Braslan expects to visit California about June 15. F. Craig. of R. G. Craig & Co., Memphis, Tenn., is in the city.

The American Seed Trade Association will hold its sixteenth annual meeting at Old Point Comfort, Va., beginning Tuesday, June 14. A good attendance is expected. Full particulars as to routes, etc., can be had on application to Secretary S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn. A rate is made from New York City of $13 for the round trip, with a thirty day limit. Western members not going via New York are recommended to use the Chesapeake & Ohio R. R.

PROF. W. W. TRACY, in an article on seed breeding which appears elsewhere in this issue, hints at a work which should profitably engage the attention of the various Experiment Stations and the Department of Agriculture, namely, defining and describing the essential characteristies of the ideal types of our useful plants. This would materially aid seed growers in establishing a basis for intelligent selection, and assist a growing industry of paramount importance to the country at large. These institutions have done much good work in the interest of agriculturists and horticulturists, while much of their chort appears to have been of questionable utility. But there are many ways in which they can be of service, and it is only men of large experience like Prof. Tracy who, by advice and suggestion, can properly limit the theoretical work, and interweave the really practical.

Burpee's New Warehouse.

On Wednesday, May 25, W. Atlee Bur pee & Co vacated the premises at 175 and 177 No Litth street, running through 16 476 and 478 Vork avenue, which they had occupied as their Philadelphia, ware house and offices for the last sixteen years. This building which has some historic associations, having been used during the war as a hospital and Provost Marshal's office, is robe forn down imme diate v and n new modern warehouse designed by Architect Charles R. Lee, to be erected. The contractor, James Johnston, has agreed to have the new huiding completed in October meanwhile W Atlee Burpee & Co. have rented as temporary quarters a building at the corner of Fairmount avenue and Randolph street. The moving was so carefully planned that the filling of the orders (which of course are comparatively few

The new warehouse is to be seven stories high, of modern steel open mill construction, with frontage on both Fifth street and York avenue of light pressed brick and terra cotta. It will be the largest seed warehouse in Philadelphia and the proposed interior arrangements will make it the most complete for facilitating the prompt dispatch of orders.

As in the old warehouse the offices will occupy the entire frontage on the ground floor on the Fifth street side, while the receiving and shipping of goods will be handled on the York avenue side, where will be located the elevator shaft and the shipping clerk's office. A macadamized pavement will allow drays and wagons to unload directly into the ground floor or elevator. A sub-cellar will extend under the York avenue pavement so as to keep the heat of the steam plant away from the main cellar, which will be used as heretofore for the storage of potatoes and bulbs.

second floor will be devoted to the flower seed and mail order departments. The third floor will contain the The seed papering and steam printing rooms, besides extensive shelving for the storage of seeds as done up in packages. The fourth floor will be given upentirely to the freight and express and wholesale order departments. The fifth, sixth and seventh floors will be used for storage of seeds in bulk and, as indeed with the entire building, have the benefit of ample light and ventilation.

With the enlarged warehouse and modern conveniences Messrs Burpee & Co. will be able to handle their increasing trade next season with the utmost promptness and dispatch.

Syracuse, N. Y.-Walter Meneilly has brought suit against the city for $1,250 damages inflicted upon his plants and nursery stock by the overflowing of his property, for which he holds the city responsible.

CHINESE PRIMROSE ...SEED...

Greatly Improved and well-known to be of extra the strains. Packets put up specially for Florists, of best single and double varieties 100 seeds $100. Plants rendy in August. Cineraria seed of large flowering dwarf varieties in cooleest mixture pkt, 25c; 6 pkts., $100. Primula Obconica, pkt. 100 seeds, 35c. Primula floribunda, fine ye low pkt. 25c.

JOHN F. RUPP. Shiremanstown, Pa.

್ಷ ಕ್ಷಣೆ ಕ್ಣ The Only Machine

on the market for automatically filling and sealing seed packets

The Brown Bag-Filling Machine Co. FITCHBURG, MASS., U. S. A.

Manufacturers and Dealers COTTON SEAMLESS, BURLAPS, ETC. SECOND HAND BAGS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

CINCINNATI BAG CO.
Second and Walnut Sts.. CINCINNATI. 0-

OUR NEW DIRECTORY will be promptly a to to you on accept of order os (pand, only 82) at this season) was not delayed a day.

RAFFIA BEST QUALITY. LONG MADAGASCAR Notwithstanding the higher market on this item I am still offering at the old figure so long as present stock lasts.

stock lasts

ceive the same careful attention.

Grafting Wax

Trowbridge's Celebrated Grafting
Wax, the genuine article, 1 lb. bars
at 19c; ½ lb. bars at 20c; ½ lb. bars
at 21c per pound. Rebates: 10 lb.
lots, 5 per cent; 25 lb. lots, 10 per cent; 50 lb. lots, 15 per cent; 100 lb.
lots, 20 per cent. Address all orders
and correspondence to Juniper and Walnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa. Tr.

Wax, the at 19t: ½
at 21t per p.
lots, 5 per ce.
cent; 50 lb. lots.
lots, 20 per cent.
and correspondence to Walnut Streets, Philade.

G. C. Wats
Seedsman.

Seed Stores and Flower Stores.

In profitably handle our ODORS PLANT FOOD, Write for snial leaflet and free sample.
In profit guaranteed.....

**e Bone Meat for therefore and the story of the eeeeeeeeeeeeeee

BURPEE'S SEEDS PHILADELPHIA.

Wholesule Price List for Florists and Market Gardeners.

TRY DREER'S GARDEN SEEDS.

Plants, Bulbs & Requisites.
They are the best at the lowest prices. Irade List issued quarterly, mailed free to the trade only. HENRY A. DREER, Philadelphia, P.

CLUCAS & BODDINGTON CO.

Seeds, Bulbs & Plants,

501 TO 503 W. 13TH ST., NIOW YORK CITY.

Send for quotations on all Florists' Bulb Stock.

BEST OF ALL' TOMATO

"ENGLISH" MELONS

(FOIR FORCING)

FLOWER SEEDS FOR FLORISTS
Catalogues on application.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Merchants and Growers,

IT IS GOOD BUSINESS POLICY TO MENTION THE MERICAN LUCKIST WHEN YOU WRITE TO AN AMERICAN I

NOW READY!

FULLY REVISED TO DATE The_

American Florist Company's

$6

DIRECTORY

WITH

UPWARDS OF ......

3,000 NEW NAMES ss OF ss

Florists, Nurserymen 🔊 Seedsmen

SE THE SE

UNITED STATES AND CANADA AR-RANGED BOTH BY STATES AND **
POST OFFICES AND ALL NAMES **

ALPHABETICALLY

PRICE TWO DOLLARS.
IN FLEXIBLE LEATHER BINDING, THREE DOLLARS.

American Florist Company,

324 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A. &

Greenfield, Mass.

Memorial Day trade was fully up to last year's standard but the business of all local florists is injured during May and June by the quantities of wild flowers in the vicinity.

and violets have been Carnations planted in the fields since April 22 and are looking well.

E. B. Beals, of the Sunny Dell Greenhouses is planning a chrysanthenum show for November. He has distributed 600 plants among school children and offers four fine prizes for the best exhibits at the show which will be held in Grinnell Hall and will be quite a pretentious affair.

Good Stock! Low Prices!

NEW YORK CITY.

404 East 34th Street.

CANNAS strong plants of Alphonse Bondale, Paul Marquant, Wm. Elliott Bisson, Sec. Stewart. Flamboyant. $4.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

COLEUS Crimson Verschaffeltii, Golden gueen and Golden Bedder, $2.00 per 1000.

JOHN SCOTT.

KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES. BROOKLYN, N. Y.

DORT CDAIG & SON ROBT. CRAIG & SON Roses, Palms and Novelties in Decorative Plants.

Market and 49th Street, PHILADELPHIA

Orchid

LAGER & HERRELL, - Summit, N. J.

DAGE CRUM PURE STOCK . SOUND AND WELL RIPENED

I have 3 sizes Japan Longiflorum-5 to 7, 7 to 9, and 9 to 10 inches, but as the large size is in short supply, I can book same only when some of the other two are taken, and l advise early orders, as there is a run on the Japan Stock this year. Delivery September 25th to October 15th, 1898. Prices guaranteed, 1 will be pleased to have a list of your wants in this item; also in Harrisil, Romans, Paper Whites, Dutch Bulbs, Valley, etc. Let me hear from you. All orders, large or: mall, receive the same careful attention. Address all communications to Juniper and Walnut Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

G. C. Watson.

Crotons...

IN VARIETY

Rothschild, Hawkeri, Interruptum, Evansianum, Rubra Lineata, Andreanum, Aurea Maculatum and others, suitable for bedding. Fine plants in 3-inch pots, $2.00 per doz. New and rare varieties, 50 cents each.

Aurea Maculatum, extra fine plants in 4-in. pots, $250 per doz.; $15 per 100; 3-inch pot plants, $20 per doz.; $15 per 100; 3-inch pot plants, $2 per doz.; $10 per 100; thumb pots, $1 per doz.; $6 per 100.

Edwin Lonsdale,

Money Order Office, Station H, Phila.

CHESTNUT HILL. PHILA., PA.

dants. 5-in. pot 18 to 20-in. high, per 100, $40.00 dants, 40-in. pot, 48 to 50-in. high, each. 4.00 dant. 2 in. pot, 8 to 12-in. high, per 100, 5.00

COCOS WEDDELIANA

KENTIA BELMOREANA

21,-in., 3 leaves, 10 to 12-in, high, per 100, 3 un. 4 or 5 leaves, 15 to 18-in, high, per 100, 5-in. 4 to 6 leaves, 20 to 24-in, high, each.... All measurements from top of pot.

JOSEPH HEACOCK, WYNCOTE, PA. Mention American Florist when writing.

The Finest Winter Flowering Plant of the Century Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

THIS line variety keeps up a succession of bright rosy pink blossoms throughout the Winter, (1) invaluable for florists work. H. B. May. tho was the first to bring this striking novely into popularity holds the finest stock in the road Orders for export carefully packed.

H. B. MAY,

Oyson's Lane Nurseries, Upper Edmonton, London.

Rose Hill Nurseries

L VRGLST Growers of Palms, Orchids, Stove and Greenhouse plants, Ferns, Vroccarius, Pandanus, SIEBRECHT & SON, New Rochelle, N. Y. New York Office, 409 Fifth Ave.

ASPARAGUS

From 2-inch pots, good stuff, per 100, $5.00.....

Cycas Revoluta, dormant stems, size from 3 to 10 lb.

cycas revoluta, dormant stems, size from 3 to 10 lb. (a 12c per lb.)

Clothide Soupert, the great pot rose, our stock is A No. 1, 2-in. (a $3.00;  $2^4$ /s-in. (a $4.00; 3-in. (a) $6.00;  $3^4$ -s-in. (a) $9.00 per 100.

Dahlias,  $2^4$ -s-in. pot plants, in named varieties, per 100, $5.00.

Pelargoniums Mme. Thibaut, Mrs. Robt. Sandiford, Edward Perkins and Dorothy, strong 3-inch stock, per doz., $1.50; per 100, $12.00.

CANNAS

Plants from 2½ and 3-inch pots @ $4.00 per 100. Alphonse Bouvier, Austria, Italia, Discolor, Exp. Crampbel, J. D. Cabos, J. W. Elliott, Mrs. J. M. Samuels, Midway, Madam Crozy, Paul Marquant, P. J. Berckmans, Sophie Buckner, Stella Knast, Star of '91, F. R. Pierson, Madagascar, Mrs. F. L. Ames, Mue. A. Bouvier, Octave Mirabeau.

Cuba Libre, Egandale, Florence Vaughan, Etendard, Pillar of Fire and Papa & $5.00 per 100,

FORCING ROSES

We have a flue stock of Brides, Bridesmaids, Perles, Meteors, Gontiers, American Beauties, Kanserin Augusta Victoria, Pres. Carnot and Mrs. Robt, Garrett from  $2\frac{1}{2}$  and  $3\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pots.

Send us your list to price,

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

Creenhouses: Western Springs, III. 84-86 Randolph St.

CHICAGO:

Asparagus

Sprengerii

Sch with order

Seedlings 85,00 per 100 Seedlings Seedlings American Rose Co., Washington, D. C.

CYCAS REVOLUTA. The true, long-leaved variety. Freshly imported, dormant stems. Run from 6 to 9 mehes in length and weigh from 5 to 10 lbs. ch. Note the price: 10c, per 1h., $8 per 100 lbs., $75 per 1000 lbs., $01lbs. at 100 rate; 500 lbs. at 1000 rete. Special prices on larger quantities.

UNITED STATES EXOTIC NURSERIES

(Formerly Pitcher & Manda.) SHORT HILLS, N. J. Wholesale Catalogue Palms & Ferns on application. Mention American Florist.

Notes on New Carnations.

I spent a pleasant hour, a few days ago with Mr. Peter Fisher, of Norwood, Mass. Having seen his new carnation, Mrs. Lawson, in its prime, I wanted to see it again at the end of the season. Consider-ably stripped for stock, it is remarkable how it holds out, a perpetual bioomer with Malmaison proportions. Though not generally known, it is a cross between Daybreak and Van Leewen, which latter will be remembered as resembling Tidal Wave, and belonged to the European type of perpetual. Experts know Mrs. Lawson well; to others we would describe it as a salmon tinted, rose pink. Three thousand flowers were gathered from five hundred plants during the month of March.

Klondike is not so large but is better in form and color than Mayor Pingree. is early, productive, with a well built flower, a good stem and tolerably free from rust. No yellow as yet, rank with Eldorado when well grown. Klondike is a cross of Edith Foster and Thos. Cartledge. All Mr. Fisher's yellows have had Cartledge as part parent. This same cross produced Morning Star, a new white now under a second year's test. This is not an exhibition variety, though commercially among the most profitable. Fragrance, form, productiveness and purity of color are all that could be desired, the flower lacking only size. Freedom improves every season. It is distinctly perpetual, early, large, and fully justifies its name. When well grown, there are few poor flowers. Mrs. Bradt is considered an acquisition among striped varieties, and here as elsewhere it has shown a red sport. This sport, I am shown a red sport. This sport, I am told, is not reliably constant. Freedom has been crossed by Mrs. Bradt, giving two-thirds purple and one-half single flowers, none worth keeping. My seedlings of the reverse cross, to bloom this season, will be watched with interest. Nicholson's Camp Fire is productive and standard among scarlets. Mr. Fisher's comparison hetween Bon Ton and Wellesley is decidedly in favor of the latter.

Among coming novelties much is expected of The Maine, an improved Mrs. Lawson. I can imagine the experts saying: "One at a time, please." Here is also an improved Wm. Scott, named Alice. In habit there is no difference, and the variation can only be seen when two flowers are placed together. The purple tint unnoticeable in Scott alone is seen at once on comparison. There is also a new Daybreak from Mrs. Lawson, and an improved Morning Star. This latter is not a seedling from Lawson. T. D. 11.

Dutch Bulbs

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, CROCUS, ETC. RUDOLPH VAN TIL & CO., Hillegom, Holland.

American Representative

L. C. BOBBINK, Rutherford, N. J. ASK FOR CATALOGUE.

Mention American Florist.

BULBS FOR FLORISTS... FOR SEEDSMEN.

VAN ZANTEN BROTHERS. HILLEGOM. HOLLAND.

CROWN FROM OUR STOCK.

Lilium Longiflorum

(JAPAN GROWN)

For immediate order we quote the following Low prices.....

| 6 | to | 8-inc | h | er 100$3,50 | Per 1000$27.50 |
|---|----|-------|---|------------------|---------------------|
| 7 | to | 9 4   |   | 4.00             | 35,00               |
| 9 | to | 10  |   | 6.00             | 55,00               |

Special quotations on larger lots.

PRICE LIST ON

"Fancy" Bulb Stock

NOW READY

**ASK FOR A COPY**

Vaughan's Seed Store,

CHICAGO: 84-86 Randolph St. NEW YORK: 14 Barclay Street.

Fresh Seeds of Kentia Belmoreana and Forsteriana by the case of 5000 Seeds received direct from Australia. Price $17.50 net cash, F. O. B. New York. Prices for large quantities on application.....

Australian Palm Seed Co.

ROOM 52. 38 38 38

90 Nassau Street, NEW YORK.

SPARAGI

50,000 plants in 2½-inch pots, $5.00 per 100, X press; 24 for $1.50 by mail. . . . . Specimens for 8-inch pots, $6 and $12.

A. BLANC & CO. PHILADELPHIA.

THE FINEST STOCK IN

Azaleas

THE WORLD

Palms Bay Trees

SANDER. BRUGES, BELGIUM.

Araucarias A. Dimmoun, 60 Vesey St., NEW YORK.

Do not forget to say "saw your ad. in the American Florist" when corresponding with advertisers.

Now Ready

THE American Florist Company's DIREC-THE American Florist Company's Outcome 10RY of Florists, Nurserymen and Seedsmen of the United States and Canada arranged both by States and Post Offices and all names Alphabetically. Fully revised to date with upwards of 3,000 New Names. Price $2.00; in flexible leather binding, $3,00.

American Florist Company,

324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., U. 5 A.

Helpful Reminders.

You may be requested to plant geraniums in a bed of tulips. Some customers have been given to understand that these plants are good year after year and they will ask you to save them for them next fall. Do not let such impressions go unnoticed. If you do your customer will possibly be disappointed next season and blame you. Explain to them that no bulb ever blooms twice; that a new bulb is formed very close to the old one and, if properly developed, will be a duplicate. which for practical purposes may be considered the same bulb. Where the development is not perfect the bulb will be small and then people say that their bulbs grow smaller and the bloom is interior. The leaves should not be cut off but the seed pods should be. Do not dig up until the foliage has dried off.

Label a large envelope "Orders for fall planting," and put it in your desk. Just now you can take orders for many things you cannot supply on demand. Put them in this envelope and in August you can look them up and have quite a little fall trade secured which, without the envelope, you might forget. Order now such seeds as you will use in July, such as primrose, cineraria and pansy.

Bamboos are sending up new shoots from the ground. Give them a shift and rich soil with good drainage as quickly as you can. Keep them growing. Get almost everything from under your benches. Tuberoses, begonias and gloxinias should be growing; small pots and light soil will do now; give them a shift later on.

A few fancy caladiums should be started now as they are valuable for summer decoration an are easily kept from one season to another. Pot plants of dahlias in bloom sell well and will rival the canna. You cannot do better than get a full set of named varieties for your trial ground.

Longiflorums planted outside last fall are looking well for bloom about June 20 and they are quite useful at this time. If you have not provided any make a memorandum and put it in your envelope for fal work. Gladioli on benches are in bud now; plant the balance of your bulbs outside. This is the time to get your local newspaper man to write up the beautiful features of many lawns and gardens, mentioning Mrs. Jones' beauti-ful almond, Mrs. Smith's perfect for-sythia, Mrs. Brown's excellent Canary Bird tulips, etc.

Do not plant out all unsold pot plants. Everything that is good for Easter, such as hardy roses, particularly Crimson Rambler, hydrangeas and all shrubs, should be kept in pots.

When paronies are coming on poorly, with the buds covered with ants, bore two holes three leet deep, put in about two pounds of sheep manure, pour in at least a barrel of water and fill up the holes. Do not wet the surface of the C. B. W. ground

Acrona, 111. The auptials of Grace cralding Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wickliffe L. Smith, and Miles. Bron. son, of Clevcland, Ohio, were solemnized on June 2 by Dr. L. W. Lounsbury, the divine who, nearly a quarter of a century ago, completed the hymeneal compact of the bride's parents. The bridal partylete for the east in Mr. Bronson's private car received above the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Bronson will reside in New Yeak that where the ground is private secretory to President Calloriay, of the New York Certral Radson

YOUNG

ROSES

PLANTS

ALL STOCK SENT OUT IS FIRST-CLASS IN EVERY RESPECT.

| From               | 2¼-inch | Pots. | Per 100    | Per 1000       |
|--------------------|---------|-------|------------|----------------|
| AMERICAN           | BEAUTI  | ES    | $5.00 | $40.00        |
| BRIDES             |  |       | 3.00   | 25.00          |
| BRIDESMAI          | D       |       | 3.00   | 25.00          |
| METEOR             |  |       | 3.00   | 25.00          |
|                    |         |       |            |                |
| PERLE              |         |       | 3.00   | 25.00          |
| METEORKAISERIN |         |       | 3.00   | 25.0025.00 |

TERMS CASH WITH ORDER.

J. A. BUDLONG, 37-39 Randolph Street, CHICAGO

CHICAGO. ILL.

40,000 FIRST QUALITY FORCING ROSES

Fully equal to those sent out the last six years, first-class and perfectly healthy in every respect. Only selected growth from flowering shoots used in propagating. Wooton, La France, American Beauty, President Carnot, 3-in. pots, $8 per 100; 4-in. pots, $12 per 100. Meteor, Kanserin, Sunset, Bon Silene, Mermet, Perle, Goutier, Bridesmaid, Belle Siebrecht, Mmc. Haste, Niphetos, Bride, 3-in. pots, $7 per 100; 4-in. Bloomsburg,

Bloomsburg,

Robt. Garrett pots, $10 per 100. J. L. DILLON, Bloomsburg, Pa.

OWN ROOTS & DORMANT & & FIELD GROWN

IN COLD STORAGE IN CHICAGO.

No. 1, 2 to 4 feet, cut back to 2 feet Yellow Rambler (Aglaia) Hybrid Perpetuals, Mosses, Hardy Climbers and Madam Plantier

These plants are very strong and well shaped. Prices on application. Address

W. F. HEIKES, Manager,

1308-1310 Unity Bldg., -CHICAGO, ILLS.

Rose Plants...

Fine Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle, Sunset and Meteor,

 $2^{+}_{\text{g}}\text{-inch Rose pots}\dots$  \$3.00 per 100. 3-inch pots, standard.... 5.00 per 100.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey. FORT WAYNE, IND.

AMERICAN BEAUTY

Fine young plants, healthy and strong:  $2^{12}$ -inch pots, $8.00 per 100, $70.00 per 1000.

EDIVIN LONSDALE,
Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill,
'ash with order. PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Money Order Office, Statlen H. Philia Cash with order

HANDY FOR WESTERN GROWERS

Beauties, Brides, Maids, Meteors, Woottons and Perles, 24/3 and 4-m. Strong, clean, healthy stock, cheap for cash, to clean up, It you wint good stuff at prices to suit write us for prices at once. Address.

J. N. KIDD, Florist, St. Joseph, Mo.

YOUNG ROSES, STRONG BTOCK.

THE FLORAL EXCHANGE, 614 Chestnut Street, PHILA.

Now Ready!

American Horist Company's ..

DIRECTORY Of Florists, Nur-serymen & Seeds-non of the United states and Canada Price Two Dollars In Flexible Leather Hinding, Three Dollars.

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY 124 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, III.

Winner of 6 certificates, medal and silver cup. $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100. A fine stock of young chrysonthennums and cartatious. Send for trade list describing above in detail.

H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.

n Reeceeeeeeeeeeeeeeee

FROM 2 1-2 INCH POTS.

Strong, thrifty, well established plants. General price $4.00 per 100. Extra fine lot of Crimson Ramblers.

Jackson & Perkins Co. NEWARK, NEW YORK.

ROSES..

2-in, per 100 3-in, per 100 $.. $5.00 Am. Beauties ... Perle . . . . . . $2.75 Bridesmaid . . . 2.75 4.50

4.50

MAPLEWOOD CUT FLOWER and PLANT CO. PLEASANT HILL, MO.

Memorial Rose

Strong field-grown plants, $50, $75 and $100 per 1000

SAM'L C. MOON.

MORRISVILLE, Bucks Co., PA.

2-YEAR-OLD ROSES

from 4 m, pots m variety, $5,00 per 100, CARNATIONS, $2,50 per 100 from 2½, meb, pots, Scott, Portin, McGowan, also all voung roses and general stock, TIGON VINES, $2,50 per 100

THE NATIONAL PLANT CO., Dayton, O.

Do You Need Young Rose Stock

In planting, out of 3-in pots: A dollar more on the bundred 1- nothing if you get better stock. Send site or $1.00 in stamps for samples of what you want to

GEO. A. KUHL,

Montton tide poper.

.... PEKÍN, ILL.

Carried Over American Beauty Plants.

Mr. Robert Simpson's replies to queries from correspondents are always intelligent and to the point. Experience which I have had along the lines heading this note may be of some little interest to your readers.

Last year I tried old American Beauty plants in various ways and in different houses with varying results. One house I left entirely undisturbed, and the after treatment it received, judging by the results, was not anywhere near being correct. The plants were given a partial rest for six or eight weeks—from early in July to the middle and latter end of August. Part of the house was pruned back hard one week later than the other, with no perceptible difference in favor of either when the time for cutting extra fine blooms arrived. This house is devoted entirely to solid beds.

The plants "broke" fairly well, though the leaves when developed were a trifle more yellow than I like to see in a rose at any stage of its existence. When this When this state of affairs presents itself, it is the natural impulse of most gardeners and florists to withhold water. This, I think now, is where we made a mistake, for I firmly believe that the plants did not receive sufficient water; and if I have the courage to try a similar experiment! will give them much more than those complained about received last summer and fall. I feel now that it would be a difficult matter to give old undisturbed plants too much water in a well-drained solid bed during the heated term of summer and early fall.

Another matter worthy of recording is that the warm end of the house has been the most profitable, which is proof, I think, that old plants require more heat during the fall and winter than do younger plants. The difference in the temperature during the night was not more than two degrees, yet the beneficial effects of those two additional degrees of heat were very apparent during the whole winter. Another experiment I whole winter. Another experiment i tried was lifting the plants after pruning them to within two or three eyes from the base of the shoots, and heeling them in outside, where they remained until all the old soil was wheeled out and replaced by you. These plants gave fairly good by new. These plants gave fairly good results, and under certain conditions I would not hesitate to do the same again. When the object in view is to plant early for early cutting, my observations lead me to the belief that better results will be obtained than if the present years cut-tings are used—unless the plants result-ing therefrom be unusually strong. I will experiment a little again this year, but am not inclined to try soon again to leave the old plants in all summer undisturbed. EDWIN LONSDALE.

English Flower Pots.

In perusing English gardening articles the American reader may be often puzzled to make out the size of the pot mentioned. The following list will be found useful, Small 60's, 3-inch; large 60's, 4-inch; 48's, 5-inch; 32's, 6-inch; 24's, 7-inch; 20's, 8-inch; 16's, 9-inch; 12's, 10-inch.

Changes in English Methods of Exhibiting Roses.

The National Rose Society in its present schedule provides for a few classes to be exhibited in vases with stems and foliage. The Gardeners' Magazine in commending this change advocates going a step further and abolishing the boxes for all exhibits of small numbers and showing them "American fashion." Americans will wonder why any discussion is necessary on this matter and why any one who admires a beautiful vases of roses on long stems with fine foliage would ever advocate the sacrifice of all this beauty in an exhibition hall.

Ansonia, Conn.—Morris A. Hill died at his home here on May 27, aged 63 years. For fifteen years he had been the leading florist of Ansonia and the superintendent of Pine Grove cemetery. Mr. Hill had been in failing health for a long time. He leaves a wife and five children.

Rose Plants

INCH POTS.

| AMERICAN BEAUTIES$5.00 | Per 1000$45.00 |
|-------------------------|---------------------|
| METEORS 3 00            | 25,00               |
| BRIDES                  | 25,00               |
| MAIDS                   | 25.00               |
| PERLES 3.00             | 25.00               |

ROGERS PARK FLORAL CO.

Wholesale Growers of ....

CUT FLOWERS ROSE PLANTS..

51 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO

In A-1 stock of all the leading varieties. Now ready at reasonable prices. . . . . .

Carnations...

Only a few left of Lily Dean, the best of all the fancy varieties.

Chrysanthemums

All the new ones of this year's introduc-tions and all the best of former years in splendid condition for immediate ship-ment.

All the really good dis-tinct varieties in extra strong stock from 4-inch pots. Write for special prices on large orders to . . .

Summit, New Jersey. JOHN N. MAY, =

Chrysanthemums

Mrs. S. T. Murdock, Mine. F. Bergman, Whilldin, H. L. Sunderbruch, Eda Prass, Inter Ocean, V. Morel, Childs, John Robinson, Philadelphia, Dailledonze, Ivory, Yellow Queen and others, 21,2 and 3-inch pots, $2,50 per 100.

and 3-inch pots, $2.50 per 100. . . . .

McDONALD & STEELE, Crawfordsville, Ind.

20c each, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100

Ghrysanthemum GRAHA

Yellow Sport of JEROME JONES.

It received the highest points and a Certificate of Merit at the Cleveland Chrysanthemum Show. It is in Yellow what Jerome Jones is amongst the White. The very best for late blooming. 24<sub>2</sub>-in. pot plants strong, $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100. Stock rendy April 15th.

E. J. PADDOCK, 295 Erie St., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Chrysanthemums, 21g-in. Carnations, from soil.

Geraniums, 3-in.

All fine stocky ...plan1s

Cannas, 4-111.

Write for Quotations

The Cottage Gardens, OUEENS, L. I.

They Don't Miss

Fire... Who take the right course and dispose of surplus stock 🊜 through the advertising pages of 🧀 🎺

The American Florist

IT HAS NO RIVAL.

Pittsburg.

MEMORIAL WEEK TRADE WAS A RECORD BREAKER.-GOOD PRICES PREVAILED .-CHRISTIAN BURKET'S FIELD DASSES .-ERNEST FISCHER'S WELL-DOING.

The Memorial Day and week's business was a record breaker for this section. The absence of outdoor stock, owing to backwardness of the season, acted in favor of the cut flower brauch, and many dealers sold out completely early in the day on Monday, while the plant men had on Friday and Saturday all they could attend to. Good prices were obtained. Pæonies that a week before sold at $2 per hundred and were a drug on the market at that, brought 82 to 83 per dozen on Monday. There was an increase of from 50% to 75% in the total business over the best of several years past. Business since Me-morial Day has been good, prices returning to regular rates.

Outdoor grown field daisies at this season are a rarity, but our market has been well supplied with them for two weeks. Gustave Ludwig informs methat they are grown by Christian Burket at Glendale, Pa. The original seed was brought by him in 1880 from Wiltenburg, Germany, and they are distinctly early varieties, as hardy as the ordinary kind and very prolific in blooms. Mr. Ludwig sold a large quantity of them within a week.

Ernest Fischer, of Castle Shannon, Pa., is making quite a reputation for being carliest in the market. He had cosmos and gladiolus several weeks ago, and this week had calliopsis, Lilium auratum over ten inches in diameter, and asters, the latter in pots; he expects to have dahlias and hollyhocks ready before others do. Mr. Fischer has ten greenhouses with about 12,000 feet of glass and this mouth will erect four more much larger, which will give him at least 14,000 feet more glass. His hotbed capacity is about 5,000 feet. With this he says he will have enough to keep him busy and enable him to furnish a better variety of stock, the quality of which will be, as now, strictly first-class. REGIA.

Rochester, N. Y.

On Memorial Day the principal demand is for the cheaper grades of cut flowers; usually they are rather scarce here. It is seldom that many of the shrubs are fully in bloom and the large flowering percunials do not, in ordinary seasons, expand their useful blossoms until some days or weeks after May 30. This season, however, is an exception; shrubs of many kinds are ahead of their time, and in the perennials we have a far greater variety than we can ordinarily expect at the end of May, therefore the cut flower supply was for once fully up to the demand. had bright colored paranjes of the officinalis, arborea and tennifolia section, stately ans, arnorea and temmona section, stately rises in all colors, blue, white and pink Centauren montana, the soft yellow Hemerocallis flava, brilliant oriental poppies, the dazzling lychnis, aquilegias in great variety, plenty of white ibers, pyrethrums in all shades and the showy parcurrans mail shades and the showy large pancles of Thalictrum aquilegio hum besides the many species of princi-pally whate flowering shrubs. Never-before was there uch an apparently un-limited supply of show, can flowers, but, tained supply of snow, cut flowers, but, of course no very high prices were obtained. Let carriations and roses did not experience an advance in price as is usual, as such as easions. Plant sales, to a were fely up to the average, but prices are even below those of last some prices are even below those of last year. The grower is groundling and the retailer is dissatisfied still, taking into considera [1] tion the quantities disposed of, neither of them has much reason for complaint except that they are compelled to handle or grow so many more plants to make up for the deficiency in prices.

The annual meeting of the botanical section of the Rochester Academy of Sei-once was held. May 24 and was notable for the display of Greenland plants collected by the Peary relief expedition and presented to the Academy by Prof. W. W. Rowlee, of Cornell University. There were other valuable exhibits. Papers were read, among them being one on "Germination," by Charles Wright Dodge, and one, "Notes on Yosemite Flora," by J. B. K. A. J. Perkins.

Nashville, Tenn.

COMMENCEMENT TRADE MAKES FLORISTS HAPPY. -- DRY WEATHER DAMAGES STOCK. -PUTTING IN NEW ROSE PLANTS.-SHIP-14NG MAGNOLIAS.

The week has been occupied in filling school commencement orders, which have helped the florists wonderfully. Stock has not been good. The excessive hot, dry weather of the past two weeks has had its effect upon roses. Bride and Bridesmaid, especially, have felt the hot spell and are small, with seorched outside leaves. Florists are trying to shade their houses so as to prevent further damage. Perle and Meteor, especially the latter, seem to stand the heat well, and are in the market in very fair quality.

There are quantities of candidum lilies. field grown, to be seen everywhere. Sweet peas are abundant, although the dry spell has also affected them. Asterplants and other field grown stock are coming on nicely and will soon give an abundance of bloom.

Florists are busy putting in their new rose plants. Some of the growers dis-pose of their old beuch roses to other florists and nurserymen, who cut them back and pot them. They make very fine roses for the market for those customers who prefer the two years old plants.

Northern visitors like to send home magnolia blossoms, which are now in full They are very difficult to ship flower. successfully and, being cut in the bud, do not give an adequate idea of the grandeur of the bloom as it is upon the M. C. Dorris.

Kalamazoo, Mich.-Joseph Dunkley, a leading citizen died on May 27, aged 41 years. He was a florist by trade but a number of years ago instituted experiments in celery culture which have so developed the industry as to give Kalamazoo a national reputation for this vegetable. Mr. Dunkley leaves a wife ard seven children.

CANNAS

Extrastrong plants 4 Inch p ds Per IIII

Rest French varis (Mine, Crozy, Alphonse Bonvier etc. 281.81

Conne on varietles 5 00

Lowert wholesale rates for bedding plants, all first class its kell in great variety. Prices on application.

Take in exchange young Palms and Kicus, 25 in pots

BAYWOOD FLORAL CO. BRYANT ST., E. E., PITTSBURCH, PA.

FLORA HILL CARNATION. It selfs because there is nothing in slight to the first order were grown. It is fragrant. It is the because the bloom. It puts all others in the shade to be unset or present to equal it. We have four used of plants exclusively four propagating from the other to bloom. Send at once and get the state were different to lower the first sever different to lower the full there the etres ever offered. 15 00 per 100, fill 00 per 1000. I de Bat is based. If you have not received ong

E. G. HILL & CO., Richmond, Ind.

Lie ise mention the American Florist

FINE PLANTS

VERBENAS

IN BUD AND BLOOM.

Many Fine Varieties added to Our Collection.

Best Mammoth .....per 100, $3 101; per 1000, $25 60 Ceneral Collection 2 50; "20 60

ROSES.

American Beauty, 3-Inch pots ......per 100, $10.00 Bridesmaid, Brides Perle, Meteor, Bon Silene, Watteville, La France, Sunset, Mermet. Price from T<sub>4</sub> Inch pots, $5.00 per 1001; $40.00 per 1000. Ever-blooming and Polyantha, in bud and $20.00 per 1001 $40.00 per 1000.

#20 00 per 100

Hybrid Perpetual, in bud, from 5 loch pots, strong $25 00 per 1 0.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

50 floe varieties from 23-inch pots, $3.00 and $4.00 per 100. Send for list of varieties.

MISCELLANEOUS PLANTS.

| miccallaniaco i annici                                                                                                                                                                                           |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Ready for immediate sales. 100. Anthemia Coronaria, from 25 Inch pot 3                                                                                                                                           |
| Alternanthera, all leading varieties. 3.60 Ageratum, the and white. 3.60 Carnations, from theb pots, fine stock. 12.60 Coleus, leading sorts, 234-inch pots. 3.60 5.60                                           |
| Ceraniums, double and single. 4-inch pots 8.00                                                                                                                                                                   |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| " Ivy, floe variety, 4 " 8.00                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Heliotrope, from 3-inch pots                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Hydrangea Otaksa, 51n. bushy                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Moonflower, 21-9-10ch pots                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Pelargoniums, 24-inch pots. 6,00Salvia Spiendens sod Bedman, 24-in. pots 3 00Vinca Variegata and Elegans, 4 inch pots. 10,00Violets, Marie Louise, 24-inch pots, $25,00per 1000, $3 00 per 100 |
| Panaies in bud and bloom $2.00 per 100; $15.00                                                                                                                                                                 |

per 1000.
Alt the above is from stock in condition for immediate sales.

ESTABLISHED CARNATIONS FROM SOIL.

New Trade List on application.

WOOD BROS., Fishkill, N. Y. When writing mention American Florist.

NEW WHITE PERPETUAL

BLOOMING CARNATION

Anna H. Shaw

The Best "All Round" White Carnation for Cut Flowers. Recommendations: Wonderful bloomer, Unusual Vigor, Rapid Grower. Forms Strong Bloomer, Unusual Vigor, Rapid Grower. Forms Strong Bloomer, Plants in a Very Short Time. Perfectly Honithy, Handsome Foliago Large Benuttfully Formed Flowers on Long Stems. Exquisitely Fragrant, Never Burets, Blooms Longer and Gives More Flowers than Any other Variety Ever Offered H you want a RELIABLE Carnation that can always be depended upon, give Anna H. Shaw a trial. Rooted intings. Il por doz; 86 per 100 Strong Plants. If oper doz; 80 per 100 Send for Trade List and Catalogue of Seeds, Bulbs. Plants, Cneti, Etc.

Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, Ventura (by-the-Sea), Cal.

Last Call CARNATIONS

All the movelines of 1898 at $10.00 per 100 - I lora Hill, Jubilee and Pingree, a time trim, $5.00 per 100. All the best

GEO. HANCOCK & SON, GRAND HAVEN,

t.a Fayette, Ind

Everybody is more pleased if you say "saw your ad, in the American Florist" i when writing.

g202020202020202020202029

SPECIAL PRICES

GERANIUM "MARS" 24-in. in bloom, $5.00
Geraniums, single scarlet, 4-inch in bloom. 5.00
Frank Hardy Chrysanthemums, 2½-in. per doz. $1.00.
BRIDESMAID ROSES, extra clean, 2½
inch pots. 22.00
BRIDE ROSES, 2½-inch pots. 2.00
BRIDE ROSES, 2½-

SURPLUS STOCK ## OF FINE PLANTS. Per 100 Geraninms, mixed vars., 2½ and 3 in... $\frac{1}{2}$ 50 and $\frac{2}{2}$ 00 Alternanthera, yellow. 1.00 Asters. 2.00 Asters. 1.00 Sword Ferns, 2½, 3 and 4-in... $\frac{3}{2}$.00, $\frac{2}{2}$.00 Sword Ferns, 2½, 3 and 4-in... $\frac{3}{2}$.00, $\frac{2}{2}$.00 Catherine Mermet Roses, 2-in... 1.00 WILLIAMS & SONS CO., Batavia, III.

VEGETABLE PLANTS

Tomato, Cabbage, Lettuce, Celery and Sweet Potato, 15 cts. per 100; $1.00 per 1000.

Pepper and Egg Plants, 25c per 100; $2.00 per 1000.
Cauliflower Snowball, 35c per 100; $2.50 per 1000.
All plants by mail, 10c per 100 extra. Price list for large quantities. Cash with order.

R. VINCENT, Jr. & SON, White Marsh, Md.

BENJ. CONNELL, Florist,

WEST GROVE, PA.

10,000 Ampelopsis Veltchii, fine dormant pot plants, 1 and 2-year old; price 3 and 6c. 10 000 pot-grown Cannas, cream of bedding sorts. 20 000 Volets; 20,000 Carnations; Spiræa Anthony Waterer and Blue Spiræa; Strawberry-Raspberry and other new small fruits. All must be sold. Ask for prices. Addrass

BENJ. CONNELL, West Crove, Pa.

MAJOR VARIEGATA LEFT.

Fine plants from 2½-inch pots, $2.50 per 100.

WILLIAMS & CRITTENDEN, WATERLOO, IOWA.

CANNA BARGAINS. Dormant roots with two and more eyes. PURCHAS-ER'S SELECTION of Alphonse tenr Crampbel. Florence Vaughan, J. D. Cabos and Chicago, $15 per 1000; $2.50 per 100. Burbank in 3-inch pots, $3 per 100. MIXED CANNAS, $10 per 1000; $2 per 100.

AMERICAN BULB COMPANY United States Exotic Nurseries, SHORT HILLS, N. J. TRADE LISTS ON APPLICATION.

2000 Smilax

First-class 3-inch stock, $2.50 per 100; $20 per 1000.

THE E. HIPPARD CO.,

.....YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

HARDY PINKS

2½-in. pots; Souv. de Sale, $3.50 per 100; Her Majesty, Glen Valley, Lanra Wilmer, Ger-trude, $3.00 per 100.

VIOLETS...

246-in. pots; Admiral Avellon, Princess of Wales, $3.50 per 100; Luxonne, California, Campbell, Swanley White, $3.00 per 100. THE CONARO & JONES CO., - West Grove, Pa.

3000 SMILAX from flats at 400 per 100; $3.00 per 1000. From 2-in. pots, $1.50 per 100. FINE PERLE ROSE PLANTS from 3½-1ucb pots, $4.00 per 100.

ALONZO ULSH, Box 420, WABASH, IND.

VERBENAS. The choicest varieties and healthiest plants grown. Strong plants in bud and bloom.

$2.50 per hundred; $20.00 per thousand.

75 finest varieties in cultivation, grown in 31/2in pots. Strong plants in bud and bloom. $5.00 per 100.

J. L. DILLON, BLOOMSBURG, PA.

www.HERR'S PANSIES

...SMILAX...

...SEED... ...PLANTS... Ready now at $1.50 per 14 oz. ....PLAN 15... Ready now, 75c per 100; $5 per 1000. September to January; 75c per 100; $4 per 1000.

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa. Sample plants for 10 cents. Je Je Je

Princess of Wales Violet...

The Best Money-Maker Among Violets. Strong 21/2-inch pot-grown plants......$5.00 per 100.

J. A. PETERSON. = 105 E. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

GERANIUMS
Fine 4-in. stock in 10 Standard and new varieties at $5. $6, and $7 per 100. 2-in. $2.00 per 100.

MME. BRUANT, strong, 2½-in......$3.00 per 100 Mixed New and Standard vars., 2½-in. 2.00 per 100 S. A. NUTT, 2½-in............ 2.00 per 100 CASH PLEASE.

CARL HAGENBURGER, West Mentor, Ohio.

hoice Stock!

HELIOTROPE 212-inch, fine 2c. VERBENAS 2-inch, fine 1 1-2G. Separate colors. . . . Cash with order.

SOUTH SIDE FLORAL CO., Springfield, III.

FAXON'S "WHITE" PANSIES.

The best mixture in cultivation, flowers very large, thick and velvety; of superb colors and markings. The perfection of form and texture.

In Trade Packets at $1.00 each.

M. B. FAXON,

1528. BOSTON, MASS. Correspondence solicited. Lock Box 1528.

PANSIES
THE JENNINGS STRAIN.
THEY ARE GRAND.
Fine stocky plants in bud
and bloom, $10 and $15 per 1000; $1.50 and $2 per 100 by express; small plants, 75c by mail. Pansy seed, $1.00 per pkt. Aster seed, Semple's pink, $1.00 per oz. Cush with order.

E. B. JENNINGS,

SOUTHPORT, CONN. Lock Box 254. Crower of the Finest Pansies.

PANSIES IN BUD AND BLOOM

Extra fine plants, $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000. Cash with the order.

Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, PAL Money Order P. O., Statlon H., Phila.

Vinca Major Variegata

1000 3-INCH POTS

Three to five leads, 18 to 24-inches long, 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100.

NATHAN SMITH & SON. ADRIAN, MICH.

It is good business policy to mention the

....American Florist

when you write to an advertiser.

The finest strain of Pansies in the World.

INTRODUCER AND GROWER OF ALL THE LEADING NOVELTIES.

Highest Award Inter. Exhibition at Hamburg, 1897. Catalogua frea on application.

Fred. Roemer,

A Seed Grower, - QULULINDUNO, VENNOUS AND SEED OF THE Seed Grower, - QUEDLINBURG, GERMANY.

THE MORRIS FLORAL CO., Morris, III.

Florists' Stock for Bedding

Alternanthera, Coleus, Geraniums, Pansies, Daisies, Verbenas, Fuchsias, Salvia, etc., etc. Write for prices. Florists when in Milwaukee are invited to look over our stock

ARCHIE MIDDLEMASS 1019 Forest Home Ave., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

June Offer Per 100

JOS. H. CUNNINGHAM, Delaware, O.

BARGAINS IN PLANTS CEST

NICHOLAS AMOS, Crestline, Ohio.

5,000 SMILAX...

From flats, by mail. 30c per 100, $1.00 per 100. From 2-inch pots, $2.25 per 100, $13.00 per 1000 Geraniums from 2-inch pots, $2.25 per 100; $20.00 per 1000 Cash with the order. Send orsamples. Fred Boerner, CAPEMAY CITY, N.J.

St. Louis.

SUMMER LASSITUDE APPARENT IN THE MIS-SOURI METROPOLIS, -COMPLAINTS OF THE GROWERS OF BEDDING PLANTS .- SUMMER BLOOMS TO BE CULTIVATED.

Continued warm weather is having its effect on prices, for while they have been low they are going lower. During the greater part of the week stock was very abundant but of poor quality. Colored stock seems to have suffered most. Within the past few days several commencements, quite a few weddings and numerous shipping orders, cleared the market of good stock, especially roses. Prices with the commission men did not advance except with one or two who report one cent advance on select roses, which does not amount to anything. The best stock coming in of Kaiserin, Maid, Bride and Meteor is generally 4 cents, occasionally 5 cents; carnations, exceptionally good, are $2 per 100. Outdoor stock is slow; some fine Jacqs are coming in and run from $1 to $1.50 per 100.

Trade holds up fairly well and quite a little shipping has been going on for the past two days, but the demand is looked upon as transitory and everyone seems to be expecting the early advent of the summer dullness. Bedding trade has eased up very perceptibly, and has left numerous growers with large stocks on hand. There seems to be considerable hard feeling among the trade in regard to the prices at which bedding stock has been sold this season. Those who have sold out have done so at prices so low that there was little if any profit, and those still having stock on hand claim that the same amount of stock could have been disposed of at fully 50% higher prices, which would have given a profit all around.

Several of the growers who produce both cut flowers and spring stock, have decided to give up the latter and turn the time and space formerly devoted to bed-ding plants to the growing of roses, asters, gladioli and other stock for summer flowering. They expect to get the same or better returns for less work. It seems certain that there is a good opening for this stock, as it is almost impossible at times during the summer to obtain good blooms. R. F. T.

NORTHVILLE, MICH.-J. M. Dixon is gaining a reputation for ornamental beds and has laid out a number in surrounding towns, notably at Plymouth.

Pillar-Catter

STOPS CATERPHIARS

con a nown practical device type teets trees from the ray-of eaterpillar, and all other wing insects. A few cents catron is few tacks and it is self-readily at the per yard.

Send for price list testi-montals and sample ....

Fairmount Tree Protector Co. 311 S. 15th St., Philadelphia.

The Harrisii Disease

Can be prevented by immersing the bulbs for ten hours in a half solution of 99 per cent. & & &

KRAFT'S PLANT

This has been conclusively proven by experiments at Lincoln Park, Chicago. 🥒 The Tonic also kills Hard Shelled Scale, Mealy Bug, and other insect pests without injury to the plant. A trial of a 25-cent bottle will convince you that a really remarkable

KRAFT PLANT TONIC CO., Rockford, III.

ESE CROSS BRAND

TRADE MARK

if your dealer does not have it send direct to the manufacturers 35 Warren Street. The Gutta Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. 96 Lake Street. NEW YORK.

THE MODEL EXTENSION SUPPORT EXTENSION

QUEENS, N. Y. Feb. 16, '97.
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y., Dear Sir:—
I have tested ynnr latest model Carnation Support and am free to say that I consider it the best wire carnation
support that I have ever seen.
It is quickly and easily applied, and I think will prove very durable, and yen certainly deserve great credit for the invention.

Very truly yours,

C. W. WARD.

FLATBUSH, BROOKLYN,
N, Y., Feb. 18, 37.
MR. THEHON PARKER,
Dear SIT:—Your wire stake
to certainly a gem. Without hesitating we indorse it as an ap-to-date carnation
support. Yours truly,
DAILLEDOUZE BROS.

W. Hoboken, N. J.,
Feb. 18, 37.
Mr. Theron Parkeh,
Brooklyn, N. Y., Dear ShriIt gives me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in getting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you
are about as perfect as anybody will be able to make them. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation
support, a thing I have been looking for for a long time,
Wishing you every success
in the sale of them, I am yours truly, E. ASMUS.
It discount on early orders.

Write for price list and discount on early orders.

THERON PARKER, 22 Morton St. BROOKLYN, N. Y.

STEMS DUST EXTRAGT

BOTTOM PRICES.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE,

Chicago New York.

Florists! Seedsmen! Nurserymen!

increase your production and add to ank account. Then buy HARDING'S CUP-TO-JANRAI HRIHIZIR. Guaranteed analysis: cour bank account. Then buy HARDING'S "UP-10-DATH" GIMRAI HRIIII/IR. Guaranteed analysis: Natrogen, 3 In per cent., Phosphoric Acid, 10.50 account, Potosh 5 per cent. Special 30 day offer, $1.50 per 100 Ib bag. Ton Ints even lower. Try upple back (ASH WITH ORDER.

CICO. L. HARDING,

Please mention the American Florist when writing to advertisers.

Mention American Florist.

FIRST-CLASS GOODS and CORRECT PRICES

have forced us to the front and today we are the largest manufact-urers of.....

IRON RESERVOIR VASES

and Lewn Settees in America. . . . A 40-page catalogue for the asking.

McDonald Bros.

10B-114 Liberty St., COLUMBUS, O.

Mention American Floriat.

Scollay

Sprinkler....

INDISPENSABLE J. A. Scollay, Maker, 74 Myrtle Ave.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Gen'I Western Agents, 84 Randolph St., CHICACO.

Dixon. III.

During the week preceding Memorial Day Dixon florists experienced trade which has been unexampled in recent years. Bedding plants sold well despite the gold weekly provided the gold weekly and the gold weekly are the gold weekly as a sold well despite the gold weekly as a sold well despite the sold weekly as a sold well despite the sold weekly as a sold well despite the sold well as a sold well despite the sold well despit the cold weather and the Memorial Day demand cleared out everything in the line of cut flower stock. Roses sold at $1.50 per dozen, with American Beauties at $3. Carnations also brought good prices.

O. L. Baird is enjoying a rapidly increasing trade and is making a number of changes about his greenhouses. Murray, a brother of Samuel Murray, the well known Kansas City florist, is now in Mr. Baird's employ and is eertainly a success as he is greatly increasing the production of the establishment, both in quantity and quality, W.R. P.

Before buying write for prices. 361-363 Herndon Street, near Wrightwood Ave.,

CHICAGO, ILL.

FLOWER POTS

ALL KINDS.

A SPECIALTY STANDARD POTS

List and SAMPLES FREE.

J. G. SWAHN'S SONS, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Standard & & FLOWER

If your greenhouses are within 500 miles of the Capitol, write us; we can save you money.

W. H. ERNEST, Station M. N. E. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Good Railroad Facilities
For shipping.
Special Attention Giveo to
Mail Orders, and Special
Sizes Made to Order.

Price Lists Furnished on Application.

When corresponding with advertisers, mention the AMERICAN FLORIST.

Wheeler-Stenzel Co.

))))]]]]]

Make your contracts for next season now. We can deliver to any part of the country and Save You Money......

))))]]]]

Greenhouse Glass

72 Sudbury St., BOSTON, MASS.

It's easy to use because the principle is right. A boy can operate it. It's easy to put up because of it's ex-treme simplicity. It's easy to buy because the price is reasonable.....

THE CHAMPION VENTILATING APPARATUS

Catalogue is free. A postal with your name and address secures it. Address

AMERICAN ROAD MACHINE CO. Kennett Square, Pa.

GREENHOUSE MA

Cal. Red Cedar and Louisiana Cypress. BEST GRADES. PERFECT WORKMANSHIP.

A. DIETSCH & CO. sheffieldave. CHICAGO, ILL.

Standard Flower Pots...

We ship all goods from Cincinnati, guaranteeing lowest treight rates and prompt delivery.

Write us before placing your orders elsewhere......

CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO., Covington, Ky.

"STANDARDS"

FULL SIZE AND WIDE BOTTOMS. BULB PANS AND AZALEA POTS

DETROIT FLOWER POT M'F'Y, HARRY BALSLEY, DETROIT, MICH., 490 HOWARD ST. Rep.

EVANS' IMPROVED CHALLENGE Ventilating A*PPARATUS*

QUAKER CITY MACHINE WORKS.

FOR SALE CHEAP.

GLASS for Greenhouses, Cooservatories, Hother Bands, Paiots, Oils, etc. Also Hothed Sashes and Mats, Paiots, Oils, etc. IHE REEO GLASS & PAINT CO., 466 W. Broadway, NEW YORK.

STANDARD FLOWER POTS

Send for price list of Standard Flower Pots, Hanging Vases, Seed Pans and Cylinders for Cut Flowers Lawn Vases, 17x17-in., $1.00; 19x20-in., $1.50; Bases 12-in. higb 50c. Address

HILFINGER BROS. POTTERY, FORT EDWARD, N. Y.

AUGUST ROLKER & SONS. AGTS., 52 DEY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

NEW & SECOND-HAND MATERIAL.

purchased from Sheriff, Receiver, and Assignee, sales at less than one-half prices. Pipe and Fittings Hose, Florists Wire, Hot Water Heaters, Greenhouse Bollors and Englines, Rope, Light Wrought tron Pipe, Glass Sash, and thousands of other articles, for sale by

CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO. Largest Mail Order Depot for New and Second-Hand Material in the World.

W. 35TH & IRON STS., CHICACO. Write for our free illustrated catalogues.

Always mention the ......

American Florist

when writing advertisers.

Worcester, Mass.

Seven days of rain ended with Sunday and the flowers rotted on the plants. Even with heat on and ventilators wide pen it was impossible to keep anything like a dry atmosphere in the houses but notwithstanding this bad weather, which, of course, had its influence on trade, we did the largest Memorial Day business on record.

The stock of flowers was larger and their quality was better than ever before but prices were about regular. Carnations retailed from 35 cents to $1 per dozen; roses $1 to $3; stocks and antirrhinum 50 cents to $2; lily of the valley 50 cents; lilies $3; Narcissus Poeticus 50 cents; sweet peas 25 cents.

White syringa, field grown, worked in well on the coarser creations, but our great mainstay, Deutzia gracilis, was late on account of the dark week. Blooming plants in pots were not nearly as popular as the general increase in the plant trade led us to believe they would be. Hydrangeas and geraniums all sold fairly well, but there was plenty to spare, and good stock at that. Popular taste returned to the old days, and $1 and $2 bouquets were turned out by the thousand. Trade in general was on cheaper lines which, of course, made florists hustle A. II. L.

all the harder.

Write for Estimates.

F. O. PIERCE CO., 170 Fulton St., NEW YORK

VENTILATING

NONE EQUAL IT Strength

AND Durability

Send for Catalogue.

MACHINE NOTHING

Flimsv

Complicated about it.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO,

HENRY W. GIBBONS

134, 136, 138 Liberty Street, NEW YORK, N. Y.

CATALOCUES AND ESTIMATES FREE.

EXPERT ADVICE FURNISHED.

ARE THE BEST

For Heating Greenhouses, Conservatories and Dwellings.

Our boilers consume all gases from the fuel, therefore making it the most desirable boiler for greenhouse heating on the mar-

Send to day for Cata-logue and Price List,

HAN PINE THEA.T. STEATRS Lumber Neponsen: Bastan, Ma

CYPRESS

DESCRIPTION.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

H. F. LITTLEFIELD, WORCESTER, MASS.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.

Bollers made of the best of material, shell, firebox sheets and beads of steel, water space all eround (front, eldes and back). Write for information.

Always mention American Florist.

You can not get a GOOD THING tor nothing. But the price of this apparatus is next to nothing. Send for price and description to

J. D. CARMODY, Evansville, Ind.

Etc. For Sale!

t have still on hand the following greenhouse supplies:

SINCLE THICK CLASS

16x22, 2,500 square feet. 10x12, 500 square feet.

12x16, 400 square feet. 7x9, 200 square feet

Also 100 or more 3v6 sash, glass partly broken; also several thousand Standard Pots, assorted sizes; also forty-horse power Exeter Boiler.

lean not undertake to pack and ship glass, but to parties who can come with cash in haid and take away the goods I will make very low rates: for example, lox22 single thick. A glass $2 00 per 50 quare feet other sizes in proportion. Prices on sash, pots, etc., made on the sput to any proposing purchaser who will call and examine. Do not write.

JAMES D. RAYNOLDS, Riverside, III.

One block north of C. B. & Q. Depot. One block south of Subarben Electric

GREEN-HOUSE HEATING. MYERS & CO.

1518 & 1520 S. 9th St. PHILADELPHIA.

Send for catalogue and price list

Plans and estimates furnished for all kinds of Houses. "N. B." Will accept in pay-ment—Part Cash, Balance on Mortgage. A large stock of Greenhouse Equipment con-stantly on hand.....

The Right Cypress for Greenhouse Material.

Have you heard of Cypress Greenhouse Material that has not been satisfactory? If you have it does not follow that Cypress is not the best lumber to use. There is White Cypress, Yellow Cypress and Red Cypress; there is Cypress that grows on the high lands and Cypress that grows in the swamps.

All of these different kinds are not suitable for greenhouse purposes. Do you know which kind is best and do you know that kind when you see it? If not you would better buy from those that do know and will deliver exactly what they sell. We introduced Cypress for greenhouse construction and pushed it to the front. We know all about it. For fifteen years we have made a specialty of furnishing it, and during this time we have built up a reputation that we can not afford to jeopardize. We send out the best only.

Write for Circulars or Estimates.

Lockland Lumber Co.

LOCKLAND, OHIO.

SALESROOMS:

133 Centre Street, - NEW YORK CITY. 510 Arch Street, - PHILADELPHIA.

COTTAGE BOILER

WESTERN BRASS MFG. CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS: HOLBROOK, MERRILL & STETSON SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

AUG. EGGERS, BREMEN.

THE H. B. SMITH CO., Westfield, Mass.

For Greenhouses, Gardens and Lawns in liberal quantities, every hour of the year, whether the wind & blows or not & & & & &

Improved Rider Hot Air Pump Improved Ericsson Hot Air Pump

Can be run by any ignorant boy without danger - Explosion impossible. Prices greatly reduced. In use in every part of the world. Send for Catalogue A 3.

RIDER-ERICSSON ENGINE CO.

22 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK. 191-193 High St., BOSTON. W YORK. 86 Lake St., CHICAGO. STON. 29-31 N. 7th St., PHILADELPHIA. 6B4 Craig St., MONTREAL, P. Q.

GREENHOUSE CONTRACTOR, STEAM AND HOT WATER ENGINEER 🥦 🚜 🥦

The Largest Builder

Of Gugumber Houses in

GENERAL OFFICE AND WORKS: LEOMINSTER, MASS.

Index to Advertisers

| Index to Advertisers.                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--|--|--|
| Advertising Bates 1317                                             | Loniaville Tobacco Colisia                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |  |  |
| Advertising Rates   331                                            | Lonisville Tobacco Colixis Locas J & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |  |  |
| American Road Ma-                                                  | Lyon Horticole 1323                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |  |  |
| American RoseCo1328                                                | Manz J & Co 1323                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |  |  |
| Amiliag E C 1320                                                   | Maplewood Cut Flo Col.30                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |  |  |
| Armatrong Luther 1324                                              | May H B1328                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |  |  |
| Anstralian Palm Seed                                               | McCorneld dros                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |  |  |
| Bartlett Geo S 1334                                                | McDonald&McManne 1321                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |  |  |
| Bassett & Washurn 1523Bayersdorfer H & Co. 1325                | Middlemass Archie. 1331                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |  |  |
| Baywood Floral Co. 1882                                            | Millang Frank                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |  |  |
| Bobbink L C 1820                                                   | Moon Samuel C 1324 133)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |  |  |
| Boston Letter Co. 1325                                             | Moon Wm II Co 1324Morris Flora I Co 1334                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |  |  |
| Brown Bag Filling                                                  | Myere & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |  |  |
| Brunton F & Co                                                     | National Plant Co1330                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |  |  |
| Budlong J A E20 1350                                               | N Y Cut Flower Ex. 1320                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |  |  |
| Cambridge Tile Mfg 1355                                            | Nickel Plate R R 1323                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |  |  |
| Chiengo Wrecking Co 1355                                           | Parker Theron 1334                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |  |  |
| Cincinnati Bag Co1326                                              | Peacock W P1324                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
| Clucas & Boddington 1826                                           | Peterson J A 1333                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |  |  |
| Conard & Jones Co., 1355                                           | Prince F O Co1336                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |  |  |
| Conley John & Son 1325                                             | McDonald Broa. 1331 McDonald & Steele. 1341 McDonald & Steele. 1341 McDonald & Steele. 1341 McDonald & Steele. 1353 Mildaemass Archie. 1352 Mildaemass Archie. 1352 Mildaemass Archie. 1352 Mono Samuel C 1224 1353 Moon Wm H Co. 1354 Morris Floral Co. 1354 Myers & Co. 1357 Nat I Flo Board Trade. 1353 National Pant (o. 1359 National Pant (o. 1359 N Y Cut Flower Ex. 1359 N Y Cut Flower Ex. 1359 N Y Cut Flower C. 1321 Nickel Plate R. 1353 Paddock E J P. 1353 Paddock E J Rassel 1353 Paddock E J Rassel 1353 Paddock E J Rassel 1353 Padecock WP. 1324 Peterson J A. 1354 Rassel 1354 Rassel 1354 Rassel 1356 Ra |  |  |  |
| Crate Robit & Son 1881                                             | Randall A.L.,1320Raynolds Jas D1357                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |  |  |
| Crowl Fern Co 1325                                                 | Raynor J 11321                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |  |  |
| Detroit Flo w Pot Mfg1335                                          | Reed & Keller1325                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |  |  |
| Dietsch A & Co., 1335                                              | Regan Printing House 1323                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |  |  |
| DornerFred & Sona Col332                                           | Rice M & Co1325                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
| Elebho / Heary1333                                                 | Rider, Ericsson Co1337                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |  |  |
| Elliott W d                                                        | Roemer Fred1334                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
| Erneat W 9                                                         | 1320 1331                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |  |  |
| rairmount Tree Pro-                                                | Rupp Jan F                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |  |  |
| Faxon M 8 1333                                                     | Russell S J1325                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
| Flo Mot Fire Ins Co. 1323                                          | Schiller J L                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |  |  |
| Ford Bros                                                          | Scollay Juo A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |  |  |
| Gibbons II W1336                                                   | Shepherd Mrs T B1332                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |  |  |  |
| Gorton & Lidgerwood 1336                                           | Stehrecht & Son1325                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |  |  |
| Gurney Heater Co . 1336                                            | Shabona & Wanta 1319                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |  |  |  |
| Hagenburger Carl1353                                               | Smith The H B Co 1337                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |  |  |
| Hancock Geo & Sons. 1323                                           | Smith W C                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |  |  |
| Harding Geo L1334                                                  | South Side Floral Co 1333                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |  |  |
| Hart M A                                                           | St Louis Cut FluwerCol                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |  |  |
| Heacock Joa                                                        | Struck J N & Bro1336Sunderhruch H L Co. 1322                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |  |  |
| Herr Albert M 1383                                                 | Sutherland Geo A1321                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |  |  |  |
| Hill E G & Co1332                                                  | Taft L R323                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |  |  |
| Hippard E 186 186                                                  | Trangly & Schenck 1321                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |  |  |
| Holton & Hunkel Co. 1822                                           | Ulah, Alonzo                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |  |  |
| Horan Edw C 1335                                                   | Vance Boiler W'ka 1336                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |  |  |
| Hort Adv                                                           | Van Zanten Broa1329                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |  |  |
| Illinoia Cut Flower Col320                                         | 1328 1329 1334                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |  |  |
| Jennings E B 1333                                                  | Winterson1320                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |  |  |
| Kasting W F                                                        | Vesey, W J & M S1330                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |  |  |  |
| Kaller Geo & Sons 1855                                             | Wabanh R R1323                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |  |  |
| Keisey Harlan P1525Kendall Geo M137                            | Walker Fert Co 1326Watson G C 1324 1326 1825                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |  |  |
| Anstra Palm Seed Co                                                | Regan Printing Housels.  Reinberg Bros 1820 Rice M & Co 1825 Ricksecker: H 1825 Rosen Preforal Co 1836 Rosen Preforal Co 1839 Rosell S. J 1825 Rossell S. J 1825 Rossell S. J 1825 Sander & Co 1829 Rossell S. J 1825 Scollay Juo A 1834 Scott Juo 1825 Scollay Juo A 1834 Scott Juo 1825 Reperior Mrs T B. 1832 Sherldan W F 1831 Sherldan W F 1832 Sherldan W                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
| Wing 1 M 1990                                                      | Weeher & Don 1326                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |  |  |
| Browneners Brow Co., 1886                                          | Wheeler-Stanzel Co. List                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |  |  |
| Kueho C A                                                          | Whilidin Pot Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
| Lager & Hurrell. 1325                                              | Williams&Crittenden.1333                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |  |  |
| Lang Julius                                                        | Williams & Sons Co. 1834Winter S B 1206                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |  |  |
| Lang Julius 1321Littlefield II F. 1336Lockiand Lum Co 1337 | Williams & Sons Co., LSS.Winter S. R., 1320Witthold Geo., LSS.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |  |  |
| 1525 1500 1503                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |  |  |
| Long D B1323Lord & Burnnam Co.1555                             | Wors C.W. 1822Young Jno. 1821Young Thos Jr. 1821                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |  |  |
| ing a norman co.los                                                | TOWNS THOUSET                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |  |  |

Boilers

OF HIGH

For GREENHOUSES.

See our Catalogue.....

Steam and Giblin & Co., Utica, N. Y.

Mention the American Florist when writing to advertisers on this page.

Hitchings & Co.

ESTABLISHED 50 YEARS.

HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS

AND LARGEST MANUFACTURERS OF

GREENHOUSE HEATING AND VENTILATING APPARATUS.

THE HIGHEST AWARDS RECEIVED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR FOR HORTICULTURAL ARCHITECTURE, GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION AND HEATING APPARATUS.

Conservatories, Greenhouses, Palm Houses, etc., erected complete, with our patent Iron Frame Construction. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue.

233 Mercer Street, NEW YORK.

LORD & BURNHAM CO.

Horticultural Architects and Builders steam and hot water heating engineers.

Plans and estimates furnished on application for Greenhouses. Conservatories, etc.. erected complete with our patent iron construction; or for material only ready for erection. Estimates furnished also for Cypress Greenhouse Material.

LARGEST BUILDERS OF GREENHOUSE STRUCTURES.

PLANS
ANO
CONSTRUCTION EMBRACE
LATEST IMPROVEMENTS

SIX HIGHEST AWARDS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

Send 4 cents postage to New York office for latest catalogue

Send 5 cents postage for Creenhouse Heeting and Ventilating Catalogue.

NEW YORK OFFICE,

ST. JAMES BUILDING, Broadway and 26th St.

GENERAL OFFICE AND WORKS, IRVINGTON-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.

Thos. W. Weathered's Son

ESTABLISHED 1859

Horticultural Architect ....and Builder

Manufacturer of Greenhouse Heating and Ventilating Apparatus, Cypress Greenhouse Material of every description. Send four cents postage for illustrated catalogue.

141 Centre St., NEW YORK.

SEND FOR THEM

THEY TELL ALL ABOUT GLASS

John Lucas & Co.,

Philadelphia, Pa.

LUCAS "HELPS"

Goodellii Mass Agri Col

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

America is "the Prow of the Vessel; there may be more comfort Amidships, but we are the first to touch Unknown Seas,"

Vol. XIII.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK, JUNE 11, 1898.

No. 523.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

Copyright 1898, by American Florist Company. Entered as Second-Class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY BY
AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY,

324 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Eastern Office: 67 Bromfield St., Boston.

Subscription, $1.00 a year. To Europe, $2.00. Subscriptions accepted only from the trade.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

OFFICERS-WM. F. GUDE. Washington, D. C., president; A. DONAGHUE. Omaha, Neb., vice-president; W. J. STEWART, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass., secretary; H. B. BEATTY, Oll City, Pa., treasurer. The fourteenth annual meeting will be held at Omaba, Neb., August 16-19, 1888.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.
Annual Convention at Philadelphia, February, 1899.
ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster Pa., Secretary.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.
Annual meeting at Omaha, Neb., August, 1898.
ELMER D. SMITH, Adriau, Mich., secretary.

CONTENTS.

| The florists' bargain counter                                                              |       |       | 1339 |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|-------|------|
| Dracana Godsetliana (illus.)                                                               |       |       | 1340 |
| Carnations                                                                                 |       |       | 1340 |
| Carnations                                                                                 |       |       | 1341 |
| Soil for growing roses                                                                     |       |       | 1341 |
| Fungus diseases of hollyhocks (illus.)                                                     |       |       | 1343 |
| Anemones (illus.)                                                                          |       |       | 1343 |
| Anemones (illus.) Chrysauthemum notes                                                      |       |       | 1343 |
| New YorkBostonChicagoJapanese name for Crimson Rambler                         |       |       | 1343 |
| Boston                                                                                     |       |       | 134  |
| Chicago                                                                                    |       |       | 134- |
| Japanese name for Crimson, Rambler,                                                        |       |       | 1343 |
| Florientture in British Columbia.                                                          |       |       | 1343 |
| Hail insurance                                                                             |       |       | 1347 |
| Society of American Florists                                                               |       |       | 1343 |
| Hail insuranceSociety of American Florists.Chemical analysis of plants to indicate | · fe: | rtil- |      |
| izers required                                                                             |       |       | 134  |
| A fourth report on chrysantheniums                                                         |       |       | 1343 |
| PhiladelphiaOrnamental bedding (illus.)                                                |       |       | 134  |
| Ornamental bedding (illus.)                                                                |       |       | 134  |
| New Haven, Conn                                                                            |       |       | 1347 |
| Helpful reminders                                                                          |       |       | 1350 |
| Helpful reminders                                                                          | boj   | lers. | 1351 |
| Nursery trade                                                                              |       |       | 135: |
| Nursery tradeAmerican Association of Nurserymen                                        |       |       | 1350 |
| Nashville                                                                                  |       |       | 1353 |
| NashvilleThe seed-trade                                                                |       |       | 135  |
| IndianapolisPittsburgSyraeuse, N. Y.Treatment of cyclamen fulls                |       |       | 135  |
| Pittsburg                                                                                  |       |       | 135  |
| Syracuse, N. Y.                                                                            |       |       | 1350 |
| Treatment of cyclamen bulbs                                                                | ٠.    |       | 1358 |
| Smilax                                                                                     |       |       | 1360 |
| Cleyeland                                                                                  |       |       | 136: |
| Providence, R. L.,                                                                         |       |       | 136: |
| Cincinnati,                                                                                |       |       | 136  |
|                                                                                            |       |       |      |

BROCKTON, MASS.—At the last meeting of the Brockton Florists' Club, which took place on the evening of May 31, a report was submitted by the committee having the matter in charge, recommending that an exhibition be arranged for next November. The plan was received with favor and a schedule will be forth-coming

The Florists' Bargain Counter.

AS PHILADELPHIA MERCHANTS VIEW IT.

Numerous requests for the editor's opinion upon the advisability of "special sales" and the best method of conducting such bargain transactions prompted the solicitation of the views of the leading Philadelphia dealers, whose ideas and experiences are herewith set forth by an interviewer:

A. B. Cartledge, of Pennock Brothers, said he had recently given the matter some consideration, had discussed it with some of the older heads in the business. and had come to the conclusion that for their particular class of trade the special sale or "bargain counter" would not be a good thing-his aim being to keep their trade on the highest possible plane. While admitting that a widely advertised cheap sale would bring a great many buyers for small lots, he thought that the sale would have a tendency to prejudice the customer who purchases $100 worth at a time. Flowers being a luxury and not a necessity, it is not so easy to get the public to buy them, even should they be offered at a very low price. They only buy them when they need them, anyway. Mr. Cartledge thinks, however, that a store in a different locality from theirs might use the bargain sale to advantage on some occasions. For instance, if he were located on Columbia avenue he would consider it good business to offer cheap sales on certain days, especially if there were a special event in the neighborhood, such as a commencement, a university foot ball game, or some other social event where flowers are used by the rank and file in the neighborhood. But for the center of the city, and for such a trade as theirs, he could not see that there was anything in the idea. The department stores and the fakirs get about all the trade that could be gotten in that direction already, and it would not pay a store like theirs to bother with it.

Robert Kift, of Joseph Kift & Son, said they had never started a bargain counter, but believed it would pay, and had often thought of having a department where specialties could be sold cheap, that fact being well advertised in the newspapers. He said that he based this idea on the fact that people go where the crowd is, and that buying is so infectious that one can afford to sell very low on a leader for the sake of drawing the crowd.

"Do you think a high-toned store like yours would lose caste with well-to-do clients by introducing department store methods?"

"I do not, that is provided that no trash is sold. You must give the public a good article to be a bargain. It's the bargain that brings the crowd, and if faith is not kept with them you will not get them again."

Mr. Kift is a firm believer that a great many more flowers could be sold if people could only see them. The problem is to bring the people, and the bargain counter ought to be a great help in pulling the crowd if properly managed.

The foregoing views being so radically different, I concluded to see what one of the prominent retailers who is not on Chestnut street thought of the matter. I therefore called on Robert Crawford, on Sonth Eleventh street, knowing that in the past two or three years he has experimented in the matter of special sales widely advertised in the daily newspapers. I found Mr. Crawford not only able but willing to talk on the subject.

"From your experience, Mr. Crawford, of the past two or three years in regard to the bargain counter do you find the same has been injurious or beneficial to your trade?"

"Very injurious. There is nothing in the idea. It did me no good in the way. of getting new customers, but has done me much injury with the customers I had before I tried the plan. I would buy up a lot of plants at a low price, just as Wanamaker does, and advertise them once or twice a week at a cut figure. I found that my regular customers very soon caught on and they would come to me on these days and buy; whereas if I had not advertised they would have come some other day and bought at the regular price. In the course of time I found that they all waited until I advertised something low. I made up my mind that if I kept it up I would have nothing else but a cut price business. My experience in cut flower sales has been very much the same. For instance, I had a contract with a grower to take all his cut of roses. In March I found trade a little slow and stock accumulating on my hands; I decided to mark my $1 roses down to 50 cents for one day. I advertised the fact prominently in the daily newspapers and sold just two dozen at 50 cents. next day I sold ten dozen at $1. I have had numerous other experiences in the same line in regard to special sales, and ann now thoroughly convinced that there is nothing in it. In fact, it hurts the regular business. If people want flowers they will pay for them."

"How is it that John Wanamaker can make his plant and flower department a success by following the bargain counter method?"

"I do not know. We cannot do it Wanamaker has the crowd now on lines, and has spent millions of dollars in reaching that point.

"Don't you think your special sale advertising has brought you some new your special sale customers in the past two years?

"Mighty few. Once in a while we get one, but the trouble is they are almost certain to see some of my old customers and tell about paying 50 cents for a plant for which I had charged the old customer $1. Then the row begins. My old customers cause me no end of trouble in explaining.

"Do you think that the department stores have succeeded in popularizing plants and flowers among the outside public?"

"I think not. In fact, I think they have killed the business in some respects. For instance, you take Pandanus Veitchii. 1 used to sell hundreds of it up to the time that Wanamaker went out to Wm. K. Harris' and bought his whole stock and made a special drive of them at half price. No one seems to want Pandanus Veitchii since that time. We sell one plant now where we sold a hundred a few years ago."

Mr. Crawford is not only down on the bargain counter, but he thinks that selling to the department stores hurts the grower in the long run. He argues that men like Mr. Harris and Mr. Craig, who sell to the department stores, will eventnally find that these outlets will dry up, and then they will find that some one has killed the goose that laid the golden egg.

I next called on Hugh Graham, 104 South Thirteenth street. Mr. Graham has always catered to a first class trade, and was one of the first to get faney prices for choice roses in Philadelphia. have often heard the prominent rosc growers in this vicinity state that they were satisfied that Mr. Graham had done more to raise the standard of quality and price than any other individual in this He set the pace many years ago, and the influence is still felt and acknowledged in the trade. Mr. Graham was at one time connected with the Wanamaker store, and is thoroughly in touch with the methods of that concern. On being asked whether he thought there was a chance to create business in the flower trade by inaugurating special sales on particular days he said:

No. sir. There is nothing in it. If I had too much of anything I would rather throw it out or send it to the hospitals than offer it at a low price. Low prices hurt the flower business more than any other agency that I can imagine. If a lady or gentleman wants $10 worth of choice roses they do not go to Wana maker's to buy them; they go to some first class store. We would get very little of the cheap trade even if we were to advertise bargain days, and I think that after the novelty wears off even the department stores will do very little busi ness in cut flowers and choice plants Neither do I think that the fakirs hurt air trade to any degree, although it is, of course, annoying to see them push their little launches under the noses of the customers who are coming into our store.

Mr. Graham is decidedly of the opinion that the point all florists should strive for is to keep the price of flowers on a paying basis, both for the retailer and the

TO BE COSTISTED!

COLUMBUS, Office C. B. Hine, foreman, d the Ohio State University gardens, has resigned to become superintendent of the tarm at the new state hospital at Massillen.

Forcing Paeonies.

Herman Schiller, of Niles Center, Ill., has achieved noteworthy success in forcing herbaceous premies for Easter pot plants. His method is to lift the plants from the field about October 1, pot immediately, water thoroughly and plunge in a cold frame where they remain chilled just enough to make them dormant until time to bring them into heat. results are obtained by leaving the plants in a cool greenhouse or shed for a few days between the removal from the cold trame and the beginning of forcing. An even temperature of 58 to 60 is maintained until the blooms are out and attempts to retard growth by withdrawing heat after it has once been applied have been found to be disastrous. The pots being well filled with roots the plants are fed on liquid manure.

Mr. Schiller has tried several varieties but has found little success with other varieties than the officinalis. Of this the red is a week or ten days earlier than the pink and two weeks earlier than the white. It takes from six to eight weeks of heat to bring them into flower. After blooming in pots the plants cannot be forced the following season. Mr. Schiller forced several hundred plants the past season and they brought him an average of $1.50 each, some fetching as high as $3.50. The reds were all gone before Easter, but the pink and white were just right for that occasion. The pinks sold J. T. A. better than the others.

Dracaena Godseffiana.

As a decorative plant this novelty will be found most distinct, useful and remarkable. It has little resemblance in general to ordinary dracanas, but is nevertheless vigorous in constitution and of peculiarly graceful habit. The foliage is deep polished green, heavily spotted and splashed white, the stems slender and very wiry. Not easily affected by insects, it has the constitution of an aspidistra and grows very freely. A small plant sent by Sander & Co., to the Cleveland convention arrived in excellent condition.

А. Діммоск.

Carnations.

Carnations are evidently coming to the front at a great pace, if the additions to plants already in operation and the thonsand and one new ones starting up are any indication of the popularity of this flower. It might be well to stop a minute and consider where all this will lead us to, also to look at the other side of the question. There are several very necessary adjuncts to successful carnation culture if success is to be measured by the profits derived from the business.

The first and most important of these is to be sure of your market. If you are going to wholesale your cut, it is imperative that you get near enough to your market so that you can look after the selling end as well as the growing end of the business; you also want to be elose enough so that you can fill an order on short notice when they are wanted for some special occasion. If you are so situated, and grow absolutely first-class stock, you can regulate your price so that there will be some profit for you. If you are a retailer with a good grower in the greenhouses you have an advantage over all others as you then can soon learn to grow what will pay you the best and be reasonably sure of your carnations returning a fair profit.

To attempt to start a place any distance from your market and depend upon sending your cut in to a commission house and take pot luck with every other grower is very poor business, unless you have some other business connected with it and are satisfied with very small profit. The grower who starts up under the last named conditions should have his place so arranged that he need not have a night man and not any larger than he can manage himself with the assistance of some member of his family or possibly a boy at a few dollars a week. Two or three thousand feet of glass should be the limit of size in such a place if there is to be fair wages made out of it by the owner.

The man who puts up from five to ten thousand teet of glass any distance from his market and has to employ a night man and four or five others at decent wages will come out at the little end of the horn ninety times out of the hundred, no matter what any one says to the contrary. Where you pay for your help and have a reasonably well built place it is going to cost you $1.50 per 100 and possibly more for every hundred carnations you cut from the beginning to the end of the season (that is if you are growing good varieties and first-class stock), and you will find that many times during the season your returns will not reach $1.50 per 100. If you can get good, round figures for your ent when there is demand for it, you will be all right, but ninety out of the hundred never get over three dollars, except possibly at Christmas.

DRACAENA GODSEFFIANA

VIEW IN THE NEW STORE OF SMITH & FETERS, CLEVELAND, O.

If you do not grow first-class carnations, the original cost will not be so much, but the returns will be correspondingly small, and the grower who attempts to make a living out of second class stock next winter is going to have mighty poor fare and he will more than likely be in debt by June 1, 1899, with no money to pay his indebtedness. This may seem a pessimistic view of the situation, but careful observation among carnation growers will substantiate every word of it. The retail grower can by good management make a market for his flowers, but the wholesale grower is at the mercy of the market unless he has exceptionally fine stock and is thus in a position to make his own prices. Carnation growing has made some remarkable strides in the past few years and good stock is becoming more plentiful every year, so that unless you are sure of your market and have a little capital to help you over a bad season it is not wise for a beginner to invest his money in a earnation plant.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Soil for Rose Growing.

The inquiry from your correspondent on this subject touches upon this matter from several standpoints which are of vital importance to all of us who have to depend upon the produce of our greenhouses for a living. The inquirer says there is a well-grounded belief among rose growers in general that they must have what is termed maiden loam for their rose growing operations, it being understood that loam which has never before been used for rose growing purposes is indispensable, especially in rose growing under glass for cut flowers, and concludes by asking whether rose growers are justified in that belief.

Now, although there is no suggestion made that I am personally responsible for a considerable share of the general belief on this point, yet from several other sources I have been told that my writings upon this particular point in the past are somewhat misleading, and possibly this same correspondent may entertain somewhat the same views. To answer this intelligently requires a somewhat lengthy article, but as it is a very important subject. I must ask your readers' indulgence. To start intelligently let me ask all who doubt the advisability of such soil for this particular purpose, why do farmers continually change their crops—and they have been doing so for centuries, at least such is a fact if we can believe our own eyes and some of what we read—or coming nearer to the point at issue, why do we find that crops of almost every-thing we grow in the garden do much better if changed from one part to another every year?

Many will probably answer this by saying those are old-fashioned notions. Well, possibly they are, yet in my short experience (for forty years in horticulture is but a short apprenticeship, after all) I have repeatedly found that the same kind of a crop planted in the same place two seasons in succession has invariably given much poorer returns the second season than the first, and farmers generally with whom I have discussed this subject from various standpoints, all admit the same to be true. Chemistry can help to modify this materially by the addition of chemical tertilizers to restore to the soil the elements necessary for the full development of such crops, and possibly the same law may apply to the cultivation of roses under glass, but for one I candidly confess that I do not know enough about fertilizers to trust to their efficiency to grow roses, for although 1 have been experimenting more or less with these for the whole portion of my life which 1 have devoted to horticulture, yet as above stated, I know so little about them except their ability to do injury to crops, through my inability to tell what they contained that was injurious. A good deal of the trouble on this line may have been caused by trusting to inexperienced help to apply it, for it must be left to others for application. At any rate I have never been able to do all the work on my place with my own hands.

But coming down to hard facts regarding growing, I have repeatedly tried, for experience sake, to grow roses in soil which has been used for the same purpose in former years, adding what I considered safe e'ements to restore its vitality as far as possible. In some cases the soil was allowed to lay three years, growing other kinds of crops before using again. In other cases it was allowed to rest only one year before being replanted with roses; but in every case, whether the soil had been all the original rose soil, one-half, one-third or even one-quarter mixed with entirely new soil, the results have always been a proportionately reduced yield for the season whereverit was used. In these experiments I have always been very careful to use it in the same house and in the same position as nearly as possible to compare with maiden loam, and in making up the various grades of compost have always tried to add an equal amount of manure and other tertilizers to each lot, the object being to make the cost of each as nearly equal as possible, a careful record of the product of each being kept for the whole season after, with the result always a deficit against the old rose soil somewhat in proportion to the amount

What led me first to make these expert ments was the inconvenience in getting new soil every year, but finally we were compelled to admit that to persist in the use of old rose soil was too expensive, no matter how inconvenient it might be to obtain new, fresh soil. These experiments sere carried on principally with rather a light grade of soil, though we have tried the same experiments in that of a clay texture with the same results. back much farther and outside of green house culture, I have a very clear recollection of the result in a rose garden proper, during my apprenticeship days. An edict came forth that a large addition must be made to the rose garden. For the new part added, new soil, or what is generally termed maiden loam from an old pasture was carted in to the depth of about twelve inches, but for the old part only a portion of new soil (three to four inches) was added after all the old rose plants had been carefully lifted and planted elsewhere, but a very liberal dressing of manure, some soot, fine ground bone, etc., was given to the old and new in equal proportions. An entirely new lot of roses were bought for the whole and planted with equal care. At that time I was not at all posted in the requirements for any special erop or plant, but as I had to keep this particular garden weeded, eleaned, etc., for the next three years I had good opportunities to watch it in every way, and for some time it was a great puzzle to me to know why those plants in the old part of the garden did not produce as fine blooms or the plants make as clean vigorous growth as those in the new soil; finally I appealed to the head gardener for the reason, and got in return a very eareful synopsis of the why and wherefore, to the effect that crops do not succeed on the same soil successively; and from that day to the present time I have noted these results with more than ordinary interest. There may be plenty of exceptions in various classes of soils to the above results, so far as rose growing is concerned, but they have never come under my own direct observation.

To restore old rose soil to a condition suitable for roses successfully, I think there is nothing better than sowing it down with grass seed, principally Kentucky blue and Rhode Island bent, and then let cows, sheep, etc, graze it contin-ually. The root fibre of these grasses is ually. The root fibre of these grasses is very beneficial I find in rose growing, and old rose soil so treated can be used again safely in five or six years if required, but even then I have found that old pasture sod in which roses have not previously been grown is preferable to our system of cultivation.

If the experience of other growers differs from mine, I would be very pleased to see the same recorded in your paper, and, I know a great many readers of the FLo-TIST would like to know how to utilize their old rose soil to the best advantage, as it is a very expensive item in many cases to procure new soil every year, particularly where it has to be earted from some distant point.

It is true that really good roses can be grown in a great variety of soils, from very light sandy loam to almost a clay, the principal thing required being a careful study of the treatment needed for the different grades, but in each and all of them as far as I have experimented, a new soil for each planting is most desirable and will give much the best results.

JOHN N. MAY. Summit, N. J.

ANOTHER OPINION.

I would say that maiden loam is not essential in growing roses under glass, although most rose growers are of the opinion that it is. I have, this year, used loam that had been employed for tose growing some four or five years ago; then put out and sowed in with grass, and last year again out in the benches for toses, and my results this year have been as good as ever. I had both quantity and quality, thus proving to my entire satisfaction that maiden loam is not Ernst J. Asmus. essential.

West Hoboken, N.J.

MESDOTA, ILLS. Benjamin Moss, for years in the trade, died on June 5.

Fungus Diseases of Hollyhocks.

ln 1896 a row of hollyhocks was set in the plant hospital for a study of the diseases that of late years have attacked this plant. During 1897 the plants were sprayed with various compounds, Bordeaux being among the number. The leaf spot caused by the fungus Cercospora altheina Sacc. was the first to appear and it increased upon the untreated plants until the close of the season. Upon the sprayed plants it did only a small amount of damage. The leaf spot is quickly recognized by the angular spots, which at first are small and brown, but increase in size and become ashy white in the center with a dark border. the center with a dark border. The center of the spot sometimes falls away leaving the leaf full of irregular "shot holes," and the foliage thus badly affected drops, leaving the hollyhock stems bare for the lower portion.

There is another fungus disease of the hollyhock that is quite common in some

HOLLYHOCK RUST

This is called a leaf blight and grounds. is due to Phyllosticta althacina Sace. It differs greatly in its destructive work in the hollyhock from the cercospora above mentioned. Instead of the numerous angular specks and spots the fungus attacks and destroys the whole of the tissue of the area infested and may involve a spot as large as a half dollar and the blighted portion becomes dry and breaks away leaving large holes with a ragged outline. This leaf blight of the hollyhock is cheeked by spraying with the Bordeaux mixture.

There is a disease of the hollyhock that has proved quite destructive to seedlings in the greenhouse. This appeared in several propagating establishments about ten years ago, and was so serious that some firms gave up this crop and only within the last year or two are they taking up hollyhocks again. A grower only a short time ago told me that the only successful way for him was to move away from the trouble, that is, he grew his hollyhocks several miles from the old houses and only brought them home to fill orders. This is a valuable, practical hint to all who are seriously menaced by destructive fungi.

The fungus in question is an anthrac-nose due to the fungus Colletotrichum althene South. It attacks the leaves, either the blade or veins, and frequently the leaf stalk is destroyed by it. The stems do not escape and are badly blotched by the fungus. A blackened and shriveled appearance of the hollyhock plant is a suggestion that this fungus is at work. This fungus has never yielded successfully to spraying so far as the writer has observed.

The last fungus disease of the hollyhock to be considered, and the one most to be dreaded, is a genuine rust, due to the fungus Puccinia malvacearum Mont. It is gas racema marvacearum Mont. It is easily recognized by the orange blotches upon the leaves and the globular masses of spores of a brown color usually upon the under side of the leaf, but may also appear upon the stem, petiole or even the parts of the flower. From observations made upon it within the past few weeks the rust evidently remains over the winter in the tuft of leaves formed in autumn that cluster close to the ground. The spores produced by these quickly germinate and spread the disease.

As a precaution all the autumn leaves, when rust is found, should be gathered and burned. Spraying with Bordeaux will help to keep the rust in check as experiments at the plant hospital show. The accompanying engraving shows a view of a portion of a rusted hollyhock leaf with all the parts several times magnified. The rust spots are circular.

BYRON D. HALSTED.

Anemones.

F. Supoit of this city (Philadelphia) has been sending in quite a lot of anemone flowers for a month past. They combine all the colors of the rainbow from white to a dark maroon, various shades of vellow, light violet to a dark blue and some with pretty green tints. They are both self colored and variegated. The blossoms are from two and one-half to three and one-half inches in diameter, with stems from eight to twelve inches in length. Mr. Supoit plants the roots or tubers between his violet rows in the fall and as the violets go out of flower in the spring, from the first to the middle of April, the anemones make their appearance and commence to bloom, continuing until the first of June. They make a very welcome addition to the cut flower list at this time of year and when better known will, we think, be largely grown, particularly by florists who both grow and retail their stock.

ROBERT KIFT.

Chrysanthemum Notes.

Specimen plants at this time will be making the foundation for future results and must not, therefore, receive a check from any source. Watch them closely that they do not dry out too much, as this will cause the wood to get hard and prevent them from breaking freely. But they should not be overwatered or a bad ease of yellows will be the result. Keep the growth topped back as evenly as possible to insure a well shaped plant and remove all suckers as soon as they appear If the pots are well filled with roots, give the plants another shift, using a rather coarse soil with plenty of drainage, and pot them firm.

This is the time to get stock propagated for single-stem pot plants, and for market specimens to be sold in 5 or 6-inch pots. Care should be taken that the cuttings wilt as little as possible after they are put into the sand; they need copious waterings, frequent syringings and should be shaded from direct sunlight. With this treatment they will root readily in a short time, when they should be potted up and not allowed to stay in the sand and become hard. Among the most suitable varieties for single-stem pot plants are Major Bonnaffon, Mrs. H. Robinson, lvory, Jennie Falconer, Mrs. Perrin, W. H. Lincoln, Mutual Friend, Mayflower, and Jayne. It is best to take all varieties with full solid centers for such purposes, it being a difficult matter to get the substance into varieties like Maud Dean and Mrs. Jerome Jones; when grown from Junestruck stock it is necessary to cover their centers. Viviand Morel is another good one for single-stem plants, if they can be used when just right; but if it is necessary to keep them a little while they soon lose their fine form and become flabby. In

New York.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION,-LADIES' NIGHT AT THE FLORISTS' CLUB NEXT MONDAY. WEDDING OF W. R. SIEBRECHT.—LOCAL

Business shows a little improvement since June 1, and is probably due as much to the reduced cut of flowers as to any other cause. Roses show the greatest falling off, both in quality and quantity, but there are still enough of them to supply all the stores and all the Greeks.

Paronies are now in their height and sell well for garden flowers. The retailers would be glad to have them all the year round, at summer prices. Lilies are sell-selecting varieties for market plants pick selecting varieties for market plants pick out those of short stocky growth, of which the following varieties are examples: Mine. Bergmann, Midge and Ivory, white; Vellow Queen, Il. L. Sunderbruch, Henry Hurrell and W. H. Lincoln, yellow; Geo. W. Childs and Defender, red; Mrs. Perrin and Louis Boehmer, pink.

ANEMONES.

C. W. Johnson, ing well and there is a noticeable improvement in the demand for lily of the valley. The first outdoor roses are making their appearance, and the indoor crop may discern trouble ahead for the next two weeks without putting on spectacles.

On Monday evening, June 13, will occur the first ladies' night in the history of the New York Florists' Club. In fact, the last time the fair sex participated in any of the club's functions was the trip to Iona Island during the S. A. F. convention here just ten years ago. A most enjoyable evening for all is assured.

Wm. R. Siebrecht, youngest son of H. A. Siebrecht, was married to Miss Alice May Lent at New Rochelle on Tuesday evening, June 7.

Clucas & Boddington have taken the American agency for C. Vanderweyden &

Sons, of Noordwijk, Holland.

Some splendid plants of the useful Cattleyas Percivalliana and Trianæ will be offered at Fritz Dressel's auction sale.

Boston.

THE RHODODENDRON SHOW. - A FINE DIS-PLAY, -ELEGANT ORCHIDS AND MANY NOVELTIES. - DULL BUSINESS IN CUT FLOWER STORES. TENDENCIES OF THE MARKET.-M. H. NORTON SICK.-JACKSON DAWSON'S MINATURE PEACHES, -A FAIL-URE.-POND LILIES IN.-VISIT TO MR. NEVINS,-P.HONY SHOW POSTPONED THAT JUNE 18.

The annual rhododendron show, which was held on June 7 and 8, was a very creditable affair and crowds of people enjoyed the great masses of brilliant color that completely filled lower Horticultural Hall and half filled the upper one. The Hunnewell premiums for rhododendrons were not all competed for. In the hardy section James Comley won first prize for twelve and Kenneth Finlayson for six. but in the tender section Kenneth Finlayson won the only award, that for single truss, the variety shown being Sigismund Rucker. There was no lack of exhibitors, however, although they did not compete. The display from Mr. Hunnewell's own place was as usual superb, filling, together with his hardy azaleas, a wide table the entire length of the hall. Mr. Comley also filled a table of equal comey also med a table of equal size with rhododendrons, azaleas and branches of flowering and ornamental foliaged shrubs. W. N. Craig, Mrs. A. W. Blake, Wm. Thatcher and others also contributed rhododendrons in considerable quantity. James Comley, T. C. Thur-low and Wm. Thatcher all showed hardy azaleas extensively, many of Mr. Thurlow's being seedlings fully equal to the finest named varieties. Mr. Thurlow also showed paronies of the officinalis and tree varieties and ornamental foliaged and flowering trees and shrubs.

The best display of hardy ornamental trees and shrubs came from Wm. Martin, gardener to N. T. Kidder. Nothing in the collection attracted more attention than the Showy Viburnum tomentosum. F. S. Davis, James Wheeler and Carl Blomberg all showed fine collections of aquilegias the premiums going in the order named. Lyrethrums, oriental poppies and carna tions from W. N. Craig, beautiful novel ties in hardy perennials from Rea Bros., water files from H. A. Dreer, gloxinias from James Wheeler, German irises from Wm That her and promiscuous flowers from Mrs. E. M. Gill, all came in for their share of admiration. There were six large exhibitors of wild flowers and this department seemed to be the especial tavorite with the lady visitors who crowded around the exhibits reading the names and discussing the habitat and miltonias, eypripediums and oneidiums in abundance and was edged with small ferns and grasses. A plant of Ærides Fieldiana from this exhibitor was much admired. Kenneth Finlayson staged three large pans of Cypripedium Lawrenceanum and Wm. Donald, gardener to J. S. Bailey, a well bloomed plant of Cattleya Gaskelliana, Lælia-Cattleya Chas. G. Roebling; a cross between Cattleya Gaskelliana and Lælia purpurata alba, was shown by II. T. Clinkaberry, gardener to C. G. Roebling. From W. A. Manda came an interesting group of fine novelties including Lælia elegans, Vanda tricolor, an enormous spike, and a hybrid Wichuraiana rose with large pale creamy flower and remarkable glossy foliage that has proved to be evergreen, the past winter. A seed-ling fuchsia of elegant drooping habit, from Walter Hunnewell received honorable mention.

-Instory of each little variety.
The table of orchids from Win. Thatcher. gardener to John L. Gardner, was beautifully arranged and seemed like a remins cence of the glorious old days when David Allan, M.m. Robinson and C. M. Atkinson strove for supremacy - It contained car-tleyas, dendrobaums, odontoglossums.

The cut flower trade is not what it should be for June. Most of the large establishments admit that the season's business fell short of the record and although Memorial Day helped the average, the dullness of June will offset this advantage and the year's trade will compare unfavorably with that of recent years. Roses are somewhat scarce and of those that come in many are small or mildewed, so the quotations on all varieties of roses show an advance over last Carnations have gone the other week. way, they are over abundant and are sold out with difficulty, many lots of average quality realizing per 1000 the same figure they brought per 100 on Memorial Day. Lilies have also lost their grip on the market and are selling low. Lily of the valley is of extra quality with prices tending upwards, thanks to the prices tending upwards, sinfluence of the June weddings. Sweet peas are abundant and cheap. There are bushels of spiratas and similar coarse material on the market and their end is, oftener than otherwise, the dump cart. Cornflowers are now coming in; the blue ones bring $1 per 100, other colors half that price.

"Down town" is in sack cloth and ashes on account of the absence of M. II. Norton who has been quite sick for the past week at his home in Dorchester. Mr. Norton's daily trip "down town" was as regular as the sun's rising and equally welcome, and he is greatly missed. On Sunday and Monday his illness took a dangerous turn but later reports are reassuring and there is joy "down town" in consequence.

Jackson Dawson is a veritable wizard when it comes to propagating and grafting, as all know. The latest proofs of his ing, as all know. The latest proofs of his skill are some little peach trees, filteen inches high, in 5 inch pots, which were grafted only last January and are now bearing ripe fruit. A 15-inch plant with five rosy-cheeked peaches on it is a tempting sight although the fruit is ornamental instead of catable. Otaheite oranges are thrown completely into the shade.

George A. Black, of Brighton, has failed.

Twenty per cent is being offered his creditors to compromise their claims.

The first pink pond lilies of the season have been coming in during the past week and are seen at all the wholesale establishments.

The Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of David Nevins, at South Framingham, last Wednesday and had a most emovable time.

The parony show announced for June 11 has been postponed until Saturday, June 18, on account of the lateness of the Nivea carnation has made a great record for itself at Welch's this season.

Visiting Boston: D. McRorie representing W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.

Chicago.

FLORISTS' CLUB WILL SUBSTITUTE PICNICS AND EXCURSIONS FOR ITS USUAL MEET-INGS DURING THE SUMMER.-TRADE CON-DITIONS.-NOTES AND COMMENTS.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club Friday evening, June 3, it was decided to discontinue the regular meetings of the club during the summer and have instead a series of excursions among the growers, as was done last season. A number of places were suggested as likely to be interesting, among them Henry Hilmer's and lleim Bros.', at Blue Island; Weiter Bros.' and Reinberg's, Chicago; Poehlman Bros.', Morton Grove, and Geo. Souster's, at Elgin, Ills. The proposed trip to Milwaukee was discussed and the impression seemed to prevail that the excursion would draw out a large number of florists and their friends. The matter was left in the hands of the entertainment committee.

After the meeting the bowlers repaired to the alley, where Geo. Stollery, who is somewhat of a dark horse among the bowlers, surprised the boys by running up a score of 183 in the first game. Ed. Winterson had the highest average, 164.

There has been a slight improvement in trade this week. Good roses and carnations are not quite so plentiful, American Beauty and Kaiserin being about the only good roses on the market. Beauties are in good demand, both for shipping and local retail trade.

The spring plant trade is about over, and many of the growers are sold out. They report that trade has been fully up to last season. There were not enough searlet geraniums grown to supply the demand and many growers were sold out before the season was half over.

Bassett & Washburn have built a cold storage room in their store and will take their stock to this room direct from the greenhouses. They will do all the sorting and packing in it during the hot weather.

Herman Schiller has purchased from Mrs. Kuske her half interest in the Schiller & Kuske greenhouses and grounds at Niles Center, Ills. Mr. Schiller will put the place in first-class order for the purpose of growing stock for his two retail places in the city. These houses were the first built about Chicago for the especial purpose of furnishing cut roses for the Chicago market.

The firm of Felke & Miller dissolved on June 1 by mutual consent, N. P. Miller retiring. J. Felke will continue the establishment at Wilmette, and also the retail store, assuming full control. N.P. Miller will go into growing carnations and chrysanthennims and bedding stock for the wholesale market.

N. G. Axtell, of the Sweet Pea Farm at Evanston, Ills., to-day opened a city salesroom with Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson, at 47-49 Wabash ayenue. Visited Chicago: Z. K. Jewett, Sparta, Wis, enroute to the Omaha convention.

BULLALO, N. Y.—Nieces and nephews of Charles F. Cutter, seedsman, are en-deavoring to break the will by which Cutter left an estate of $15,000 to friends in East Aurora. The relatives allege that Cutter was mentally incompetent to make a will.

The American Florist

Subscription $1.00 a Year. To Europe, $2.00. Subscriptions accepted only from those in the trade.

Advertisements, 10 Cents a Line, Agete; $1.00 per inch. Cash with Order.

No Special Position Guaranteed.

Discounts, 6 times, 5 per cent; 13 times, 10 per cent; 26 times, 20 per cent; 52 times, 30 per cent.

The Advertising Department of the AMERICAN FLORIST is for Florists, Seedsmen, and dealers in weres pertaining to those lines ONLY.

Orders for less than one-half inch space not accepted. Advertisements must reach us by Wednesday to secure insertion in the issue for the following Saturday.

Address THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO., Chicago.

THE plant of M. W. is a species of thralictrum. The complete name cannot be given without the flower.

JAMES J. LAWLER, of New York, who is well known through his series of articles on steam and hot water heating which is proving of great value to readers of the American Florist, has been in attendance this week at the national convention of Master Steam Fitters at Milwaukee.

The Japanese Name for the Crimson Rambler.

The Journal des Roses states that among some plates of Japanese roses (principally wild ones) published in that paper, in 1886, is a plate corresponding exactly to Crimson Rambler. The discription is exact as well as the plate and it is no doubt the same rose. The Japanese name is given as Sakoura-Ibara, literally cherry rose.

Hail Insurance.

"Some people decry haif insurance," write Robt. S. Brown & Son, of Kansas City, "on the ground that they have never met with loss. In the thirty-one vears we have been in business we never suffered from a storm but that did not prevent our joining the Florists' Ilail Association and we have been thankful for it since May 14, for in twenty minutes that afternoon we lost 28,000 feet of glass. We received our check promptly and as soon as we can get the glass replaced we shall re-insure as we regardit as a safe investment."

Canna Nomenclature.

Ed. Am. Florist:-In your issue of June 4 appears a notice to the effect that a canna has been registered by the Conard & Jones Co. under the name of Admiral Dewey. Inasmuch as we notified the public under date of May 21 in the AMERIcan Florist and other journals that the name Admiral Dewey had been adopted by us for one of our new cannas, we beg to ask if we are not entitled to priority, being the first to advertise the lact? mailed our notice to you May 14.

A. Blanc & Co.

[Evidently this a case for the S. A. F. canna committee, and if their jurisdiction has not up to the present included the nomenclature of cannas, it should do so.—En.]

Society of American Florists.

PURCHASING DEPARTMENT.

Those who have not yet replied to the circular of the committee of the department of purchase are earnestly requested to do so immediately, so that the com-mittee can collate the quantity of supplies, such as coal, glass, steam and water pipes, hose, etc., required for the year ending April 1, 1899, and thus be enabled to early obtain bids for the same.

ed to early obtained to early WM. K. HARRIS, W. W. Coles, Address all communications to W. J. Stewart, Secretary, 67 Bromfield street, Boston, Mass.

Cut Flower Price Lists Received.

City Hall Cut Flower Market, Poston; Ilolton & Hunkel, Milwaukee; Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo; Louisville Florists' Supply & Exchange, Louisville.

Catalogues Received.

Gorton & Lidgerwood Co., New York, . Y., boilers; The Richmond Stove Co., Norwich, Conn., heaters; F.O. Pierce Co., New York, N. V., mastica; J. H. H. Boyd, Gage, Tenn., tree seed; Frank Brunton & Co., Boston, Mass., plants.

Greenhouse Building.

Morristown, N. J.—J. T. Pyle, rose house 20x50, palm house 20x50. Chicago, Ills.—George Wittbold, conscriptory 35x100.

Milwankee, Wis.—Conservatory at Mitchell park, to cost $30,000.

South Pasadena, Cal.—Raymond Hotel, rose between $1,100. and large propagating.

rose house 24x100, and large propagating house.

Knightstown, Ind.—Beeman & Kowzelman, three commercial houses 20x100.

Madison, N. J.-John J. Folcy, four greenhouses.

Warren, R. I.—Geo. W. Arnold, one forcing house.

Avondale, Pa.—E. J. Cloud, one carnation house, 22x80.

Bayside, N. Y.—William Bell, two carnation houses.

Newton, Mass.-11. W. Kimball, one greenhouse 20x60.

Floriculture in British Columbia.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Some reader of the AMERICAN FLORIST Would greatly oblige by stating whether gardening or floriculture is carried on to any extent in British Columbia, what part would he recommend as the best and the wages usually

There is no extensive floriculture in British Columbia. Victoria, with 12,000 white population, has ten florists inadequately supported. Vancouver, the next largest city, is not quite so badly overdone. Nanaimo and New Westminster have never been able to support one florist properly. The summer season is fairly good for fruit and flowers but producing crops is expensive business as water costs 20 cents per 1000 gallons. Chinamen grow and sell vegetables all over the province and are also employed to do most of the private gardening. The few white gardeners get about the same wages paid in Ontario. J. Mc. T.

Chemical Analysis of Plants as an Indication of Fertilizers Required.

One would naturally suppose that a careful chemical analysis of the plant, roots, stems, leaves and flowers—would be an excellent indication of the relative proportions of lime, phosphorus, potash and nitrogen to be applied as manure. It has been an accepted fact however, among scientists, that such is not the case. Some experiments at Wye, Engcase. Some experiments at Wve, England, noted in the Gardeners' Chronicle show the fallacy of this idea very clearly.

Dandelion plants were carefully selected from different soils, washed, dried and analyzed, for lime and phosphoric acid. Lime was found to vary from 12.8 per cent. to 48.8 per cent. of the total ash of the different plants and phosphoric acid varied from 2.5 per cent. to 10 per cent. of the ash.

The conclusion reached is that the analysis if anything, shows more as to the needs of the soil than the requirements of the plants; that is to say, the plant will take an excess of the element in the soil which exists in greatest quantity and most available conditions, and a much less amount of that element which is deficient in quantity or not so available

Analyses of the soil have also been shown to have little value in determining what manures to apply and the grower must depend on experiment with each soil to give him the required informa-

A Fourth Report on Chrysanthemums.

This is bulletin No. 147 of the Cornell Experiment Station, by Wilhelm Miller. It is divided into several heads, viz., "The Economic Status of the Chrysanthemum," "Suggestions on Growing Chrysanthemums at Home," "Control-ling the Color of Chrysanthemums," "Crown and Terminal Buds" and "The Cornell Varieties of 1897.'

Under the first head the statement is made that the chrysanthemum industry in New York State probably involves more capital than the growing of peaches. As exact facts are not to be had in this matter, we will not be permitted to question the accuracy of this statement, but can not be prevented from having our own opinion.

The second section is a very readable talk with the amateur. One can not help talk with the amateur. One can not help feeling, however, that the illustration of "An amateur's ideal" is a mistake and wishing that a nice compact plant of Ivory, Midget or some one of the many dwarf growing varieties had been shown in its place. The natural tendency of amateur methods of cultivating chrysanthemums is towards long-legged, weaknecked growth, and the dwarfest and stockiest varieties are to be recommended. A six-inch pot plant with five visible stakes is hardly to be recommended as an ideal.

Two experiments looking to the controlling of the pink color in chrysanthemuns are described. One trial was by shading the glass and comparing results with unshaded glass. This was found to be decidedly injurious, as might be expected, with a number of varieties, the color being very uneven and poor Another attempt was by feeding the plants in one plat with an excess of nitrogen over the other. No definite results were obtained from this experiment.

Eleven pages are taken up with a diseussion of crown and terminal buds which is practically a reprint of a recent article by the same author and covers ground many times carefully discussed both here and abroad.

In the variety test 166 varieties were grown in one house six flowers to the plant. This will explain why the test is of no value commercially and why the conclusions reached in a number of cases are entirely at variance with accepted commercial facts. commercial facts.

Philadelphia.

PLENTY OF STOCK AND TRADE FAIRLY ACTIVE. THE P.EONY EXHIBITION WAS A SUCCESS.-FINE EXHIBITS AND AN INTER-ESTING DISCUSSION .- EULOGIES OF THOS. CARTLEDGE .- PLANS FOR THE TRIP TO

Business for the past week has been fairly active, a good sized crop of spring weddings together with school commencements keeping the florists busy. There has been an abundance of stock of all kinds, although the quality leaves much to be desired. Prices are about the same as last week, but the stock is not counted quite as close. Carnations are showing the effects of the heat and continuous torcing. Cornflower is in demand to help out with its patriotic azure. Pæonies have almost swamped us the past week. The warm weather seems to have brought them in all at once, and they have not been a very remunerative crop to the grower. Quite an improvement is noticed in the assortment of varieties coming in, and there will, no doubt, be a good market for selected flowers at fair prices in the future.

The parony exhibition at the Florists' Club was quite an interesting display. Messrs. Lonsdale, Heacock and the H. A. Dreer Co staged some nice flowers. new single varieties from Japan in the Dreer collection, their own importation. were very fine. There is but one row of cup-shaped petals, but a great bunch of vellow stamens fills up the center of the flower, and in the pink varieties gives the appearance of a great water lily. They come in various shades and are very beautiful as a cut flower or for lawn decoration. The single kinds will meet with much favor when better known. Edwin Lonsdale's collection also had some pretty new ones, a very few double and others quite distinctive in color.

Mr. Heacock, who read a short paper, does not think they are bread winners as cut flowers, but thinks there is a market for limited quantities of good blooms. Robt. Craig expressed himself as confident that there is a future for the paeony if it is not overdone. Mr. Westcott said that the florists are always getting in their own way by overproduction; that they have spoiled the chrysanthemum and hurt the rose and the carnation by this

After the paeony discussion a culogy on Thomas Cartledge, prepared by Pres. W. K. Harris, was read by Robert Kift. It was directed that the paper be spread upon the minutes. Rob't Craig, Mr. Westcott, Mr. Farson and Mr. Lonsdale also spoke, the latter saying that he received more inspiration in a business way from Mr. Cartledge than from any other one person in the business. It was ordered that a crayon portrait of Mr. Cartledge be hung in the club room.

several active and associate members were elected and the "Convention at Omalia was selected as the subject for the next meeting. The matter of cost of the convention journey was touched upon The railroad fare will be either $31 or $10, depending on whether half fare is secured or full face going and one third returning Sleeping car rates one way will be $7. The journey will require 26 hours, which, with meals, will make the full transportation charges in the neighborhood of 860. Should the half fare rate be secured this will be reduced to $50.

There is to be a grand patriotic parade in this city on the Fourth of July. The florists are requested to have floats arranged to carry out some patriotic idea, and they will receive $50 each to help them. Probably twenty-five floats, representing as many firms, will be in

Ornamental Bedding.

PART VIII.

While I have now given directions as concise as possible for the laying out of different forms of beds, I have explain how to "read" a plan or diagram of such a bed. There is, then, three different cases to consider; either the design is drawn according to a scale or the dimensions necessary for the outline of the bed are given. Then we have designs where neither scale nor dimensions are given, especially designs from books. Where a design is drawn to a certain scale, say one-fourth of an inch to a foot it means that each one-fourth inch on paper represents one loot on the ground; consequently one inch is equal to four feet, one eighth inch to six inches, etc. This scale is also called one fortyeighth, as this is the proportion in which it is drawn. A carpenter's rule can be used for reading the different measures, but a draughtsman's scale is handier.

When the principal dimensions only are given we have to make a scale for our-Selves. It, for instance, in a circle with a radius of six feet we draw a straight line on which we mark the length of the radius and divide this in six equal parts, each of these representing one foot, the end one of these we can divide in two, three, four, six or twelve parts each representing respectively six, four, three, two or one inches. Fig. 32 shows such a scale ten feet long, the loot to the left being divided into six parts, each equal to two inches.

When we have a design not drawn to any certain scale and with no dimensions given, we have to study its nature according to the rules given for the planting. Considering that a single row of altera onthera cannot occupy less space than three inches in width without being trimmed hard, and a single row of coleus not less than six inches we have some hints to guide us; these, together with the general nature of the design will give us an idea of the smallest size in which it can be planted, and it will then allow of some variation. When this is decided on we have only to make a suitable scale as above mentioned.

The main thing in reading a design is to find the centers. When it is an original drawing we can generally see where the dividers have perforated the paper by holding it to the light and we can soon select the necessary ones, if a blue print or any other reproduction, we have to find them by construction.

Fig. 32 represents one-half of Fig. 24 drawn to a larger scale. We find that it consists of four symmetrical parts, two of which are shown here, by drawing line a-b from end to end and constructing line c-d we have it quartered. In this line, c-d, we have the centers for the outline of the bed and the inside line of the border. By setting one point of the dividers on the line, about where we judge the center to be, adjusting the other point to a and describing the curve from there, we can see how near it is true. If this curve is flatter than the original, our radius is too long and we must move the point on the line closer towards the curve; if it is rounder than the original, the radius is too short, and we move the dividers fur-When we find the center, e, we mark it with a little circle, as shown on the illustration. The corresponding center is on the other side at the same distance from b. B itself is the center for the circle in the middle. The centers f are also found in line c-d, while centers g are in line a-b, one to each side of b. The centers h for curves a-b are found by constructing for one of the curves the perpendicular on the middle, with which construction we are now familiar, and then proceeding as directed for finding center When found set one point of the dividers in b, adjust the other one to h, draw a curve across line c-d above and below, mark the distance from h to line c-d (in this case h-e) on each side above and below, and that gives you these four corresponding centers. Find the other centers in the same manner, and after this you only have to read them on the scale.

Fig. 33 shows a different way. When there are many centers to find it takes time, and we may not after all get them exactly true; in such cases we can draw auxiliary lines on the diagram, with pegs and twine we can mark them on ground and then draw the design free-hand. This is Fig. 23 and the lines are drawn 1 foot apart each way. ellipse is of course laid out on the ground as formerly directed and the axis major and minor help to get the lines true.

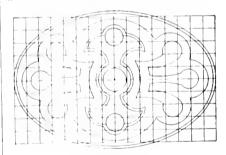

Fig. 33.

When the design is laid out, we are ready for the planting, which for the more complicated designs is quite a difficult task. The plants should be stocky and wellhardened; with long, drawn material nobody can do decent work. alternantheras should be well colored. and those grown in boxes or hotbeds are better than the pot-grown stock. For large plants, as cannas, the spade is the best planting tool, one man lifting the soil and another one setting the plant. For ordinary sized plants the trowel is our mainstay, and a good strong steel trowel is the cheapest in the end. For small plants the fingers can be used if it is a small job and the soil mellow, otherwise, or when the nails are worn to the quick, a small pointed stick or the smallest size of transplanting trowel can be used. In designs drawn as these, the plants must not be planted in the lines, but only to the lines, as these represent the boundary of the different colors; for that reason the best planter should do the outlining, and almost anybody used to planting can do the filling. The design of the bed is planted first, the ground color last. The plants should be set nice and even; if they are not all of one size, the taller ones are planted a little deeper to equalize matters, and it may be necessary to pinch off a few stray shoots that reach above the others.

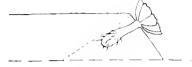

Fig 34.

And now a few words about the planting of echeverias; these little plants give the prettiest effects when they are outlining the bed or parts of the design or both; they should, however, be planted sloping, so that they at the same time raise the bed. How to do this planting is rather a difficult matter to explain. Fig. 34 shows the operation. is made wet so that it sticks like putty and will "stand" by holding one hand on the line with the desired slope and press-ing the soil against it firmly with the other hand in a shape as the dotted line shows, then the echeverias are laid firmly in this and soil pressed on top; after this soil is filled in to make the surface even. If the outline of the bed is planted and raised in this manner, the design cannot of course be laid out until this is done. By right a carpet bed should look perfect when planted, but that takes many plants and makes the bed expensive, and on this account such beds are generally planted with a little space between the plants. Until the plants are well established and fill the bed, they should be watered well, but from that time they should only receive water when they need it, otherwise they grow too fast and the best colored leaves fall for the shears.

H. Hansen.

New Haven, Conn.

MAY BRINGS TO MEMORY THE TIME OF BROTHER NOAH.—TRADE SHOWS A FAIR DEMAND AND NO OVER-SUPPLY OF STOCK. -THE VIOLET, CARNATION AND CORN-FLOWER.

A little rain may be necessary and more than a little may be received unprotestingly, but when nature weeps on a soaked and bespattered community for twentyfive days out of a possible thirty-one in May most of us feel that we have an excuse for, if not an object in, expostulation. The downpour was too much for plants and vegetables. Of the former, outdoor shrubbery is all but ruined, and the florists' trade has been unusually good hereabouts in consequence. Vegetable growers are in a sad plight for the early potato erop is particularly affected by the continued rainfall, and strawberries are almost ruined.

One of the consoling effects of the weather of late has been the supply of violets, which were in market a fortnight later than usual. Very seldom are vio-lets sold here on Memorial Day, but this year they could be found in plenty up to this week. But what is meat for violets is poison to carnations, for few have been seen for over a month, and what were on sale have been of poor quality. The sunshine of June, however, brought them out and they are now plentiful. The advent of the cornflower was welcomed to fill up the place left vacant by the going out of the violet. They were in great demand for the Yale-Princeton game of last Saturday, and sold readily for $2 per 100.

Florists enjoyed a good trade Memorial Day, outdoor shrubs being an unknown quantity. The war, too, seemed to awaken interest in the observance of the occasion.

J. A. P.

SITUATIONS, WANTS, FOR SALE

Advertisements under this head will be inserted at the rate of 10 cents a line (seven words) each losertion. Cash must accompany order. Plant adva. not admitted under this head.

Every paid subscriber to the AMERICAN FLORIST for the year 1888 is entitled to a five-line want adv. free to be used at any time during the year.

SITUATION WANTED—By young man in a commercial place, wholesale cut flower preferred: five years' experience, good refs. L D B, care Am. Florist.

CITUATION WANTED—Englishman: nge 28; mar-lor fled; no children; as foreman in good private or commercial place; 15 years' experience; first-class references. Address H.A. care American Florist.

SITUATION WANTED—As working foreman by a first-class grower of roses, carnations, 'mums, violets and all kinds of pol plants; It years' experience, single, German. Best of references. Address A B C. Leavenworth, Kans.

SITUATION WANTED—By a married man, competent florist and first-class grower of roses and cut flowers in general; also first-class designer and decorator. California preferred. Address FR. QUICKERT. P. O. Salinas. California.

CITUATION WANTED—By all-round and experi-ced gardener; Belgian; single; speaks different larguages; age 22. Private or commercial place, understands every branch of business; good worker; total abstainer; best references. Address V.S. New Rochelle, New York.

WANTED-A good second-hand holler, complete; for low pressure system, smaller size, F. care American Florist.

WANTED-Two good florists; none but good men need apply. State references and wages expected. F. L. Bills. Davenport, Ia.

WANTED-As foreman, an experienced rose grower for Villa Lorraine Roseries Apply T. W. STEMMLER, 36 East 14th St. New York.

WANTED-First-class florists' wire design worker. Steady work the year round Apply with refs. HOLTON & HUNKEL CO., BOX 103, Milwaukee, Wis.

WANTED-At once, a first-class, all-round florist to take charge of plant of 6000 feet of glass. None but steady, reliable young man need apply; references state wakes. Address F. B. Tinker, Pero, Ind.

WANTED-A competent forist and gardener, as partner; have two places. Very little money required to take half interest in either one or both places. For further information address B.B. care American Florist.

FOR SALE-1000 feet 4-inch water pipes with connections at 4 ceots per foot.

5688 La Salle St., Chicago.

FOR SALE—Well paying retail florist burlness, store ned greenhouses. 11. N. Bruns. 690 W. Van Buren St., Chicago.

FOR RENT-Space in store at 451 East 47th St., Chl-cago, for a florist. Finest location on the south side.

HOR SALE-Good chance for man with $500 and experience to take hold of well-established florist pince. Inquire at 410 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago.

FOR SALE-First-class retail stand, about 5000 feet of glass; new. Has never paid less than $1300 per year net. Will requir. $1000 cash, balance time at 6 per cent. Reason for selling, failing health. Address LLLINOIS, care Americao Florist,

TO RENT-Greenhouse 20x50, well stocked, large two-story potting house, new, in Newark, N. J. Address Box 164, Madison Square Branch, New York.

FOR SALE—Four greenhouses, nearly new, splendid retail stand, near business center in residence dis-trict on road to cemetery, paved street. Terms easy, Must retire on account of poor beatth. A. CLAUS, 503 N. 4th St., Springfield, Ill,

FOR SALE OR RENT-10 sere tract of land situated on Rock Road, 5 miles from city limits; 4-mile from street cars; has 3 100-feet greenhouses; steam beat sheds; holler bouse; also fruit trees.

F. HAUSPERGER, 1826 W. Broadway, St. Louls.

FOR SALE—Florist's place in one of the best cities in eastern lilinois. Three bouses, 3700 feet glass, doing a good paying business; city water, telephone and located within three blocks of court house. No competition. Address. H.D. care Am, Florist.

FOR SALK—Greenhouse establishment and residence adjoining in a fine residence section of this city; convenient to business center, with which it is connected by electric cars. General plant and flower business; trade immense. Change of climate necessary on account of beauth.

J. H. CONKLIN, Jollet. III.

Three greenbouses: 4 lots in fine sampe in the city fimits of the best mining town of America; must sell; have mining interest. Address 558 So. 1st St., Cripple Creek, Colo.

FOR SALE AT A B * RGAIN.

FUR SALE AT A BARGAIN.

Florist establishment of over 10,000 square feet of glass; splendid situation. 8 lots 35 ft. iront: water, gas and electric light on street; greenhouses, office and barn all newly built with all conveniences; heated by steam. Ceotrally located in city of 18 400 population in State of Indiana. Competition none to speak of, Leading establishment in the city. Sickness cause of selling. Address Indiana, care American Florist.

FOR SALE—Rare Chance.

Five good greenhouses in No. 1 condition and a new steam boiler, large enough to heat 8 houses. The houses are as good as new. The sizes are 10x75, 11x75, 19x75, 22½x75, 12x50. Apply to

WM. F. BEHRING & CO., 509 South 5th St., Richmond, Ind.

Greenhouses For Sale

Located in the village of Clinton, N. Y., with stock of Plants and Florists' Requisities; 5000 feet of glass; well established; in good order; well-paying patrouage; one acre of land; good 2-story dwelling. This is an admirable opportunity for a practical florist.

GEORGE SCOTT, Rome, N. Y.

CHICAGO LOTS FOR SALE.

One block from corner Lincoln avenue and Wellington street, a bunch of lots at $25 per front foot; sewer and water. Suitable for greenhouse purposes.

P. F. HAYNES & CO..
Telephone L. V. 247. 1004 Wellington St., Chicago.

NOW READY

THE AMERICAN FLORIST

DIRECTORY

United States and Canada arranged by by States and Post Offices and All Names ALPHABETICALLY.

FULLY REVISED TO DATE WITH UPWARDS OF

3,000 New Names

Price Two Dollars. In Flexible Leather Bindiug, Three Dollars.

American Florist Company 324 Dearborn Street, Chicago, III., U. S. A.

Do not forget to say "saw your ad. in the American Florist" when corresponding with advertisers.

FORCING BULBS

We have closed contracts with some of the best and most reliable producers for our stock of Roman Hya cinths, Tulips, Dutch Hyacinths,

Von Sion Narcissus, Paper White Narcissus, Valley, Harrisii, Longiflorum, Azaleas, and all leading Forcing Stock. Give us a list of your wants and we will quote same.

DON'T FORGET THAT WE ARE STRICTLY IN IT ON SUPPLIES OF ALL KINDS, SEEDS, BULBS AND CUT FLOWERS.

VAUGHAN, McKELLAR & WINTERSON, 45, 47 and 49 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

E. H. Hunt

THE "OLD RELIABLE" FOR

WHOLESALE

CUT FLOWERS

Hunt's Flowers Go Everywhere

76 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

A. G. PRINCE & CO. Wholesale Gut Flowers

ANO FLORISTS' SUPPLIES.

Agents for the Hinsdale Rose Co. Special attention paid to shipping orders.

88 & 90 Websah Avenue.

Telephone Main 3208. CHICAGO.

It is not much trouble to mention the AMERICAN FLORIST when corresponding with an advertiser.

S. B. WINTER,

(Successor to WINTER & GLOVER.)

21 Randolph St, Chicago.

GRADE CUT FLOWERS,

PACKED RIGHT,

so they will reach you in just as good condition as they reach us.

WIRE DESIGNS: A Full Line. Write us for our lilustrated Catalogue.

Wholesale Flower Markets

|       | CHICAGO, June 10             |
|-------|------------------------------|
| Rose  | s. Beautiesper doz75@2.50    |
| - 0   | Brides 1.00@ 4.0             |
| 4.8   | Meteors, Kalserins 1.00@ 4.0 |
|     | Bridesmalds 1 00 @ 4 (       |
|     | Gontlers, Perles 1.00@ 3.0   |
| Carn  | ations, common               |
|       | " fancy 2.00@ 3.0            |
| Marg  | merites                      |
|       | Oratum 8(                    |
| Harr  | isli. Callas 2.00@ 4 (       |
| Lily  | of the valley 1.50@ 2 (      |
| Swee  | t peas 25@                   |
| Glad  | loi1 4.00/a2 6.0             |
| Adla  | ntum                         |
| Smile | ax10.00@12.0                 |
| Asps  | тадив40.00@75.0              |
|       | lea                          |
|       | ilesper dozen25@ .50         |

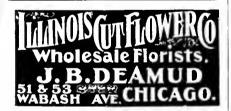

WHOLESALE GROWER OF ROSES. DEALER IN CUT FLOWERS.

J. A. BUDLONG

37-39 Randolph St..

CHIC 1GO.

KENNICOTT BROS. CO. WHOLESALE CUT FLOWERS AND FLORISTS SUPPLIES. WIRE WORK 88 WABASHAVE CHICAGO.

E. C. AMLING

Wholesale Cut Flowers

51 Wabash Avenue,

W. S. HEFFRON, Mgr.

....CHICAGO.

A. L. RANDALL 🤻

Wholesale Florist

Don't Forget that we are at 4 Washington St., Chicago.

Write for special quotations on large orders.

ROGERS PARK FLORAL CO.,

Wholesale Growers of

CUT FLOWERS

51 WABASH AVENUE,

HEADQUARTERS FOR AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

JAMES M. KING

Commission Dealer in

CUT FLOWERS.

Cood Money for your Flowers. Cood Flowers for your Money. 49 WEBT 29TH ST., NEW YORK, TELEPHONE 1675 38th St.

REINBERG BROS.

WHOLEBALE GROWERS OF

Cut Flowers.

600,000 FEET OF GLASS.

We can fine orders on short notice with all leading varieties of Roses and Carontions. We are headquarters for Fine American Beaulies. Gave us a trial and convine yourself....

WE STILL HAVE FINE SCOTT AND McGOWAN CARNATION PLANTS AT $1.00 PER 100; $7.50 PER 1000...*

Plants and Cuttings sent to press at plant rates, 20 per cent less than more bonds or rates.

We would ear your special attention to our choice you av Plants at $2.00 per 100 and $15,00 per 1000.

Our American Beauties are vigorous young plants free from Black Spot.

| printed the control of the control o |        |          |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------|----------|
| Pe                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | r 100  | Per 1000 |
| American Beauties, 212-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | $4.00 | $35.00  |
| 3-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 5.00   | 45.00    |
| Meteors 212-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 2.50   | 22 50    |
| 4 3-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 3.50   | 30.00    |
| Brides 212-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 2.50   | 22.50    |
| " 3-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 3.50   | 30.00    |
| Bridesmalds 21 2-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 2.50   | 20.00    |
| " 3-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 3.50   | 30.00    |
| Testout 21 g-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 2 50   | 22 50    |
| Belle Siebrecht 212-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 2.50   | 22.50    |
| Pres. Carnot 212-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 2.50   | 22 50    |
| La France 212-in.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 2.50   | 20 00    |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |        |          |

REINBERG BROS., 🛰 🦠 51 Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

... SUPPLY ... ORCHIDS

EXTRA FANCY STOCK FOR SPECIAL OCCASIONS.

TELEPHONE 2778 38TH STREET

50 West 30th Street, NEW YORK CITY.

TRAENDLY & SCHENCK. Wholesale Florists.

Control the stock of many celebrated growers and are prepared to quote prices on First Grade Cut Flowers. All varieties.

38 West 28th St., and Cut Flower Exchange, Tel. 961 18th Street. NEW YORK CITY.

Vou Want ORCHIDS AND LILY OF THE VALLEY for June Weddings and Graduations. 1 can supply you. Order in time.... JOHN YOUNG, 51 W. 28th St., NEW YORK.

THE NEW YORK CUT FLOWER CO.

II9 and I21 West 23d Street. 112 and 114 West 24th Street, Telephone 733-18th.

NEW YORK.

CONSIGNMENTS SOLICITED.

Special Attention Given to Shipping Orders.

LUDLOW ST.

PHILADELPHIA. PA

M. A. HART. Commission Dealer Cut Flowers.

44 WEST 29TH STREET,

NEW YORK CITY.

THE BEST MARKET IN NEW YORK. 'Phone 1307 38th St.

Wholesale Flower Markets

| New YORK, June 8.                                                                                                                                       |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Roses. Beautles. Hybrid       2.00@16       00         Bridesmalds. Testouts. Brides       50@4       00         " Morgans, Meteors       50@2       00 |
| Carnations 75@ 1 25                                                                                                                                     |
| Lily of the valley 1 00@ 3.00Sweet peas, per 100 bunches. 4.00@6.00                                                                                 |
| Sweet peas, per 100 bunches., 4.00@6.00                                                                                                                 |
| Herrisil 4 00@ 6.00                                                                                                                                     |
| Smllax                                                                                                                                                  |
| Asparagus 40.00@50.00                                                                                                                                   |
| Cattleyas 50 00                                                                                                                                         |
| Pæonies 3 00 2 4.00                                                                                                                                     |
| Boston, June 8.                                                                                                                                         |
| Roses Beauties, Brunners5.00@15.00                                                                                                                      |
| " Morgans, M-teors 2 00@ 6 00                                                                                                                           |
| " Brides, Bridesmalds Carnots 3 00@ 8 00                                                                                                                |
| Carnations                                                                                                                                              |
| Lity of the valley 2 (0 & 3.00                                                                                                                          |
| Cornflowers 50@ 1 00                                                                                                                                    |
| Harrisit 3 00@ 5 00                                                                                                                                     |
| Sweet peas                                                                                                                                              |
| Smillar 19 Pun 15 00                                                                                                                                    |

| PHILADELPHIA, June 8                   |  |  |  |  |
|----------------------------------------|--|--|--|--|
| 11 D1 1 00 C 00 00                     |  |  |  |  |
| Roses. Besutles 1 60@ 20.00            |  |  |  |  |
| " Jacqs 1.00 a 3 00                    |  |  |  |  |
| " Teas 2 (0@ 6.00                      |  |  |  |  |
| Carnations                             |  |  |  |  |
| extra 2 00                             |  |  |  |  |
| Lily of the valley, Paonice 2 00@ 4.00 |  |  |  |  |
| Harriell                               |  |  |  |  |
| Sweet peas                             |  |  |  |  |
| Cattlevas                              |  |  |  |  |
| Smllsx                                 |  |  |  |  |

John I. Raynor,

49 WEST 28th STREET.

NEW YORK.

SPECIAL EXTRA STOCK OF AM. BEAUTY, METEOR, BRIDESMAID, BRIDE.

Record Breaking Carnations ALL THE YEAR ROUND.

THOS. YOUNG, JR.

* * Wholesale Florist

43 West 28th Street. New York.

WALTER F. SHERIDAN. WHOLESALE

FLORIST

39 West 28th Street, NEW YORK.

Roses shipped to all points. Price list on application.

ose Growers

Will find a good market and good returns for their stock at....

JULIUS LANG'S 53 W. 30th Street, - NEW YORK.

Edward C. Horan. 34 W. 29th Street, NEW YORK,

WHOLESALE • FLORIST

Careful Shipping to all parts of the country Price list on application.

WM. C. SMITH. Wholesale Florist.

40 So. 16th St., PHILADELPHIA.

Consignments Solicited. Special attention given to shipping orders

Long Distance Telephone 5008 A.

9 Chapman Place, 15 Province Street, BOSTON, MASS.

WELCH BROS., PROPRIETORS.

Consignments from regular growers assigned separate space in our market. We guarantee payment for all Flowers sold. Sales reported weekly; payments monthly, or oftener if required.

THE NEW ENGLAND HEADQUARTERS FOR THE BEST GRADE OF FLOWERS AT ALL SEASONS OF THE YEAR.

FLOWERS, ALL KINDS.*

PLENTY OF THEM AT

TELEPHONE 382 38th St.

57 WEST 28th STREET. NEW YORK.

GALVIN & CO.

Wholesale Florists

AND DEALERS IN ALL

FLORISTS' SUPPLIES

4 Ordway Place, BOSTON, MASS. Cut Flower Consignments Solicited. Best market.

GEORGE A. SUTHERLAND, Cut Flowers # Florists' Supplies WHOLESALE.

67 Bromfield St.,

BOSTON, MASS.

Wholesale Florists BRIDESMAIDS.

JOBBERS IN FLORIST'S

LORISTS' VASES.

Horticultural Anctioneers. EY STREET. - BOSTON.

Wholesale Florists

111 West 30th Street, NEW YORK.

Telephone, 260 38th St. Consignments Solicited.

FRANK MILLANG,

WHOLESALE COMMISSION.

408 E. 34th Street,

Cut Flewer Exchange.

NEW YORK.

Helpful Reminders.

Perhaps the most important item for consideration at this season is replies to customers questions, which are almost always prompted by unsatisfactory experiences they are having. As a grower you have done your part when the stock is prepared in good condition and on time, but we must give directions cheerfully and correctly. I shall attempt to state briefly two questions that are put daily and formulate replies that your clerks may easily repeat to customers, choosing their own words to convey the idea.

A universal question is: "What must I do to have a clematis live? The one you sold me a year ago, grew nicely for a few days, then died suddenly." In answering you may say in substance: To explain all the causes that defeat the healthy growth of clematis would fill a large book, but by giving you a few pointers most essential to their welfare you will be able to steer clear of further difficulty. The clematis, like many other plants, requires a subsoil that will absorb considerable water and give out vapor that continually rises to the many spreading roots above; this is always most satisfactory when it is largely clay. The reason so many elematis die is that they are planted to buildings where the subsoil is brick-bats, plaster, shavings, etc., that hold no water, but absorb heat. Dig a hole three feet deep, fill it with turf and some manure, put in a pipe at the end so that when the trench is filled you can pour water in at the base and have it soak up, instead of down. Before filling the hole, be sure the ground is well moistened. Always keep the surface dry. In this way they will root deep and be less subject to drougth in hot weather. same treatment is advisable for hardy

Another oft encountered query is: "What is the reason my lilacs and paronies do not bloom?" When we investigate we find that the plants which worry our customers are at a dry corner of the house or on some hard ground on which they are unable to continue a sturdy growth during June and July. Explain that their flowering one season depends on their growth the season previous. To secure a healthy growth now, bore two or three holes at the base of each plant, pour in water until they are soaked. Repeat the operation frequently and add fertilizers, fill up the hole lightly In July continue the process. You will be rewarded next year by an abundance of

For next season's planting sow adlumia and oriental poppy seed, also provide as many ivy geraniums as you will need and grow them on. You require 5-inch pot plants with vines two feet long in bloom to make money and you cannot have them unless you get them going now in 3-meh pots - It pays to look ahead.

Wil Miscross, Dr.t. - L. Iward, Tatuall, an octogenarian, died June 3. He was in the nursery business for many years and was superintendent of city parks He leaves a widow.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus.

Strings 8 to 10 feet long, 50 CENTS.

W. H. ELLIOTT, Brighton, Mass.

Bassett & Washburn

88 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

Wholesale Dealers and Gut Flowers

CREENHOUSES: HINSDALE, ILL.

N. Y. CUT FLOWER EXCHANGE

404-412 E. 34th St. Near Ferry.

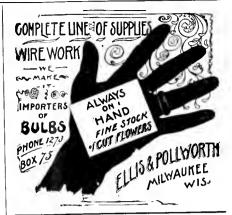

Open for Cut Flower Sales at 6 o'clock Every Morning..... DESIRABLE WALL SPACE TO RENT FOR ADVERTISING.

JOHN DONALDSON, Secretary.

Wholesale Flower Markets

| CINCINNATI, June 9.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                             |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------|
| CINCIANATI: Bune is                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 00.003.00.31                                |
| Roses, Beautles, relect                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 0 60@ 30 60                                 |
| medium                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 2 (100 3 10)                                |
| " Meteors                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 3. UER (2) 4 19.)                           |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 2 000 3 00                                  |
| Carnations fancy Marguerites Sweet pens.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 1.00 وي 50.                                 |
| fancy                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 1.50                                        |
| Margueritea Sweet pens                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | .25                                         |
| Lily of the valley                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 3.00                                        |
| Cailas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 8,002,00                                |
| SlocksSmilax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 20.00 - 19.50                               |
| Smilax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1 00                                        |
| AdlantumAsparagus                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                             |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                             |
| St. Louis, June 9                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 2 00 0 00 00                                |
| Roses, Beauties                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 2 00@20 00                                  |
| Meteors                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 1.00 a 6 001.00@ li.00                  |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1.00@ 5.00                                  |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                             |
| " Kalserins                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 1.00@ 1.50                                  |
| Fertes Falsenins Fertes Faces  | 1.00@ 1.50.50@ 2.00                     |
| Violeta California                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | . 35                                        |
| " double                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                             |
| Lily of the valley                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | . 2 00@ 3 00                                |
| Harristi                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | . 6 (n@10 00                                |
| CallaeSmilax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | , 5,00@ 6 00                                |
| Smtlax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | ,15.00@20.00                                |
| MILWAUKEE, June 9.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                             |
| The state of the s | . 5 00@20.00                                |
| Brides, Bridesmalds                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 2 00@ 4 00                                  |
| " Perles                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | . 1 00@ 3.00                                |
| " Meteors                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | . 2 00@ 4 0075@ 1 50                    |
| Peries Meteors Carnations Lily of the Valley Paganes Marguerites, yellow Smitax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 75% 1.50                                    |
| Lily of the Valley                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 2.(11@ 3.00                                 |
| Parontes                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | . 2.00@ 4.00.2o@ 75                     |
| Margueritea, yellow                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 12 50 to 15 00                              |
| Adlantum                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                             |
| Asparagus                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                             |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                             |
| BUFFALO, June 9                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 10.000 10.00                                |
| Roses, Beauties                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 2.0065.6.00                                 |
| Brides, Bridesmaids,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 3 (10) on 6 (10)                            |
| " Meleora Niphotos                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 2 000 4 00                                  |
| " Kaisarina                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 3 000 6.00                                  |
| Carnations, white and colored                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | . 1 D km 2 DO                               |
| fancles                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 2.10@. 2.50                                 |
| Lily of the valley                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 4 10                                        |
| Harrish                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | , 1 10000 10.00                             |
| Sweet peas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                             |
| Smilax                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1 (11) @ 1 95                               |
| " Meteors " Fertes Niphetos " Kulserins. Carnations, white and colored. Lily of the valley. Harrisli sweet pens. Smillax Adjantum. Aspantagus.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 50.00@75.00                                 |
| Asparagus                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1100 1000                                   |
| LOUISVILLE, June 9.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                             |
| Roses, Beauties per dozen1.(16a2                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | GD                                          |
| · Brides, Bridesmulds                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 3.0000 4.00                                 |
| " Meteors                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 3. ( Unc. 4 10)                             |
| MeteorsKolserios                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | . $ 0000 5 002 000 5 002 00 6 5 00 |
| Peries                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 2 Ou a 2 Du                                 |
| Carrier Company                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 1 00to 2.00                                 |
| Lily of the Valley                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | .2500 .50                                   |
| Callas, per dozen                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | .00                                         |
| Teries                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | , , 20m , 50                                |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                             |
| Marguerites.Smblax per dozen                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 191                                         |
| Similar per dozen                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | . TALL (55)                                 |
| Adiantum Arparugus, per string                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | (3)                                         |
| APDATORIUS, DEF BLUIDE                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                             |

C. A. KUEHN, Wholesale Florist.

1122 PINE STREET, ST. LOUIS. MO.

A complete line of Wire Designs.

C. W. WORS 2740 Olive Street, ST. LOUIS, MO. FLOWERS .... wholesale....

....ROSES, and a full line

Headquarters for the South West ....

ST. LOUIS CUT FLOWER CO.

Wholesale Florists

E. H. MICHEL

1620 Olive St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

HOLTON & HUNKEL CO.

SUCCESSORS TO

The Wisconsin Flower Exchange. Fresh Cut Flowers, Florists' Supplies Manufacturers of WIRE DESIGNS

Consignments Soucited.

Phone Mata 874

457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE.

OF SEASONABLE FLOWERS IN STOCK.

WM. F. KASTING COMMISSION FLORIST....

495 Washington St., Buffalo N. Y. Also Dealer in Florists' Supplies and Wire Designs

Heating Dwelling from Greenhouse Boilers.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Thinking that some may be heating his brother florist residence from his greenhouse boiler, 1 would like to inquire as to the best method of procedure, with boiler arranged as mine. My dwelling is divided from the first greenhouse by a driveway of ten feet and the rear of the dwelling is forty feet from the boiler house, the boiler being set so that the flow pipes are two feet above the ground level on leaving the boiler. Here is where a difficulty may arise. Could I drop the pipes from the boiler about three feet so as to go under the driveway and then rise to the dwelling, or would this form a trap and not work? Taking the middle of the greenhouse, the flow pipes would be within about eleven feet of the dwelling, separated by 10-foot driveway. Could we cut an outlet into a 2-inch flow pipe and connect it to the dwelling? We would still have to fall about four feet, go under driveway and rise to enter the cellar and thus carry the pipes to the rooms above. Any information will be gladly received. G. F. B. G. F. B.

The success in heating the dwelling from the greenhouse boiler will depend largely upon the relative height of the water in the boiler and the lowest point in the main to the dwelling. If the pipe is one and one-half to two feet above the water level, the steam can be carried under the drive way, but with less than this there is likely to be trouble, and three or four feet will be desirable. If the above condition can be secured after dropping the pipe to the point where it is to run beneath the driveway, carry it with a slight fall until it has entered the dwelling, then take off the risers and conmeet the lowest part of the main with the return from the dwelling, by means of a small relief pipe. This will drain off the condensed water from this part of the main and prevent its pocketing. After the pipe has been wrapped in asbestos, or other non-conducting packing, it can be enclosed in sewer pipe, with a diameter three or four inches greater than that of the wrapped pipe. This will be found a cheap and durable method of insulating the pipe, and but little heat will be lost. L. R. TAFT.

MAQUOKETA, IOWA.-Mrs. John Odgers has purchased the Blake greenhouse.

Greenhouse Building

Full information regarding building and heating Greenhouses is given in "GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION," by L. R. TAFT, Professor of Hortzeniture, Michigan Agricultural College. PRICE, POSTPAID, $1.50.

"Greenhouse Management"

by the same author, treats of the forcing of flowers, truits and vegetables under glass; also the propagation and care of house plants; misects, diseases and remedies. 400 pages. Just out. PRICE, POSTPAID, $1.50.

(See review in American Florist, page 1173, April 30, 1898.)

L. R. TAFT,

Agricultural College (P. O.), - Michigan.

For Insurance against damage by hail, Address JOHN G. ESLER, Sec'y, F. H. A., Saddle River. N. J.

Going, Going, Gone!

get the bargains. Auction Sales of Plants every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 9 A. M. at . . . .

McCarthy & co.'s

you want to buy, send for Catalogues. & you want to sell, write for terms. & & &

IT PAYS!

Your Spring Plant Trade

will come easier, and be more profitable if solicited in the nice way you can do such things by means of

LONG'S

Samples for 20 cts. in stamp

DAN'L B. LONG. Publisher

TELEGRAPH CODE

AM. SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION 82.00

in either stiff or flexible cover.

ADERESS ORDERS TO

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

FOR MEETING BAPTIST YOUNG PEO-PLE'S UNION

at Buffalo, N. Y., July 14-17, the Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets at rates lower than via other lines. The accommodations are strictly first-class in every particular, and it will be to your advantage to communicate with the General Agent, 111 Adams St, Chicago, before purchasing your ticket. Telephone Main 3389. (28)

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION

will be pleased with a ride to Buffalo and return over the Nickel Plate Road Choice of water or rail between Cleveland and Buffalo, within final limit of ticket. Call on or address J Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago, for particulars. Telephone 3389 Main. (29)

FIRST EXCURSION OF THE SEASON TO BUFFALO

via Nickel Plate Road, July 14-17, at one fare for the round trip. Choice of water or rail between Cleveland and Buffalo within final limit of ticket. For further information call on or address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. 'Phone Main 3389. (31)

ONE FARE FOR THE ROUND TRIP

to Buffalo, N. Y., and return, account Baptist Young People's Union meeting, July 14-17. Rates lower than via other lines. For full information call on or address J. Y. Calahan, General Agent, 111 Adams St., Chicago. 'Phone 3389 Main. (30)

ALWAYS mention the AMERICAN FLO-RIST when writing to advertisers.

THIS IMPRINT ON AN ENGRAVING

CHICAGO

IS A CUARANTEE OF SATISFACTORY QUALITY....

Manz makes illustrations for this paper.

THE Regan Printing House NURSERY SEED FLORISTS

87-91 Plymouth Place, *** CHICAGO

ALL Nurserymen, Seedsmen and Florists wishing to do business with Europe should send

"Horticultural Advertiser"

This is the British Trade Paper, being read weekly this is the British Trade Paper, being read weekly by all Horticultural traders; it is also taken by over 1000 of the best Continental houses. Address EDITORS OF THE "H. A."
Chilwell Nurseries. - Notte, England.

...THE...

"Lyon=Horticole"

is an interesting review of French horticulture. Issued semi-monthly. 20 8-vo. pages illustrated. Subscriptions to the United States, 1 year, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00. Address

DIRECTEUR LYON-HORTICOLE, Lyon-Villeurbanne, France.

FLORISTS' MUTUAL

INSURANCE ASS'N

Application Blanks and Prospectus Ready....

Write now. Delays are dangerous.

W. J. VESEY, Sec'y, - Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE NATIONAL Florists Board of Trade

C. S. LODER, Sec'y, 271 Broadway, New York

THE WABASH R. R. COMPANY

The Short and Quick Line between the East and West connecting Buffalo. Detroit and Toledo with Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha.

The Wabash is the Only Line running sleeping cars and chair cars (free) between Buffalo and St. Louis and Kansas City.

Through sleeping cars between New York and Boston and St. Louis and Chicago run every day.

For further information apply to the nearest Railroad Ticket Agent, or to

H. B. McCLELLAN, G. E. A.,

387 Broadway, New York City,

J. D. McBEATH, N. E. P. A., 5 State Street, Boston, Mass.

C. S. CRANE, Gen. Pass. & Tkt. Act., St. Louis, Mo.

Now Ready! The American Florist Company's Directory of Florists, Nurseryof the United States and Cauada arranged both by States and Post Offi es and all names Alphabetically. Price $2.00. In Flexible Leather Binding, $3.00. Fully states and the scale of the sca

American Florist Company, 324 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL,

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. IRVING ROUSE, Pres.: E. ALBERTSON Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y and Tress.

A. L. Brook has added thirty-five acres to his nursery at North Topeka, Kan.

NEW Brighton, Pa.-Thomas Edwards will retire from business on July 1 in favor of his son.

THE Allen Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., has reduced the number of its directors from five to three and increased its capital stock from $6,000 to $1 ',000.

CORNELIUS S. COLE, aged S2, died at Spencerport, N. V., May 27. He was engaged in the nursery business for more than thirty years. A widow and one son, George M., survive him.

THE Board of Control of Toronto has given Leslie & Son the contract for the trees for Island park at the following prices: 200 Lombardy poplars, 15 cents each; 200 Balsam poplars, 20 cents each; 1,000 assorted willows. 15 cents each; 250 Manitoba maples, 20 cents each; 500 Scotch elms, 25 cents each; 250 European ash, 25 cents each.

THE NURSERYMEN'S MUTUAL PROTEC-TIVE ASSOCIATION, in session at Omaha, June 8, elected the following officers: President N. H. Albaugh, Tadmor, O.; vice-president, W. C. Barry, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary-treasurer, G. C. Seager, Rochester, N. V. executive committee, Irving Rouse, Rochester; E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.-William G. Watson died June 3, aged 69 years, leaving a wife, three sons and four daughters. He was manager for the firm of Ellwanger & Barry, nurserymen, with whom he had been associated for forty-three years. Mr. Watson was born in Belfast, Ireland, but had made his home in Rochester since 1853. He was a man of exemplary character and wide acquaintance.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION OF WHOLE-ALE NURSERYMEN, in session at Omaha, June S. cleeted the following officers: President, C. L. Watrons, Des Moines. In .; vice-president, Samuel Lorton, Davenport, la secretary, Thos B. Mechan, Philadelphia; treasurer, W. J. Peters. Troy, O. Reports showed a decrease of matured stock of about 500,000 apple trees and 350,000 cherry plants. It shows an increase this spring of over 2,000,000 apple grafts and about 16,000 cherry stalks for budding. The total plant of apple gratts this season approximates 7,000,000

American Association of Nurserymen.

The twenty-third annual convention of the American Association of Surserymen was in session at Cimaha on June S and 9. About 150 members participated in the husiness and pleasures of the meeting.

The address of the president, Irving Rouse, of Rochester, N.V., outlined the action of the body as his suggestions were closely followed. He said in part:

"Without the aid of this association the nursery schedule in the Dingley tariff act. of which we are expecting so much, would never have been enacted. The federal law, or San Jose scale act, now before congress, and which we hope will shortly become a law, was only accomplished by the united efforts of this association on March 18 the Homamon houses of parliament passed what is known as the Canadian exclusion act. This act bars out of Canada all nursery stock. It is estimated that at least $500,000 worth of nursery stock had been sold from the state of New York alone in Canada, a great portion of it at retail on which commissions had already been paid, and not a dollars worth of which could be shipped. A protest was at once lodged at Washington, but the governor-general of Canada refused to suspend all or any part of the law, not even excepting the stock already covered by previous contract.

"In view of this state of affairs it seems very desirable that this association take some action looking to a rescinding of this law or to retaliation; if the former cannot be accomplished, under the federal scale act the secretary of agriculture would have the power to bar Canadian fruit out of the United States for the same reason that Canadiansbar our trees, and with more justice. I would suggest that this whole matter be thoroughly discussed and placed in the hands of our legislative committee.

The San Jose scale and legislation against the pest received much attention and the legislative committee was instructed to use every endeavor to secure the passage of the pending Barlow bill.

The following officers were elected: President, A. L. Brooke, Topeka, Kan.; vice president, E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; secretary, George E. Seager, Rochester, N. V.; treasurer, Charles H. Yates, Rochester, N. Y.; executive committee, C. L. Watrons, Des Moines, Ia.; R. C. Berckmans, Augusta, Ga., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.

The association voted to meet in Chicago in June, 1899.

OUR SPECIALTIES ARE Azaleas, Roses, Rhododendrons

New and rare hardy plants for forcing. Noveltles in Ferns called by the largest London grower). The newest and best varieties of roses, II. P. and Tea seented from a French raiser. Write us and ask for quotations. We import direct to Boston to meet the demand from Canada and New England States.

F. Brunton & Co. IMPORTERS & EXPORTERS OF NEW AND PARE PLANTS 136 Boylston St., BOSTON, MASS.

HARDY

Herbaceous Perennials

THE MOST COMPLETE STOCK IN AMERICA. PÆONIES, PHLOX, IRIS, DELPHINIUMS, JACOB W. MANNING, The Reading Nursery, READING, MASS. ЕЗТАВЫЗНЕВ 1854.

Assorted in 25 Varieties.

My selection $50 per 1000. Descriptive catalogue and price lists for the trade.

SAMUEL C. MOON, Bucks Co., PA. MORRISVILLE.

Mention the American Florist when corresponding with an advertiser.

Notice!

The extensive collection of Foreign Grape Vines of our manager, Mr. John

G. Gardner, has been transferred from Jobstown, N. J., to our Nurseries at Stoke-Pogis, Pa., and all orders can now be promptly filled by addressing the undersigned. Descriptive catalogue mailed on application. Those in the trade having wealthy clients, with hot or cold graperies, can procure for them, from this collection, the latest and best acquisitions, as well as the standard sorts. On and after JUNE 15th the plants will be ready to ship in pots well-established, and in first-class condition.

Stoke-Pogis Nurseries,

Juniper and Walnut Streets, - PHILADELPHIA.

G. C. WATSON,

ા લાકા Agent.

EVERGREENS, Etc.

20,000 American Arbor Vitas, 2 to 8 feet specimens and hedging plants.
5,000 Pyramidal Arbor Vitas, 2 to 4 feet.
20,000 Compacta, Globe and other dwarf Arbor Vitas, all sizes.
3,000 Nordman's Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
2,000 European Silver Fir, 2 to 4 feet.
5,000 Hembock Spruce, 1 to 4 feet.
10,000 Norway Spruce, 3 to 8 feet.
10,000 Norway Spruce, 3 to 8 feet.
10,000 Retinosporas, Squarrosa, Plumosa, Plumosa anrea and other sorts, 1 to 5 feet.
5,000 Irish Junipers, 1 to 2½ feet.
10,000 Pines, Austrian, Scotch, Excelsa, White and dwarf varieties, all sizes.
1,000 Enonymous Japonica, 18 to 36 inches.
2,000 Enonymous radicans variegata.
1,000 English Holly, 1 to 4 feet.
3,000 Mahonias aquifolia and Japonica.
3,000 English Ivy, strong plants.
Prices low. Correspondence solicited.
THE WM H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

THE WM H. MOON CO., Morrisville, Pa.

TOKYO... NURSERIES CO.

Headquarters for Japan Lille Cyoas Bevolus, Morolas Glory, and k nds of Japanese plant, seeds etc. etc Large assortment alloways in stock. Orders romptly executed.
Write for catalogue.

The Tokyo Nurseries Co. Komagome, Tokyo,

(JAPAN) Cable Address
"Nurserles" Tokyo.

36 First Prizes out of 39 entries in 1896 and 1897. Peacock's Prize Winning Dahlias

Send for 1898 illustrated wholesale cata-ogue before placing orders elsewhere.

W. P. PEACOCK, - Atco, N. J.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST'S COLOR CHART

is now accepted as the standard in preparing color descriptions by many foreign houses as well as in America.

PRICE IS CENTS POSTPAID. AMERICAN FLORIST CO., 322 Dearbarn St. Chicago

A LIVE AND RELIABLE CORRESPONDENT WANTED in every live city in the world. We enable you to deliver flowers by telegraph. A profitable convenience. For particulars, write

> C. B. WHITNALL, MILWAUKEE, WIS. 438 Milwaukee St.,

Nashville, Tenn.

HOT, DRY WEATHER AFFECTS STOCK .-FUNERAL WORK THE ONLY BUSINESS OF THE WEEK.-NOTES.

The weather has been intensely hot and flowers are beginning to suffer. The sweet pea crop, particularly, will be cut offunless there is a rain very soon.

With the summer heat has come the summer inactivity in floral circles and had it not been for funeral work, the past week would have touched the limit of summer dullness. The death of the wife of a prominent railroad official caused an unusual demand for handsome floral tokens. The pall was of American Beauty roses, and one of the most pleasing designs was a shaft four feet high, made of white flowers, entwined with a garland M. C. DORRIS. of Meteor roses.

Boston Florist Letter Co.

This wooden box nicely stained and var-nished, 18x30x12 made in two sections, one for each size letter, given away with first order of 500 letters.

Block Letters, 1 1/2 or 2-inch size, per 100, $2.00. Script Letters $4 Fastener with each letter or word. Used by leading florists everywhere and for sale by all wholesale florists and supply dealers.

N. F. McCARTHY, Treas. and Manager, 84 Hawley St., DOSTON, MASS.

SMALL GREEN

For use with.... VIOLETS

Work up beauutiflly. Stiff, wiry stems. Are all the rage.

Box of 5000, $5.00. Less quantity at $1.25 per 1000. ....ADDRESS....

HARLAN P. KELSEY, 1150 Tremont Bldg., - BOSTON, MASS.

Galax Leaves, Cut Palm Leaves, bouquet green, Moss (sphagnum and green), Laurel Roping, Ximas Trees: everything in the green line always in stock at

H. E. HARTFORD'S, 18 Chapman Place. BOSTON.

SHADING Weather Proof Paper, ready for use on sash or greenhouses. Unexcelled for Palm, Fern or Propagating houses. It will outlast plant bed cloth considerably.

Comes in rolls about 16 pounds in weight, 3s-inches wide, 25 yards papers long at NET $2.50 the roll.

August Rölker & Sons, Sole Mnfrs. Agents, - 52 Dey Street, NEW YORK.

RUBBER HOSE

For Florists, Seedsmen and Nurserymen.

 $^3_4$ -inch, $20,00 per 100 feet, warranted 5 years,  $^3_4$ -inch, $15,00 per 100 feet, warranted 3 years,  $^3_4$ -inch, $12,00 per 100 feet, warranted 2 years. Couplings attached, ready for use.

MANUFACTURERS' RUBBER CO. NEW YORK CITY. 174 Fulton Street.

OR THE BUGS

∞ FRESH ∞ AND UNADULTERATED

PARIS GREEN 🧀 🎿 HELLEBORE & & & TOBACCO DUST & SOAP 🥦 46 Extract 🚜 SLUG SHOT & & & SULPHUR अ अ अ WHALE OIL SOAP.

ETC., ETC. 🚜 🥦

Vegetable Plants

ALL KINDS.

PRICE LIST ON "FANCY" BULB STOCK NOW READY. ASK FOR A COPY.

Vaughan's Seed Store

CHICAGO: 84=86 Randolph St.

NEW YORK: 14 Barclay St.

ESTABLISHED EM STEFFENS SUCC. ON A STEFFENS AND STEFFENS BROS.

GALVANIZED STEEL WIRE PLANT STAKES F. LITTLEFIELD, WORCESTER, MASS.

NEW CROP arriving daily, $1.50 per 1000 Disc unt to wholesale jobbers. Prince's Pine, 6c per 1b. Hendquarters for Galax Leaves. Laurel festooning, 4 to 8c per yd. Laurel and Prince's Pine Wreaths for Decoration Day, made to order. Hine green Moss in bbis. $1.00; in sacks, 75c. Our goods are always the best to be obtained for the money. Prompt attention to all orders. Sead in your orders now for Ferns for Decoration Day and you will be sure to have them

Crowl Fern Co.

27 Beacon Street, - BOSTON, MASS.

Exclusive Importers and Manufacturers of....

Florists' Supplies

25 N. 4th Street,

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

John Conley & Son,

Manufacturers of

2 AND 4 DOMINICK STREET,

When corresponding with advertisers, mention the AMERICAN FLORIST.

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO.

Cycas Wreaths, Moss Wreaths, Ferneries and Jardinieres, Wheat Sheaves and Immortelles.

New Catalogue of all FLOAISTS' SUPPLIES on application.

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO.

50, 52, 54 and 55 N. 4th St , PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Have You Seen Our Agent?

A Complete Catalogue for Florists. Send for One.

ELLIS & POLLWORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.

EXPRESS

PAID on Receipt of .4 .4 ..$4.00...

Will dust Paris Green, Purple Hellebore, etc., over vines bushes or small trees. No water or plaster required. Circular free.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 84 Randol'h St.

BRILLIANT GREEN AND BRONZE GALAX LEAVES,

For Decorating and all Florists' Designs. CHAS. H. RICKSECKER, Linville, Mitchell Co., N. C.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

JEROME B RICE, Pres : E. B. CLARK, 1st Vice res . S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conu., Sec y Pres. and Treas.

MR. WARNER, of Van Heemstra & Co., sailed for Europe June 4 on the steamship Spaarndam.

AUG. RHOTERT, of New York, sails for Europe about June 20, returning September 1. Mrs. Rhotert will accompany him.

PRESIDENT RICE predicts a good time at Old Point Comfort during the coming meeting of the Seed Trade Association. His party will go via Old Dominion line from New York, 4 p. m., Saturday, June 11. Sessions open Tuesday, a. m., June VISITED CHICAGO: August Rhotert, New York: R. C Stochr, of the Dayton Label Co., Davton, Ohio; Henry A. Salzer, La Crosse, Wis., and R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill. Messrs. Salzer and Shumway summarized the business of 1898 as exceeding that of last year by about 10° c. The latter gentleman is already purchasing printing material to begin work on his 1899 catalogue.

Indianapolis.

SPRING TRADE RATHER DULL.—MEMORIAL DAY ENTERPRISE.—FLORISTS' CLUB MAT-TERS -- ROTHERMEL'S TUMBLE.

Spring trade in general and especially for Memorial Day did not come up to expectations. A few florists report business equal to last year, but with most of us there were fewer sales and lower prices. Memorial Day brought a very unpleasant surprise to those in the trade whose places are close to Crown Hill cemetery, as some florists from other parts of the city were stationed with their wagons on the street leading to the cemetery and were disposing of large quantities of flowers there. The influence of these street sales was heavily felt by those doing business in that neighborhood for they were prepared for the usual amount of business and some of them had a large amount of surplus stock on hand.

The police have at last been successful in capturing some of the flower thieves. So much flower stealing has been going on in the south side of the city, that the florists in this locality declare the evilhas affected their business. The mid summer meeting of the State Florists' Association will be held at Richmond on July 2. The attendance from this city is expected to be very large as the Incianapolis boys well remember the hospitality which they have enjoyed at Richmond on former occasions

The influence of the hot weather was felt at last night's meeting of the Florists' Club Besides appointing a committee to make preparations for the annual pic nn , little mismess was transacted.

H C Fothermal, of the city greenhouse force was named while riding his wheel, he tried to light off a dog and can against a bridge. The dog and bridge escaped mury, but Mr Fethernel will be laid up for several days.

Pittsburg.

REDOMS ARE PERSONNELLED IN CHRISTARY SCARGE FRANCA TRIB TO OMAHA --- I UIG WIG STELONIES SEMS NOTES

The several days of hot summer weather which we have been experiencing have hurt business. Howers were extremely plentiful, but buyers were scarce, and several of the florists sent large quantities to the hospitals rather than send them to the dump. Roses were retailed at from 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen, and carnations at 25 cents to 35 cents per dozen. In the plant department a fair business was done, but it will be about over in another week. Those in this branch of the trade are well satisfied with the season's work, as prices have been high enough for a profit.

Several of the local florists are agitating a plan for the society to go in a body to the S. A. F. convention at Omaha. It is expected that from twenty-five to thirty will go from here. E. C. Ludwig, of Allegheny market, has had several very handsome varieties of paronies of his own raising on display He contemplates giving a this week. parony exhibition next year, and as he has over 1,500 plants and many varieties it would prove very interesting.

T. P. Langhans will go to Somerset county with his family about the end of the month to rusticate during July and August. He will not attend the convention at Omaha.

Julius Ludwig and wife leave in a few days for New York and the seashore.

REGIA.

LINCOLN, ILLS.-Chas. Woodruff, head gardener at the state home for feebleminded children, was drowned in Salt Creek June 4, while rescuing an inmate of the institution.

BALTIMORE, MD.-Merryman & Pattison, auctioneers have conducted some very successful plant sales this spring although very few florists have been among the bidders.

LEBANON, IND.-Gustave II. Minx, who bought the Lebanon greenhouses of II. L. Moore, assignce for W. A. Bilger, declined to retain his purchase, claiming that it was not what he expected to get, and Mr. Moore once more offers the establishment for sale. Mr. Minx has returned to his old position as gardener at the Northern Indiana Hospital for the Insane.

CANTON, OHIO. - Burglars blew open the safe in Charles Brown's greenhouse office at obout 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning. at obout 3 o clock on Tuesday morning. The explosion aroused so many persons that the robbers were obliged to run, leaving most of the valuables behind them. They, however, secured a gold dollar which Mr. Brown prized as a keep-land them. sake, as it was given him some years ago by Mrs. William McKinley.

NOTICE.

Mr. Charles P. Braslan's connection with use recol with the close of business. May 31st. We be gete inform the trade generally that we have no connection with Mr. Braslan or the Braslan Sea Growers to and are not responsible for any of hoor its acts.

Order requiring prompt attention should be addressed to Mr. V. J. M. Jonner our Manager in the cago, at 12 North Clark Street. All other better perfaming to our pass or present husiness in the case, and all remittances, should be mailed to it for top other.

his cost and all remittances should be marked at Bis ton other.

JOSEPH BRIGANA SONS (Inc.)

Der Charles H. Breck, Trens.

Bestein June 1st 1898.

CHINESE PRIMROSE

... 810101) ...

creatly improved and well known to be of the very host grown. Packets put up specially for Florials, of sert single and double varieties, 400 media, 2100. Plants ends to Aogost, at 22 30 per 100. Constants seed of intre flowering dwarf varieties a condest mixture, pxt. 22c. 5 pxts 1100. Primitia obconico, pxt. 100 media 32c. Primitia obconico, pxt. 100 media 32c.

JOHN F RUPP, . Shiremanstown, Pa.

ceive the same careful attention.

Grafting Wax

Trowbridge's Celebrated Grafting
Wax, the genuine article, 1 lb. bars at 19c; ½ lb. bars at 20c; ¼ lb. bars
at 29c per pound. Rebates: 10 lb.
lots. 5 per cent: 25 lb. lots. 10 per cent: 50 lb. lots. 15 per cent: 100 lb.
lots. 20 per cent. Address all orders
and correspondence to Juniper and
Walnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

G. C. Watson,

Seedsman

Seedsman.

Clifton Springs, N. Y.

BURPEE'S SEEDS PHILADELPHIA.

Wholesale Price List for Florists and Market Gardeners

SEEDS LAWN GRASS $12.00 per 100 lbs.

Finest Quality Ever Offered (Retails (ii 30c, lb.) J. CHAS. McCULLOUGH, SEEDSMAN, RECLEANER AND JOBBER GRASS SEEDS. North-Fast Second & Walnut Sts., Cincinnati, O. Sena for Hustrated Catalogues.

COLD STORAGE VALLEY ALWAYS ON HAND.

CASES of 2500 paps, extra quality, $25,00; per

1001 $12 00 CASES of 3000 ptps, good quality, $25.00; per 1050 $10.00

CLUCUS & BODDINGTON CO., 501 & 503 West 13th St., NEW YORK CITY.

BEST OF ALL' TOMATO
"ENGLISH" MELONS
FOR FORCING)

FLOWER SEEDS FOR FLORISTS
Catalogues on application.

WEEBER & DON, Seed Merchante and Growers, and Growers, 113 Chambers St., NEW YORK, N. Y.

It will be better for everybody if you mention the American Florist when writing advertisers on this page.

NOW READY!

FULL<sub>Y</sub> REVISED TO DATE The American Florist Company's

36

36

WITH UPWARDS OF

3,000 NEW NAMFS Florists, Nurserymen Seedsmen

&& OF &&

SA OF THE SA

UNITED STATES AND CANADA AR-RANGED BOTH BY STATES AND **
POST OFFICES AND ALL NAMES **

ALPHABETICALLY

PRICE TWO DOLLARS.
IN FLEXIBLE LEATHER BINDING, THREE DOLLARS.

American Florist Company,

324 DEARBORN STREET, CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A. &

Syracuse, N. Y.

SPRING TRADE HAS BEEN FAIR .- FRENCH CANNAS IN SLIGHT DEMAND,-RED GERA-NIUMS IN FAVOR .- HYBRID ROSES THE FAVORITES.

Spring trade has been fully up to that of last year but planting out was greatly retarded by bad weather, causing a great rush just before Memorial Day.

Contrary to expectations French cannas, which had sold so well in previous seasons, have been in slight demand. This is attributed to the fact that buyers who planted largely of them have learned to hold them over in their own cellars. Red geraniums, especially the varieties S. A. Nutt and Grant, have been more largely planted than ever and about the only scarce article on the market has been good vincas. The best selling plants have been hybrid roses in pots. More than double the usual quantity was grown this More than year and sold out at from 50 cents to $1 each.

Memorial Day's trade was about 10% larger than that of last year, more small plants being sold for this occasion. supply of coarse flowers was far from being equal to the demand but roses and carnations were plentiful and of extra fine quality. Herbaceous pyrethrums were out just right and it seems strange that more of these valuable plants are not grown for cutting. ALPHA.

NORTH TOPEKA, KANS.-Peters & Skinner have presented the fire department with fifty rose plants which have been set out about the fire station.

CYCAS REVOLUTA. The true, long-lenved variety. Freshly imported, dormant stems. Run from 5 to 10 ibs. each. Note the price: 10c, per 1b., $8 per 100 ibs., $75 per 1000 ibs., $10 per 100 to 100 rate; 500 lbs. at 1000 rate; 500.

UNITED STATES EXOTIC NURSERIES

(Formerly Pitcher & Manda.) SH'RT HILLS, N. J. Wholesale Catalogue Palms & Ferns on application.

Bougainvilleas Ghabra A Ghabra Comonths from Jan to July Too bracks obtained a restremely durable on plants of in out aprays A small stock of plants will form a profitable investment for $1.00 plants for $1.00 plants for $1.00 plants for $1.00 plants from 25g in pots $1.50 plants for $1.00 plants from 25g in pots $1.50 plants from 25g order THEO. S. BECKERT, Clenfield, Pa., under below littsburg tash with order

Now Ready

American Florist Company's DIRIC-THE American Piorist Company a Birki-10RY of Florists, Nurserymen and Seeds-men of the United States and Conada or ranged both by States and Poat Offices and all names Alphabetically. Fully revised to date with upwards of 3 900 New Names Price $2 90 in flexible leather binding, $3 00

American Florist Company,

324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., D. S. A.

WIFLGRUM PURE STOCK . SOUND AND WELL RIPENED.

I have 3 sizes Japan Longiflorum-5 to 7, 7 to 9, and 9 to 10 inches, but as the large size is in short supply, I can book same only when some of the other two are taken, and l advise early orders, as there is a run on the Japan Stock this year, Delivery September 25th to October 15th, 1898. Prices guaranteed. 1 will be pleased to have a list of your wants in this item; also in Harrisil, Romans, Paper Whites, Dutch Bulbs, Valley, etc. Let me hear from you. All orders, large or mall, receive the same careful attention. Address all communications to Juniper and Walnut Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

G. C. Watson.

Crotons...

__IN VARIETY

Rothschild, Hawkeri, Interrnptum, Evansia-num, Rubra Lineata, Andreanum, Aurea Mac-ulatum and others, suitable for bedding. Fine plants in 3-mch pots. $2.00 per doz. New and rare varieties, 50 cents each.

rare varieties, 50 cents each. Aurea Maculatum, extra fine plants in 4-in. pots. $2 50 per doz.; $15 per 100; 3-inch pot plants. $2 per doz.; $12 per 100; thumb pots, $1 per doz.; $6 per 100.

Edwin Lonsdale,

Money Order Office. Station H. Phila

CHESTNUT HILL, PHILA., PA.

3 plants, 5-in, pot 48 to 20-in, high, per 100, $10,00 3 plants, 10-in, pot, 48 to 50-in, high, each, 4.00 4 plants - 2 in, pot, 8 to 12-in, high, per 100, 5.00

COCOS WEDDELIANA

KENTIA BELMOREANA

21,-in., 3 leaves, 10 to 12-in, high, per 190, 3 in., 4 or 5 leaves, 15 to 18-in, high, per 190, 5-in., 4 to 6 leaves, 20 to 24-in, high, each,... All measurements from top of put, 1.00

JOSEPH HEACOCK, WYNCOTE, PA. Mention American Florist when writing

The Finest Winter Flowering Plant of the Century Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

TILLS time variety keeps up a succession of bright Tills line variety keeps up a succession of bright rosy pink blossoms throughout the Winter, old is invaluable for florists' work. H. B. May, who was the first to bring this striking novelty into popularity holds the finest stock in the world. Orders for export enrefully packed.

H. B. MAY, Dyson's Lane Nurseries, Upper Edmonton, London.

Rose Hill Nurseries

LARGEST Growers of Palms, Orchids, Stave and Greenhouse plants, Ferns, Arabearias, Pandanus.....

SIEBRECHT & SON, New Rochelle, N. Y. New York Office, 409 Fifth Ave.

ON HAND

per 100 1000 3000 LATANIA BORBONICA...$,50 $ 3.00 $ 7.50 ARECA LUTESCENS..... 1.00 7.50 20.00

1.50 12.50 35.00 1.00 7.50 20,00 1.00 7.50 20,00

J. L. SCHILLER, 404 East 34th Street, NEW YORK CITY.

CANNAS Strong plants of Alphonse Bou-dale, Paul Marquant, Wm. Elliott Bisson, Sec. Stewart, Flamboyant, $4.00 per 100; $35,00 per 1000.

COLEUS Crimson Verschaffeltii, Golden per 100; $18,00 per 1000.

Geraniums | Double Gen. Grant and S. A. Nutt. | 20<sub>2</sub>-inch | pots. | $3.00 | per 100; $28.00 per 100; $28.00 per 100; $45.00 per 100; $7.00 per 100; $65.00 per 1000. | Cobwa Scandens, 4-inch | pots | ... | $6.00 per 100.

JOHN SCOTT, KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

rchia

We have still on hand a limited quantity of following importation: Cattleya labiata, C. Mossie, C. Lælia purpurata and Miltonia

LAGER & HURRELL, - Summit, N. J.

ะรู้จัดให้เกิดเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่อง เรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเรื่องเร Asparagus ____ Sprengerii $5.00 per 100 Seedlings

Cosh with order. Seedlings American Rose Co., Washington, D. C.

Baare unuananananananananana

Always mention the .....

American Florist

when writing advertisers

New Frilled, Tuberous Rooted...

BEGONIA

We can still supply a limited stock of the most unique form, with very large single flowers which are entirely distinct from anything heretofore offered, the petals being wavy and beautifully frilled on the edges, similar to the newer forms of Petunias. The illustration gives a very good idea of its general appearance. A decided acquisition and created a sensation at the European exhibitions last year. Strong bulbs, 30c each; $3 per 100.

We are now booking orders for our SUPERB STRAINS of Calceolaria, Cineraria, Cyclamen, Pansy, Primula, etc., etc. New Crops will be here shortly--for varieties and prices see our current wholesale catalogue.

Latania Borbonica

Extra fine stock, 3-inch pots, one character leaf, $10 per 100. 4-inch, two character leaves, $12.50 per 100.

Sago Palms
With fine leaves, $400, $5.00 & $600 per dozen; perfect plants that will be quick sellers. All sizes in Sagos from 35c each to large specimens. Write for prices.

Coleus_

A few thousand very strong Rooted Cuttings, Golden Bedder and Nellie Grant, $4.00 per 1000 to clear out.

CRITCHELL'S,

IIO East 4th Street, CINCINNATI, O.

Asparagus P. Nanus (true)

10,000 Plants. Per hundred. $2.50, or $20.00 per thousand.

Cash with order from parties unknown to me.

LOUIS ULLRICH, Tiffin, Ohio. Wholesale Grower of Cut Flowers.

outch Bulbs

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, CROCUS, ETC. RUDOLPH VAN TIL & CO., Hillegom, Holland.

American Representative

L. C. BOBBINK, Rutherford, N. J. ASK FOR CATALOGUE.

Mention American Florist.

For FLORISTS.. For SEEDSMEN.

VAN ZANTEN BROTHERS.

HILLEGOM,

HOLLAND.

It is good business policy to mention the

....American Florist

when you write to an advertiser.

Auction Sale!

F. H. DRESSEL, Weehawken Heights, N. J.

ORCHIDS

- 500 Cattleya Trianæ—vurious sizes.
   300 Cattleya Percivaliana—various sizes.
   200 Cattleya Labiata—various sizes.
   All in fine order, among them being many fine specimen plauts, also a collection of Dendrobiums, Cymbidiums and Oncidiums; also

PALMS, DRAGAENAS, NEPHROLEPIS, ETC., ETC.

- 500 Cocos Weddeliana-2-inch.
- 500 Kentias—2-inch. 100 Dracæna Sanderiana—3-inch.
- 500 Dracænas in fine varieties for growing on, such as Massangeana, Terminalis, Lindeni, Fragrans, Amabilis. &c.
   500 Asparagus P. Nana—2 to 5-inch pots.
   100 Araucaria Excelsa—5-inch pots.
   500 Nephrolepis Bostoniensis—5-inch pots to 16-inpans, fine clants.

- Nephrolepis Bostoniensis—5-inch pots to 16-in-pans, fine plants.
  NEPH, CORDATA COMPACTA—6 to 10-inch pans.
  Pandanus Utilis—3-inch pots.
  Kentia Belmoreana—2<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> to 3 teet high.
  Dracæna Graciis—3 to 4-inch pots.
  Areca Lutescens—fine bushy stock, 3, 4 and 5-in a pot, 4 to 5-inch.
  Ficus Elastica—5 to 6-inch pots.
  Ficus Elastica—3 feet high.
  Funkias and many others.

FOR SPECIAL CATALOGUE SEND TO

CLEARY & CO., Auctioneers 60 Vesey St., N. Y. NOTE THE DATE: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15.

Good Stock to Fill Benches Now.

JOHN H. LEY, Good Hope, Wash ngton, D. C.

Azaleas

THE FINEST STOCK IN THE WORLD

Palms SANDER,

Bay Trees

BRUGES, BELGIUM. AGENT :

Araucarias 60 Ve A. DIMMOCK. t., NEW YORK.

Asparagus Sprengeri

50,000 Plants in 21g-inch pots, $5.00 per 100, express: 24 for $5.00 per 100, express; 24 for $1.50 by mail. Specimens for 8-inch pots, $6.00 to $12.00.....

A. Blanc & Co. PHILADELPHIA.

Per 100 $18.00.

Cash with the order.

MORITZ TITTEL, Jefferson Park, Chicago.

Treatment of Cyclamen Bulbs.

ED. AM. FLORIST:-Does it pay to bother with keeping cyclamen bulbs over to the second year, especially the small ones? 1 had some left over and have a lot of seedlings again this year. Would like to have the opinion of some grower as to the best course to pursue with the old bulbs. SUBSCRIBER.

FROM THE COMMERCIAL STANDPOINT.

We do not consider it worth while bothering with old bulbs. If special care is taken good results may be obtained, but I have never found it to pay, as if seed is sown at the proper time and the plants skilfully handled, the young plants will be as a rule far superior to old stock. However, good specimens may be grown from the old bulbs if the inquirer will dry them off gradually, leaving them in the pots and withholding water by degrees until quite dormant, then take the plants -pots and all-to some cool, shady place outdoors, cover them to the depth of about two inches with coarse sand and leave them there for four to six weeks; then take the old bulbs, shake out the soil and re-pot. They should next be placed in a frame, watered sparingly at first and afterward cultivated the same as young stock. This is the old way of thirty or forty years ago, and it is good enough, only that it spreads over two years that which can be accomplished in J. M. KELLER. one.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

AN EXHIBITION GROWERS' ADVICE.

It does not pay to bother the second year with eyelamen bulbs that have been starved or neglected the first season; but if they have not received a check while growing the first year, they will start and make fine plants the second, and produce twice as many flowers as seedlings. They will probably require a larger size of pot than that used for seedlings at the final potting. To get the best result from eyclamen bulbs the second year they must be dried off gradually and ripened until they lose all the old leaves. It will not do to neglect them while they are undergoing the drying-off process; give them a good sunny bench with sufficient water to keep the roots alive and prevent the bulbs from shriveling. About the middle of [une it will be time to re-pot them; shake them out of the old soil, being careful to save all the roots that are alive, and transfer to pots two sizes smaller than those in which the plants were pre-viously flowered. They like a good, fibrous mixture to grow in one-half good sod broken up and one-half loam, with a fair allowance of well-rotted cow manure, charcoal and bone flour. The pots should be well drained, as one of the main points in the successful culture of these plants is to preserve the soil in a sweet condition. They will not require much water until they start to make a good growth, but a light syringing night and morning helps them to break away. Shade during the hottest part of the day, and pot on all the plants as they require it. They should be grown in a frame during the summer months, placing them near the glass and throwing the lights off morn-JOHN BARR. ings and evenings. Natick, Mass.

Wilmixorox, Dil..-The Clinton Floral Company advertised its ornamental iron vases in one issue of a local weekly and in two days had received thirty two And yet some people think that replies. advertising does not pay

YOUNG

ROSES

PLANTS

ALL STOCK SENT OUT IS FIRST-CLASS IN EVERY RESPECT.

| From 2½-inch Pots.                   | Per 100 | Per 1000 |
|--------------------------------------|---------|----------|
| From 2½-inch Pots. AMERICAN BEAUTIES |         |          |
| BRIDES                               |         |          |
| BRIDESMAID                           |         |          |
| METEOR                               | 3.00    |          |
| KAISERIN                             | 3.00    | 25.00    |
| PERLE                                | 3.00    | 25.00    |
|                                      |         |          |

TERMS CASH WITH ORDER.

J. A. BUDLONG, 37=39 Randolph Street, CHICAGO

CHICAGO. ILL.

40,000 FIRST QUALITY FORCING ROSES. READY FOR MEDIATE PLANTING. Fn.ly equal to those sent out the last sly years, first class and perfectly healthy in every respect. Only selected growth from flowering shoots used in propagating. READY FOR

WOOTTON METEOR PERLE BRIDESMAID Only selected growth from nowering shoots used in propagating.

LA FRANCE AMERICAN BEAUTY PRESIDENT CARNOT

Sinch pots, $8 00 per 100. 4-Inch pots, $12 00 per 100.

KAINERIN SUNSET BON SILENE MEMBET

GONTIER MME. HOSTE NIPHETOS BRIDE

BELLE SIEBRECHT. 3-Inch pots, $7.00 per 100. 4-Inch pots, $10.00 per 1000.

J. L. DILLON, Bloomsburg, Pa.

OWN ROOTS & DORMANT & & FIELD GROWN

IN COLD STORAGE IN CHICAGO.

No. 1, 2 to 4 leet, cut back to 2 leet Yellow Rambler (Aglaia) Hybrid Perpetuals, Mosses, Hardy Climbers and Madam Plantier

These plants are very strong and well shaped. Prices on application. Address

W. F. HEIKES, Manager,

CHICAGO, ILLS. 1308-1310 Unity Bldg., -

Rose

Fine Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle, Sunset and Meteor,

21;-inch Rose pots......$3.00 per 100. 3-inch pots, standard..... 5.00 per 100.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, FORT WAYNE, IND.

AMERICAN BEAUTY

Fine young plants, healthy and strong. 21<sub>2</sub>-inch pots, $8,00 per 100; $70,00 per 1000.

EDWIN LONSDALE.

Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, with order. PHILADELPHIA, PA. Money Order Office, Station H. Phila Cash with order.

FOR WESTERN GROWERS

Beauties, Brides, Maids, Meteors, Woottons and Perles, 212, 3 and 4-in. Strong, clean. and Perfect, 2½, 3 and 4-m. Strong, clean, healthy stock, cheap for cash, to clean up. If you want good stuff at prices to sun write us for prices at once. Address...

J. N. KIDD, Florist, St. Joseph, Mo.

YOUNG ROSES, STRONG STOCK.

5 000 MAIDS... 5 000 BRIDES... 10 0.0 METEORS... Also one second-hand No. 16 Hirchings Hot Water Boiler. Apply to

THE FLORAL EXCHANGE, 614 Chestnut Street, PHILA.

Now Ready!

The American Florist Company's ..

DIRECTORY Of Plorists, Nurmers of the United States and Canada, Price Two Dollars. Three Dollars... In Flexible Leather Binding, AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY 321 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, III.

NEW PINK FORCING ROSE

Winner of 6 certificates, medal and silver cup. $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100. A fine stock of young chrysanthemums and carnations. Soud for trade list describing above in detail.

H. WEBER & SONS. Oakland. Md.

H. WEBEK & SUNS, VORIGINA, III.

FROM 2 I-2 INCH POTS.

Strong, thrifty, well established plants. General price $4.00 per 100. Extra fine lot of Crimson Ramblers. . . . . .

Jackson & Perkins Co. NEWARK, NEW YORK.

ROSES..

2-in. per 100 3-in. per 100 $.. $5.00 Am. Beauties . .

Perle . . . . . . . $2.75 Bridesmaid ... 2.75 4.50

MAPLEWOOD CUT FLOWER and PLANT CO. PLEASANT HILL, MO.

Memorial Kose

(Rosa Wichuriana)

Strong field-grown plants, $50, $75 and $100 per 1000

SAM'L C. MOON, MORRISVILLE, Bucks Co., PA.

FORCING ROSES. Per 100

214-in. 314-in ...$2.50 $1.00 ....2.50 4.00 ....2.50 4.00 BRIDESWAID..... METEOR

White, Pink and Yellow Ramblers, same price, Mounvines $25.00; Alternantheras $18,00 per 1000.

THE NATIONAL PLANT CO., Dayton, O.

Do You Need Young Rose Stock

for planting, out of 3-in, pots? A dollar more on the bundred is nothing if you get better stock. Send like or $1.0 in stamps for samples of what you want to

GEO. A. KUHL, .... PEKIN, ILL.

Asparagus sprengerii Asparagus Plumosa From 2-inch pots & $1.00 per 100. If you want a large lot, write us for special price and samples. Asparagus Plumosa Strong 2-inch plants of $15 per 100. $150 per 100. Asparagus Plumosa Strong 2-inch plants of $15 per 100. $150 per 100. Robt. Craig & Son, Market and 49th Philadelphia. Streets, Philadelphia.

Chrysanthemums, 212-111.

Carnations, from soil.

Geraniums, 3-in.

All fine stocky

Cannas, 4-in.

Write for Quotations.

The Cottage Gardens, QUEENS, L. I.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS!

All the very best commercial varieties, viz.:

Marquis de Montmort, Lady Fitzwigram, Bergmann, Merry Monarch, Glory of Pacific, Robinson, Henderson, M. M. Johnson, Golden Trophy, D. Spaulding, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. Perrin, tvory White, Ivory Pink, M. Bonnaffon, Mayflower, Modesto, Jerome Jones, white, yellow and pink, Maud Dean, H. W. Rieman, Lottie Berry, Maud Adams, Emil Buettner Gretchen Buettner, Stock unexcelled and very large quantity of it ready, Let us book order for now or future delivery. 21, inch. $3.60 per 100. Cuttings, rooted, $2.00 per 100.

Marie Louise Violets, rooted runners, $10.00 per 100. . . .

POEHLMANN BROS.

MORTON GROVE, Cook Co., ILL.

3-INCH, $4.00 PER 100. BRANT & NOE, Forest Glen, Ills.

Convention It would be folly to attempt > selling surplus spring stock, but you can dispose of it now by ad-

The American Florist

NO DRUMMER LIKE IT 🥴

ose Plant

Per 1000 $45.00 25.00 25.00 25.00 Per 100

ROGERS PARK FLORAL CO.

CUT FLOWERS ROSE PLANTS.

51 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO

INCH POTS...*

American Beauties, Bride, Bridesmaid, Bon Silene, Caroline Testout, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, La France, Meteor, Morgan, Perle, Souvenir de Wootton, etc., etc.

Also Clothilde Soupert, Mossella and Clara Watson, suitable for immediate planting for summer blooming in extra fine stock from 3 and 4-inch pots.

JOHN N. MAY, Summit, New Jersey. =

Brides, Bridesmaids, Perle, Sunset, Niphetos, and new climbing Niphetos, 21-2 in. pots ready for a shift, $2.50 per 100. 'MUMS: 'Murdock, Ivory, Whilldin, Prass, Inter Ocean, Morel, John Shrimpton, Niveus, Mutual Friend, C. B. Whitnall, Bonnaffon, Robinson, Philadelphia, Dailledouze, Yellow Queen, etc., $2 per 100, 2 1-2 inch pots; Mrs. A. F. Wienold, 20c each, $1.50 per 12, $10 per 100. McDONALD & STEELE, Crawfordsville, Ind.

Yellow Sport of JEROME JONES.

It received the highest points and a Certificate of Merit at the Cleveland Chrysanthemum Show. It is in Yellow what Jerome Jones is amongst the White. The very best for late blooming. 2)<sub>2</sub>-in, pot plants, strong, $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100. Stock ready April 15th.

E. J. PADDOCK, 295 Erie St., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Smilax.

How shall I treat a bed of smilax which has been growing where it now is for about a year? Which is the most expediabout a year? Which is the most expeditions way of "stringing" smilax? We have found it a slow and tedious job. Please give prices at which it may be sold at a profit, and any other information about the various greens now in use will R. & E. be appreciated.

The days for 50 cents per string or even 25 cents at wholesale are past in most of the large cities. There is, however, always a demand for this pleasing green. It has often been a subject for cogitation in my mind which of the vines as a green would he selected if all the varieties now in use were introduced at the same time. Asparagus tenuissimus had only a brief career. The so-called smilax has outlived it, that is to say, so far as Philadelphia is concerned, for 1 have not seen a spray of the variety which was about at the height of its popularity ten or twelve years ago. A. plumosus is still used, and I believe, up to this time more than ever, though some of the larger growers are complaining that it does not sell as freely with them as it did a few years ago. That is accounted for because more florists are growing it now than there were at that time. Asparagus Sprengerii is in an experimental stage, with good prospects of its becoming popular and being used largely.

To return to smilax, whether it will pay to keep an old bed depends upon circumstances. Twelve or fifteen years ago I saw a solid bed of smilax in an establishment at Baltimore that had been then growing in the same spot for a number of years, and was apparently as good as ever. The bed received a good cleaning and an annual top dressing of well decayed stable manure, and that was all the attention it received. Whether it is advisable to leave in old plants depends upon the natural or artificial drainage, and the mechanical condition of the soil. At one establishment I was interested in, we could leave the plants in from year to year with the loss only of a small percentage. The soil there was composed largely of rotted rock. When operations were commenced in my present location it was found to be impossible to carry the old plants over without serious loss, so much so that after a few expensive experiments we considered it more satisfactory and much more profitable to make a planta-tion with young stock yearly. The soil tion with young stock yearly. here is a stiff, clay loam.

The applying of strings to smilax is a redious operation, but if a good system is adopted it is not nearly so formidable an undertaking as it appears to be, especially if it is done when the first evidence of the young growth is apparent. I do not believe in putting wires across the bed as I have seen them in some establishments. Overhead it is necessary and it should be put in position not lower than eight feet from the plants The wire will need a support, across the house, on which to rest at intervals of eight fect or so apart. These supports may be gas pipe three-eights of an inch in thickness, which makes a cheap and neat job, or whatever may be most convenient. I have often seen sash bars used. We find gray or drab shoe thread best for the vines to twine upon, as it is thin and fine.

When the number of plants is ascertained, score the same number of stakes, it is not necessary to spend much time in their preparation, as almost anything that will last one season will do. They must, however, be pointed at one end, one cut with a sharp knife, properly directed, being sufficient, and they should be sufficiently stout to remain firmly in the bed when once in position. In addition to the point, the stake should have a slit sufficiently distant from the opposite end so that the piece or chip will not pull out when the string is attached thereto and securely tied to the wire at the top. The stakes should be from eight inches to a foot long. The reason stakes of this length should be used is to prevent the string from rotting by too close contact with the damp soil. In our method of stringing we secure two boxes-soap boxes will do-and place them on each side of the bed. They should be high enough so that the plank when in position across the bed and on the boxes will be just high enough to escape touching the young growth. Two nimble fingered boys, interested in their work, can string a lot of smilax in a day, when everything is ready. The ball of thread should be put inside a 4 or 5-inch pot turned upside down and placed on the plank, carrying one end through the drainage aperture. One boy with stake in hand, the slit towards him and his thumb ready to press the thread holds the former firmly while the thread is placed in the slit and wound twice around the stake and in the slit, which makes it secure without a knot of any kind, and then presses the stake into the soil near to a plant and hands the string up to the other boy on the plank, who in turn cuts the string long enough to allow of tying easily on the wires above and drops it, the boy below eatching it and going through his part of the operation again, and so on.

At what time smilax should be planted depends upon when it is needed to eut. If planted too early I have seen the foliage very much disfigured by thrips. It is similar in its actions and depredations to the cabbage and turnip flies, which work havoe on some outdoor crops. When cooler weather comes in the fall it does not trouble the plants at all, but the leaves which it has been working on remain disfigured. We have found good results when planting thrifty stock from Binch pots in September and October, and in a temperature not lower than 55° at night. Some strings will be ready to cut early in December, and in order to make the most of the crop a new string should be put in position as soon after the old one is cut as possible. This will be found more troublesome than when the string was first applied. Oceasionally it is advisable to go through the vines and see to it that they are not rambling over upon their neighbors. to distance apart, I have planted them with good results at eight inches apart in rows six inches asunder. About the profit of the crop, many contingences require consideration at this point, but briefly it may be stated that three full crops at 20 cents a string will pay hand-

FLORA HILL canse there is nothing in significant wherever grown. It is fragrant. It is the lorgest bloom. It puts all others, in the shade. Nothing past or present to equal it. We have four thousand plants exclusively for propagating from; don't allow them to bloom. Send at once and get the best stock ever offerred. E.B. per 100; 80 M per 1000, 180 M per 1000, 180 M per 1000, and for the standard for the propagating from the propagating from the per thought of the per 100 M per 1000. 180 M per 1000, 180 M per 1000, 180 M per 1000.

E. G. HILL & CO., Richmond, Ind.

FIELD GROWN CARNATIONS.

All the best varieties ready in September

GEO. HANCOCK & SON, Grand Haven, Mich.

Please mention the American Florist

FINE PLANTS

VERBENAS

IN BUD AND BLOOM.

Many Fine Varieties added to Our Collection.

Best Mammoth .....per 100, $3.00; per 1000, $25.00 Ceneral Collection 2.50; 20.00

ROSES.

American Beauty, 3-inch pots ..... per 100, $10.00 Bridesmaid, Bride, Perle, Meteor, Bon Silene, Sunset, Watteville, Mermet. Price from 214 inch pots, $5.00 per 100: $40.00 per 1000. Ever-blooming and Polyantha, in bud and bloom from 32, 4 and 5-inch p ts, $10.00, $15.00 and $20.00 per 100

Hybrid Perpetual, in bud, from 5-inch pots, strong $25.00 p r 1 0.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

50 fine varieties from 234-inch pots. $3.00 and $4.00 per 100 send for list of varieties.

MISCELLANEOUS PLANTS.

| lteady for immediate sales. 100.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |   |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---|
| Anthemia Coronaria, from 21/2 Inch pots$3 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |   |
| 5 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |   |
| Alternanthera, sli leading variables 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |   |
| Ageratum, olue and white 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |   |
| Carnations, from 4-Inch pots, fine stock 12 (0)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | • |
| Coleus, leading sorts, 24-Inch pots 3.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |   |
| 5.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |   |
| Ceraniums, double and single, 4-inch pots 8 (0                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |   |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |   |
| " $\frac{2 \log 1}{100}$ " $\frac{2 \log 1}{100}$ " $\frac{2 \log 1}{100}$ " $\frac{4.00}{100}$ " $\frac{3.00}{100}$ " |   |
| In the sharphote to the control of t                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |   |
| " Ivy, fine variety, 4 " $.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |   |
| Heliotrope, from 3-lach pots 5.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |   |
| $2^{1}4$                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |   |
| Hydrangea Otaksa, 5 ln., bushy 25.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |   |
| Fucheige, double and single, 31/2-lach pots 8 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |   |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |   |
| Moonflower, 25e-inch pots4.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |   |
| 10 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |   |
| Pelargoniums, 25/e-Inch pots 6 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |   |
| Salvia Spiendens and Bedman, 214-16. pots 3 00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |   |
| Vinca Varlegata and Elegans, 4 Inch pets 10.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |   |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |   |
| Violets. Marie Louise, 2½-Inch pots, $25.00 per 1000: $3 D0 per 100                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |   |
| Pansies to bud and bloom $2.00 per 100; $15.00                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |   |
| per 1000.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |   |
| All the above is from stock in condition for imme-                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |   |
| dista salas                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |   |

ESTABLISHED CARNATIONS FROM SOIL.

| . A. Dana                     |       |          |
|-------------------------------|-------|----------|
| rs. McBurney                  | 5 (K) |          |
| m Scott                       | 2 50  | $20 00· |
| m Scott                       | 2 00  | 17.50    |
| zzie McCowan                  | 2 00  | 15.00    |
| ortia                         | 2.00  |          |
| New Trade List on application | D.    |          |

WOOD BROS., Fishkill, N. Y. When writing mention American Florist.

NEW WHITE PERPETUAL

BLOOMING CARNATION Anna H. Shaw

The Best "All Round" White Carnation for Cut Flowers. Recommendations: Wonderful bloomer, Lousual Vigor, Rapid Grower. Forms Strong Bloomer, Lousual Vigor, Rapid Grower. Forms Strong Bloomer, Plants in a Very Short Time. Perfectly Healthy, Handaome Foliage, Large Beautifully Formed Flowers on Long Stems. Exquisitely Fragrant, Never Burets, Bosoms Longer and Gives More Flowers than Any Other Variety Ever Offered. If you want a RELIABLE Carnation that can always be depended upon, give Anna H. Shaw a trial. Rooted tuttings $1 per doz; $8 per 100. Strong Plants. $15 per doz; $80 per 100. Send for Trade List and Catalogue of Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, Cact. Etc.

Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd.

Vectora (by-the-Sea), Cal.

SMILAN from 2-inch pots $2.00 per 100; $13.00 per 1000 HYDRANGEA Otaksa, from 3-inch pots $5.40 per 100, GERANH MS, from 2-in, pots $2.50 per 100; $20 per 100, "3-in, pots, $1.00 per 100; $5 per 100, "1-in, pots, $6.00 per 100, $50 per 1000. Cash with the order, Seed for samples, FRED, BOERNER, Cape May City, N. J.

1500 Vinca Major Variegata

from 2% in. pots, at $2.50 per 100. Cash with order. GLORGE BISCHOLL, 220 Chapin St., Ann Aabor, Mich...

F. DORNER & SONS CO. La Fayette, Ind.

Everybody is more pleased if you say "saw your ad, in the American Florist" when writing.

THE GREATEST AQUATIC NOVELTY OF THE CENTURY!

Victoria Trickeri

CAN be grown in the open air without artificial heat, under the same conditions as Nymphasa Devoniensis and Zanzibar-nsis, it grows to gigantic proportions when given ample room, but succeeds admirably in a tank of not more than six feet in diameter. We have also grown it as a pygmy in a tenineh pot, where it flowered beautifully, the leaves with turned-up edges and all the characteristics of a fully developed plant. Plant out any time in June. For best results get a large plant. Price, $5.00, $7.50 and $10.00 each, according to size to size.

We also have on hand fine plants of VICIORIA RANDI, $7.50 and $10.00 each.

Also an extensive collection of hardy and tender day and night blooming Nymphæas. Come and see our Water Garden at Riverton, N. J.

Henry A. Dreer, chestnut st. Philadelphia

WORTH MORE THAN A

PASSING NOTICE & &

SALABLE PLANTS IN LESS THAN A WEEK

TRUE BE-YOND A DOUBT THEY ARE

Breningsi var. John White var. Wm. Elliott var. Discolor Tal. Burbank O. F. Luxerand Med.

THE SIX BY MAIL FOR 40 CENTS

FOR WINTER FOLIAGE DISPLAYS, GRAND!

CLEAN, FRESH, QUICK, PROFITABLE.

PAMPAS GROVE NURSERIES.

GREENLAND P. O., FLA. 22222222222222222222

GERANIUM "MARS" 21/2-in. in bloom, $5.00 Geraniums, single scarlet, 4-inch in bloom.

Frank Hardy Chrysanthemums, 2½-in.
pots. . . . . per doz., $1.00.
BRIDESMAID ROSES, extra clean, 2½

inch pots.

BRIDE ROSES, 2½-inch pots.

Bonnaffon and livery Chrysanthemums,
2½-inch pots.

Henry Eichholz Franklin Co., WAYNESBORO, PA.

{{\coccocccccccccccccccc}}

VEGETABLE PLANTS.

CABBACE-II Succession Flat Dutch, Autuum King, Drumbierd, Savoy and other varieties, CELERY-White Plume, Golden Selt-Binnehing, Glunt Pascal, Golden Heart and other varieties TOMATO-Livingston's Stone, Paragon and other varieties All above plants field-grown, 15c per 100; 58, 50 per 10,000. If hy mail ad 10c per 100, Cash with order.

R. VINCENT, Jr., & SON, White Marsh, Md.

PLEASE mention the AMERICAN FLORIST every time you write to an advertiser.

aaaHERR'S PANSIESaaa

SEND FOR REASONS WHY THEY ARE THE BEST.

...SMILAX...

...SEED... ...PLANTS... Ready now at $1.50 per 14 oz. oz. ....PLAN 1 5... Ready now, 75c per 100; $5 per 1000. September to January; 75c per 100; $4 per 1000.

Sample plants for 10 cents.

Je 36 34

ALBERT M. HERR, Lancaster, Pa.

2000 Smilax

First-class 3-inch stock, $2.50 per 100; $20 per 1000.

THE E. HIPPARD CO.,

.....YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO. ¥cccccccccccccccccccc

BETTER THAN SMILAX.

Roses and carnations are a drug on the market. Smilax is scarce and in good demand. You are sure of selling all you can grow at 15 to 20 ceots. Devote a bench or house to Smilax; there is money in it. STRONG PLANTS out of 2-inch pots, ready for immediate planting, $1,25 per 100; $10.0 per 1000. Strictly eash with order.

SOUTHSIDE FLORAL CO., Springfield, III.

HARDY PINKS

2½-in. pots; Souv. de Sale, $3.50 per 100; Her Majesty, Gleo Valley, Laura Wilmer, Ger-trude, $3.00 per 100.

VIOLETS...

2½-in. pots; Admiral Avellon, Princess of Wales, $3.50 per 100; Lnxonne, California, Campbell, Swanley White, $3.00 per 100.

THE CONARD & JONES CO., -West Grove, Pa.

Vinca Major Variegata

1000 3-INCH POTS

Three to five leads, 18 to 24-inches long, 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100.

NATHAN SMITH & SON,

Florists' Stock for Bedding

Alternanthera, Coleus, Geraniums,
Pansies, Daisies, Verbenas, Fuchsias,
Salvia, etc., etc. Write for prices,
Florists when in Milwaukee are invited to look over our stock.

ARCHIE MIDDLEMASS, 1019 Forest Home Ave., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

CANNA BARGAINS. Dormant roots with two and more eyes. PURCHAS-ER'S SELECTION of Alphonse teur Crampbel, Florence Vaughan, J. D. Cabos and Chicago, $15 per 1000: $2.50 per 100. Burbank in 3-inch pots, $3 per 100. MIXED CANNAS, $10 per 1000; $2 per 100.

AMERICAN BULB COMPANY, United States Exolic Nurseries, SHORT HILLS, N. J. THADE LISTS ON APPLICATION.

ROEMER'S Superb Prize Pansies The finest strain of Pansies in the World. INTRODUCER AND GROWER OF ALL THE LEADING NOVELTIES. Highest Award Inter. Exhibition at Hemhurg, 18-7 Catalogue free on application. Fred. Roemer, Seed Grower, - QUEDLINBURG, GERMANY.

reerererererererer

FAXON'S "WHITE" PANSIES.

The best mixture in cultivation, flowers very large, thick and velvety; of superb colors and markings. The perfection of form and texture.

In Trade Packeta at $1.00 each. M. B. FAXON, Lock Box 1528.

1528. BOSTON, MASS. Correspondence solicited.

THE MORRIS FLORAL CO., Morris, III.

PANSIES
THE JENNINGS STRAIN.
THEY ARE GRAND.
Fine stocky plants in bud
and bloom, $10 and $2 per 100 by express; small plants.
The pansy seed, $1.00 per pkt. Aster seed, Semple's pink, $1.00 per oz. Cash with order.

E. B. JENNINGS,

SOUTHPORT, CONN. Lock Box 254. Crower of the Finest Pansies.

Special Sale!

1500 COLEUS mixed, 213-inch. 2000 GERANIUMS mixed 3 and 4-inch pots 20,000 PRIMROSES single, mixed. SMILAX, $9.00 per 1000......

CASIL PLEASE

JOS. H. CUNNINGHAM, DELAWARE, O.

Cleveland.

SLOW SALES ARE THE RULE. - STOCK SHOWS THE EFFECT OF HOT WEATHER. -GASS-ER'S CARNATIONS. - MEMORIAL DAY. DROUGTH IS IMMINENT.

The stores are beginning to feel the effects of approaching summer in the form of slackening business. A few weddings have enlivened demand, although none of them have been very elaborate affairs. Two innerals of very prominent citizens occurring upon the same day, made business very brisk for nearly every one for that day. Some very large arrangements were to be seen at both obsequies. Approaching weddings and commencements will possibly stimulate matters for a while, and then everything will be off for the summer.

Roses and carnations show the effects of hot weather and are very small and poor, although the writer saw at J. M. Gasser's lately some carnations that would compare very favorably with the stock of early spring. His white Davbreak and Eldorado were particularly good. Outcast for red was very fair, although not up to the Inbilee standard. Mr. Gasser thinks very highly of Outcast, blooming, as it does, much more freely than Jubilee.

Chas. Erhardt, lately of Prospect street, has moved down on Euclid avenue.

Memorial day trade was pretty much as usual, nearly all the business being done by florists near the cemeteries. The down town establishments, as a rule, hardly knew in a business way that May 30 had arrived.

Stock of all kinds planted out of doors is beginning to suffer by reason of lack of On the light, sandy soils more especially growth is very nearly at a A. standstill.

Providence, R. I.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club took place on the and Gardeners. Club took place on the evening of May 27. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation to Ex-president Farquhar Maerae of the gavel used by him during his term of office. The presentation speech was made by ex-President Canning. It was voted that at the next regular meeting, Friday, June 24, light refreshments should be served, the idea being that some attraction of this kind might increase the W. B. King attendance at the meeting. exhibited two seedling carnations.

Pillar-Catter

STOPS CATERPHEARS

will known prietred device ont kin with practical devices presents trees from the rax-els steeps are and all other ving mosts. A few cents a tree a few tecks and it to see receive at the per viril

Send for price list testi-module and sample

Fairmount Tree Protector Co. 31( N. 15th NL, Philadelphia.

The Harrisii Disease KRAFT'S PLANT

Can be prevented by immersing the bulbs for ten hours in a half solution of 99 per cent. A A

This has been conclusively proven by experiments at Lincoln Park, Chicago. A The Tonic also kills Hard Shelled Scale, Mealy Bug, and other insect pests without injury to the plant. A trial of a 25-cent bottle will convince you that a really remarkable

KRAFT PLANT TONIC CO., Rockford, III.

ITESE CROSS BRAND THE VERY BEST OF GARDEN &

if your dealer does not have it send direct to the manufacturers

BY WARREN STREET. THE GUTTA PERCHA & RUDDER MIG. CO. 96 Lake Street.

CHICAGO.

EXTENSION THE MODEL CARNATION SUPPORT

QUEENS, N. Y., Feb. 16, 97.
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y., Dear Sir;—
I have tested your latest model Carnation Support and am free to say that I consider it the best wire carnation
support that I have ever seen.
It is quickly and easily appiled, and I think will prove very durable, and you certainly deserve great credit
for the invention.
Very truly yours,
(*W. WARD.

FLATBUSH. BROOKLYN,
N. Y., Feb. 18, 97
MR THERIIN PARKER,
Dear Sir.—Your wire stake
Is certainly a gem. Without hesitating we indorse it as an up to-date carnation
support. Yours truly,
DAILLEDGUZE BROS.

W. HOBOKEN, N. J., Feb. 18, 97.
MR. THERON PARKER, Brooklyn, N. Y., Dear Sirttlyes me much pleasure to congratulate you upon your success in ketting up carnation supports. I think that those I have had from you are about as perfect as any-body will be able to unkethem. They certainly fill my bill for an ideal carnation support, a thing I have been looking for for a long time. Wishing you every success in the sale of them, I am Yours truly, E. Aswits, at discount on parly orders.

ice list and discount on uarly orders,

THERON PARKER, 22 Morten St. BROOKLYN, N. Y.

STEMS DUST EXTRAGT

ROTTOM PRICES.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE.

Chicago New York.

Florists! Seedsmen! Nurserymen!

Worked von increase your production and add to our bank account: Then buy BARDING'S "UP-ID-DAIL" GISFRALLIER HIPTIR. Guaranteed manlysus: trogen 3.15 per cent. Phosphoric Acid. 10.50 per cent. Futush 5 per cent. Special 30 day offer, $1.50 per 100-16, bag. Too lots even lower. Try trogen 345 per cent , Phosphori r cent | Potrodi 5 per cent | Specta ste per 100-16, long. Ton lots ever mple hag = CASH WITH ORDER

CIECO. IJ. HARDING.

KIECOM MMEHLIZEMM AND POLITHY MODE,

BINCHAMTON, N. Y.

Please mention the American Florist when writing to advertisers.

Mention American Florist

FIRST-CLASS GOODS and CORRECT PRICES

have forced us to the front and today we are the largest manufact-urers of.....

IRON RESERVOIR VASES

and Lawn Settees in America. . . . A 40-page entalogue for the asking.

McDonald Bros.

10B-114 Liberty $1.. COLUMBUS, O.

Mantion American Fintist,

Scollay

Sprinkler....

INDISPENSABLE J. A. Scollay, Maker, 74 Myrtle Ave. Brooklyn, N. Y.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Gen'l Western Agents, B4 Randolph St., CHICACO.

🛌 GEO. KELLER & SON,

MANUFACTURERS OF Flower Pots.

Before huylog write for prices. 361-363 Herndon Street, near Wrightwood Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

FLOWER POTS

ALL KINDS.

A SPECIALTY ANDARD POTS

List and SAMPLES FREE.

J. G. SWAHN'S SONS, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Standard 🖋 🧈 FLOWER

If your greenhouses are within 500 mlles of the Capitol, write us; we can save you money.

W. H. ERNEST Station M, N. E.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Made by

Good Bailroad Facilities
For shipping.
Special Attention Given to Mail Orders, and Special Sizes Made to Order.

KELLER BROS.
NORRISTOWN, PA.

Price Lists Furnished on Application.

"STANDARDS"

FULL SIZE AND WIDE BOTTOMS. BULB PANS AND AZALEA POTS.

DETROIT FLOWER POT M'F'Y, HARRY BALSLEY, DETROIT, MICH., Rep. 490 HOWARD ST.

STANDARD FLOWER POTS

Send for price list of Standard Flower Pots, Hanging Vases, Seed Pans and Cylinders for Cut Flowers Lawn Vases, 17x17-In., $1.00; 19x20-to., $1.50; Bases 12-In, high 50c. Address

HILFINGER BROS. POTTERY,
FORT EDWARD, N. Y.

AUGUST ROLKER & SONS. AGTS., 52 DEY STREET. NEW YORK CITY

Successful Growers are Wanted

To know that they can dispose of all their surplus stock by advertising in the American Florist. TRY IT NOW! .....tising in the American Florist.

representation of the second contract of the LARGE STOCK ~ ~ ALSO DIFACTURERS P

Wheeler-Stenzel Co.

Make your contracts for next season now. We can deliver to any part of the country and Save You Money......

***********

Greenhouse Glass

72 Sudbury St., BOSTON, MASS.

It's easy to use because the principle le right. A boy can operate it.
It's easy to put up because of it's extreme simplicity.
It's easy to buy because the price is reasonable.....

THE CHAMPION VENTILATING APPARATUS

Catalogue is free. A postal with your name and address secures it. Address

AMERICAN ROAD MACHINE CO.,

Kennett Square, Pa.

GREENHOUSE MATE

Cal. Red Cedar and Louisiana Cypress. BEST GRADES. PERFECT WORKMANSHIP.

A. DIETSCH & CO. SHEFFIELD AVE. CHICAGO. ILL.

SES Wind and Water Tight

ZINC JOINTS in glazing, Been in use by leading growers for the past ten years. Write for circulars.

J. M. GASSER, FLORIST,

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Standard rlower

OUR POTS ARE OF THE BEST QUALITY.

We ship all goods from Cincinnati, guaranteeing lowest treight rates and prompt delivery.

Write us before placing your orders elsewhere. .

CAMBRIDGE TILE MFG. CO., Covington, Ky.

NEW & SECOND-HAND MATERIAL,

purchased from Sheriff Receiver, and Assignee, sales at less than one-half prices. Pipe and Fitthins Hose, Florists Wire, Hot Water Heaters, Greenhouse Botters and Englines, Roos, Light Wrought from Pipe, Glass Sash, and thousands of other articles, for sale by

CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO. Largest Mail Order Depot for New and Second-Hand Material in the World.

W. 35TH & IRON STS., CHICACO. Write for our free illustrated catalogues

FOR SALE CHEAP.

GLASS for Greenhouses, Conservatories, Hot-beds, etc. Also Hotbed Sashes and Mats. Paints, Oils, etc. THE RED GLASS & PAINT CO., 466 W. Broadway, NEW YORK.

Cincinnati.

EXCELLENT BUSINESS MARKS THE FIRST WEEK OF THE MONTH OF THE SWEET GIRL GRADUATE.

Business has been much more satisfactory during the past week, than has been the case for some time. Roses, especially, were in good demand and choice stock sold out each day. The supply of carnations has been heavy, but there is no surplus. Sweet peas are offered in large quantities, average prices ruling, 25 cents per 100 being the current rate. Light colors are preferred. Our wholesale houses report a fair shipping trade. Com-mencements and June weddings are now in order and we expect to see the closing month of the season a good one all along H. SCHWARZ. the line.

ALVIN, TEXAS.-Hundreds of hands have been employed for two weeks past picking and packing Cape jasmine buds for shipment north. Although the crop was large it did not equal the demand.

LAKE GENEVA, Wis.-Herman Fisher, of the Lake Geneva Floral Company, has recently had some very fine displays in Hammersley's windows. Notable among them was a large flag wrought principally with carnations.

ARE THE BEST

For Heating Greenhouses, Conservatories and Dwellings.

Our boilers consume all gases from the fuel, therefore making it the most desirable boiler for greenhouse heating on the mar-

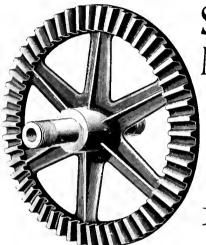

Send to day for Catalogue and Price List,

Boiler Works,

Write for Estimates.

Standard Ventilating Machine.... HAS POSITIVLLY NO EQUAL FOR

STRENGTH, DURABILITY

···AND NEATNESS.*

Guaranteed for 10 years. Has a solid wheel and shaft east in one (malleable iron). No slipping on Line Shaft as the case with all others. Catalogue

Hippard,

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

Steam and Hot Water Heating

HENRY W. GIBBONS

134, 136, 138 Liberty Street, NEW YORK, N. Y.

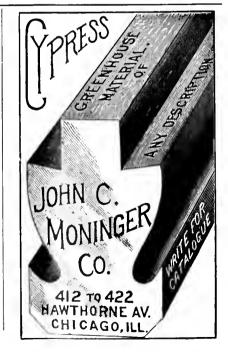

CATALOCUES AND ESTIMATES FREE.

EXPERT ADVICE FURNISHED.

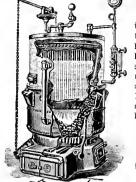

e for potty Superior in every was Mas-Mastica Clazing Machines were est Award of S.A.F. at Pittsburgh Ad-

F. O. PIERCE CO., 170 Fulton St., NEW YORK.

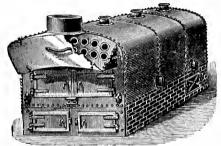

is the only boiler that will keep a steady heat in a greenhouse all night without attention. No sitting up all night to keep a good fire-æ.

Further information on application.

GORTON & LIDGERWOOD CO.
96 Liberty Street, NFW YORK.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO. Greenhouse * Boiler, 29 to 59 Erie St., CHICAGO.

Boilers made of the best of material, shell, firebox sheets and heads of steel, water space all around (front, sides and back). Write for information.

You can not get a GOOD THING for nothing. But the price of this apparatus is next to nothing. Send for price and description to

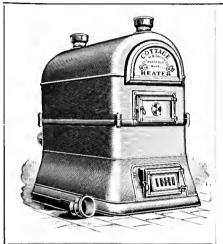

J. D. CARMODY, Evansville, Ind.

Clear Cypress Greenhouse Material.

This with us means the best growth of Cypress Lumber and the best grade of that growth; and from this grade all the sap—bright sap, which only experts can detect—as well as stained sap, knots and other defects cut out. Others do not equal our quality if they do beat our prices. It is not hard to see the reason: You can not buy gold dollars at fifty cents each. Experienced growers know that the best is not too good and cheapest in the long run.

Write for Circulars or Estimates.

Lockland Lumber Co., Lockland, o.

SALESROOMS:

133 Centre Street, - NEW YORK CITY. 510 Arch Street, - PHILADELPHIA.

COTTAGE BOILER

WESTERN AGENTS:
WESTERN BRASS MFG. CO.
ST. LOUIS, MO.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS:
HOLBROOK, MERRILL & STETSON
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

EUROPEAN AGENT:
AUG. EGGERS, BREMEN.

THE H. B. SMITH CO., Westfield, Mass.

Water

For Greenhouses, Gardens and Lawns in liberal quantities, every hour of the server, whether the wind server, whether the wind server, whether the wind server.

Improved Rider Hot Air Pump Improved Ericsson Hot Air Pump

Can be run by any ignorant boy without danger. Explosion impossible. Prices greatly reduced. In use in every part of the world. Send for Catalogue A 3.

RIDER-ERICSSON ENGINE CO.

22 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK. 86 Lake St., CHICAGO.
191-193 High St., BOSTON. 29-31 N. 7th St., PHILADELPHIA.
684 Craig St., MONTREAL, P. Q.

G. M. KENDALL

GREENHOUSE CONTRACTOR, STEAM AND HOT WATER ENGINEER * * * * *

The Largest Builder

Of Gucumber Houses in the World

GENERAL OFFICE AND WORKS: LEOMINSTER, MASS.

Plans and estimates furnished for all kinds of Houses. "N.B." Will accept in payment—Part Cash, Balance on Mortgage. A large stock of Greenhouse Equipment constantly on hand.....

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | o Advertisers.                                         |            |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| Advertising Rates 15 Auen J h American Bulb Co 15                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Lucas J & Co                                           | Ġ.         |
| Auen J b                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Lyon Herticole18                                       | 51         |
| American Road Mar.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Manufacturers Rub-                                     | 5-0        |
| y chine ( Amurican RoseCo B. Amuling E C Bartlett Geo S Bartlett Co Ba | Sei her Co 3                                           | 5351   |
| Bartlett Geo S                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Maplewood Cut Flo Colls                                | 7          |
| Basaett & Washburd.laBayersdorfer H & Co. la                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | SO May Jno N                                           | Э.51   |
| Berkert Theo li                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | McCarthy & Co 1349 13                                  | 4          |
| Blare A & Co 13                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 57 McDonald Bros 13                                    | 12         |
| Bobbink L C laBoerner Fred la                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 50 McDonald & Steele 13                                | 411511 |
| Boston Letter Co 13                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 333 Middlemass Archie134                               | 6149   |
| Brunton F & Co                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 52 Moninger J C Co 13                                  | 64         |
| Burbee W Atlee & + 0 lo                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Moon Wm H Co13                                         | 51         |
| Cambridge Tile Mfg 15                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Morris Floral Co 13Nat I Flo Board Tradel3         | 5151   |
| Chicago Wrecking Co 13                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | National Plant to13                                    | 7          |
| Clucas & Boddingtonla                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 351 N Y Cut Flower Co13                                | 41         |
| Control tohn & Son 15                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 93 Nickel Plate R R13C3 Paddock E J13              | 5155   |
| Cottage Gardens 13                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Carpas Grove Nur. 13                                   | 61         |
| Critchell s Son B Plo                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 57 Peacock W P                                         |            |
| Crowl Fern Co 15Canalasham J. H 15                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | SI Pierce F O Co13                                     | 41)164 |
| Detroit Flo w Pot Mfgl                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Poehiman Bros 13                                       | 30         |
| Diffon J I                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 58 Quaker City Mo'b WEEL                               | 1          |
| DornerFred & Sons ColoDreer H A 1557-13                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | *I Raynor J 1                                          | 1,         |
| Elchho'z Henryl                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 361 Reed Glass & Paint Cell 361 Regan Printing Housell | 6351   |
| Ellia & Pollworth 1.50 13                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | deinberg Bros13                                        | 1          |
